SHOW WOOD HELD TRACTION SHARES

Thompson Threatens Immediate Charges Against Service Commissioner.

ACCUSES HIM OF EVASION

Stock in Bronx Line Turned Over to Third Avenue Railroad Officials.

SEEK MORE McCALL DEALS

Bankers Trust Co. Ordered to Produce Books on Which Accountants Were Stopped.

At a lively session of the Thompson Legislative Committee yesterday, in which Senator Thompson, the Chairman, threatened to bring charges against Public Service Commissioner Robert C. Wood immediately if he did not stop evading questions, it was brought out that Mr. Wood held stock in three corporations, two of which had dealings with railroads, both before and after he went on the commission.

Mr. Wood was put through a severe examination. His first admission was that he held $5,000 worth of stock of the American Sanitary Supply Company, a concern which put slot machines containing towels and soap into railroad stations and cafés, and that he sold this stock for $1 to John A. Maher, brother of the Assistant General Manager of the Third Avenue Railway Company, on June 12, 1914. Mr. Wood became Public Service Commissioner on June 1 of that year.

He also testified that he owned 2,000 shares of stock of the New York City Interborough Company, a Bronx street car line, which was sold to the Third Avenue Railroad Company. He said he sold his stock to F. W. Whitridge, President, and Edward A. Maher, Jr., the Assistant General Manager of the Third Avenue Company, for $19 a share. His other holding of stock was in the Northwestern Construction Company, of which Mr. Wood was President for fifteen years. This company did general contracting work, mostly grading and building private houses. He severed his connection with this company the latter part of May, 1914.

Will Get McCall Books Today.

Although the session was turbulent throughout, the climax came late in the evening when Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers Trust Company, was called to the stand to tell why he refused to allow expert accountants of the committee to examine the books of the trust company in an effort to trace the stock transactions of Edward E. McCall, Chairman of the Public Service Commission, and those of his nephew, James C. McCall. The accountants worked on the books for two days, and then were told that they could go no further. The committee expects to get more information about the McCall account before Mr. McCall appears before the Governor next Tuesday to answer the charged filed against him.

President Prosser said he did not know that a subpoena had been issued for the books.

"I think you are trying to stall this investigation," said Senator Thompson, "and I don't propose to allow you to do it. We want those books tomorrow morning. Your attitude is in contempt of this committee."

The witness promised to produce the books when the committee meets this morning.

Mr. Wood's ownership of stock in the American Sanitary Supply Company was taken up as soon as he appeared on the stand. He said that just prior to his appointment on the commission he owned fifty shares of preferred and fifty of common stock in the concern. The common stock, he said, was given to him as a bonus. The Commissioner said he hastened to sell this stock when he was appointed, because he knew it would be unlawful for him to own the shares if the company should deal with railroads. He said the stock at the time he sold it was valueless and the company has now gone out of business.

All in Third Avenue Railroad.

John A. Maher was President of the concern. His brother, Edward A. Maher, Jr., is Assistant General Manager of the Third Avenue Railway Company, and Edward A. Maher, Sr., is Vice President and General Manager of the transit line. It was the Third Avenue Company against which an action was recently started by the Commission because it had failed to obey orders for the repair of tracks.

Mr. Wood started by admitting he was Vice President and General Manager of the American Sanitary Supply Company. J. Frank Smith, of counsel to the committee asked what its business was.

"We made penny and nickel slot machines for towels. The penny machines went to cafes and such places."

"Why don't you say they were meant for railroad stations," broke in Chairman Thompson.

"Those were the nickel machines, not the penny ones," replied Mr. Wood. I was coming to that. The company tried to get contracts with railroads, but didn't succeed."

Mr. Wood said he entered the company in 1913 and when he was appointed to the commission he sold the stock for "a couple of dollars." Later, when a bill of sale was put in evidence showing that the stock was sold for only $1, Mr. Wood said he believed that was the amount he paid.

How much did this sanitary stock cost you originally?" he was asked.

"About $5,000," was the reply.

"And you sold it for $1?"

"Yes, it was worthless and I wanted to get rid of it."

The bill of sale dated June 12, 1914, read:

My Dear Mr. Wood: Inclosed please find one dollar ($1) in payment for the shares of American Sanitary Supply Company stock turned over to me on Wednesday last.

Very truly yours, JOHN A. MAHER.

Hints at a String to Sale.

"You disposed of your stock to the Mahers about like McCall disposed of his to his wife!" suggested Chairman Thompson.

"I don't know anything about the McCall stock," was the reply. "The

Impracticable to Send Army, Says Japan's Foreign Minister

This message from Baron Ishii, the Japanese Foreign Minister, was given to THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday by the Japanese Consul here:

Japanese Consulate, 60 Wall Street, New York:

TOKIO, Nov. 26, 1915.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has cabled me concerning an interview with the correspondent of the Petit Parisien.

That interview has been incorrectly reported. What I said was to this effect:

"Were Japan to send an army to Europe, it should be a large and powerful one. But the execution of such a military expedition is outside the range of practicability owing to many insurmountable obstacles in the way."

KITCHENER IN ROME INTERVIEWS PREMIER

Also Confers With Other Cabinet Ministers and Starts for Front to Meet the King.

ROME, Nov. 26.—Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, British Secretary for War, arrived here today from Naples. He had an hour's interview with Premier Salandra and later conferred with Baron Sonnino, Secretary of Foreign Affairs.

Earl Kitchener took luncheon at the British Embassy the Italian Ministers of War and Colonies being present.

During the afternoon he saw General Porro, Under Chief of the General Staff.

Late today the Field Marshal left for General Headquarters of the Italian Army to meet the King.

RUMANIA DECIDES TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

Refuses to Allow Germany and Austria to Send Warships Down the Danube.

ZURICH, Switzerland, Nov. 26.—Dispatches from Bucharest, Rumania, to Budapest papers, state that the Rumanian Council of Ministers has decided, since the Unionist Federation has threatened to make a demonstration and interrupt the speech from the throne, to open Parliament simply with a royal message which Premier Bratiano will read.

The message will declare, it is said, that the foreign political situation makes it the duty of Rumania to maintain neutrality to such limits as the vital interests of the country will permit.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 27.—It is stated that the Rumanian Government has refused a request of the Austrian and German Governments for permission for their warships to proceed along the Danube River in Rumania toward Galatz and the Black Sea.

It is supposed here that the request was due to desire on the part of the Teutonic allies to menace from Galatz the Russian concentration in Southern Bessarabia.

FRENCH RALLY TO AID THE 'VICTORY LOAN'

Heavy Subscriptions Filed but Government Withholds the Total.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The growing success of the "victory loan" is indicated by dispatches received by the Ministry of Finance from all parts of France.

Throughout the day the banks in the provines and the Post Offices were crowded with subscribers, while in Paris there was no diminution of the eagerness of the public to participate.

Subscriptions have been received from Switzerland, and it is announced that demands from other neutral countries, especially from America, have been filled.

Many participants are paying for their shares with gold, thus fulfilling a double patriotic duty.

While Government officials express optimism regarding the loan, no official figures of the total subscriptions are yet available. Some estimates, which have been made, are declared to be unauthorized and erroneous.

M. Ribot, Minister of Finance, introduced in the Chamber of Deputies today a bill appropriating 8,172,000,000 francs, ($1,634,400,000,) for the first quarter of 1916. In a memorandum attached to the bill M. Ribot says:

"The financial situation has nothing disquieting in it when it is considered that we have met all demands, heavy as they have been, in sixteen months of war, without imposing new burdens of taxation and without affecting our credit. The Bank of France for the first time has just opened subscriptions for a loan which, with the national defense bonds, will assure resources for the ensuing months.

"We can contemplate the future with perfect confidence, assured as we are of the unshakable will of the country to spare no effort, no sacrifice, to obtain final victory."

KAISER'S COPPER ROOF TAKEN FOR MUNITIONS

BASLE, Switzerland, Nov. 26, (via Paris.)—The copper roof is being taken from the imperial castle at Donaueschingen, Germany, and will be used in the manufacture of munitions of war. This roof weighs many tons.

This is not the first time that metal has been requisitioned from an imperial residence. The Emperor's palace in Berlin was visited the latter part of September by the commission having in charge the seizure of metal for Government use, and a list of the metals at the Court was demanded. Emperor William ordered that all metals not in actual necessary use be seized. It was reported recently that the huge copper roofs of the cathedral at Bremen were being dismantled for military use.

FORD AIDS PEACE MOVE BY WOMEN

Washington Meeting Adopts as Slogan His "Out of Trenches by Christmas."

WORKS FOR PEACE VOYAGE

Declares He Has Assurances Belligerent Powers Will Not Oppose Neutral Conference.

WOMEN VISIT PRESIDENT

Encouraged When Told He Will Move for Peace "at the Suitable Time."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Henry Ford of Detroit, who is in Washington to promote his project for sending a peace ship to Europe, made the first public speech of his life here today; also, he made it known that he had received positive assurances from "the principal powers and more than half on each side of the war" that the European belligerents would have no objection to the holding of a peace conference of delegates from the neutral powers.

Mr. Ford's speech was very short. He was called on toward the end of a large mass meeting of Washington women who are appealing for peace, after eloquent speeches had been made by Madame Rosika Schwimmer of Hungary and Mrs. Ethel Snowden of England.

Mr. Ford said that he never had made a speech and that this was the first time he ever had faced a public audience.

"I simply want to ask you," he went on, "to remember the slogan, 'Out of the trenches before Christmas, never to go back,' and I thank you for your attention."

That was all he said. The meeting cheered the speech vigorously and Mrs. Louis F. Post, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Labor, who was President, repeated the slogan in a dramatic manner as the cheers continued.

Mr. Ford said that the assurances he had received that the Governments of Europe would have no objection to the proposed peace conference at The Hague rested on absolutely [illegible] in several forms. He asked to be excused from making them public, giving as a reason that if made public they would become the "plaything of diplomacy" and that denials would be made in one direction and another which would soon throw the advantage of the situation into confusion. Some of these assurances, he said, were received immediately after the Woman's Peace Congress at The Hague, some at different times later, and there had been corroborations in some cases, down to recent weeks. He hastened to explain that none of the representations had come to him by cable, but mainly in letters, and were documentary and substantial.

Mr. Ford's activities throughout the day were characteristic. He sought out men who, he was persuaded, were in sympathy with peace, kept the wires buzzing with telegrams, attended the women's peace mass meeting, and held several conferences at his hotel in the interest of his project of a peace ship.

A telegram was sent to W. J. Bryan asking him to join the peace party on the Oscar II., but up to a late hour tonight no reply had been received. Mr. Ford said that some months ago he proposed to Mr. Bryan to go to Europe on a peace mission, and that Mr. Bryan gave his assent.

Calls to See Justice Hughes.

In the afternoon Mr. Ford called on Justice Charles E. Hughes, of the United States Superior Court, and conferred with him in the interest of the peace movement. After the visit Mr. Ford said he had had a most encouraging interview and felt more than ever hopeful of success because of it.

Some uncertainty was introduced into the arrangement for the sailing of the Oscar II. from New York scheduled for Dec. 5. This was due to a telegram from Governor McCreary of Kentucky, accepting conditionally the invitation to join the peace expedition on the Oscar II., with the explanation that he must remain in Kentucky until Dec. 7, to be present at the inauguration of Governer-elect A. O. Stanley, Governor McCreary said if the ship sailed Dec. 8 he would go.

It was announced by Lewis E. Lockner of Chicago, Secretary of the National Peace Society, that Mr. Ford had telegraphed to the Presidents of all the colleges and universities in the United States asking them in each case to call together the student body of the institution and ask them to elect from their number the student, man or woman, who had most distinctly identified himself or herself with the peace movement, and that the person so selected should be permitted to go to Europe as the delegate of the college or university on the Oscar II.

It was formally announced that Mr. Ford would establish in Washington a bureau to conduct a campaign against preparedness and that it would be in charge of Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The New York Evening Post.

Mr. Ford had a surprise tonight when he was served with a summons to appear before a local Justice of the Peace as a defendant in a case involving a dispute affecting his former agents here. The suit was for a small amount.

Action by Mass Meeting.

The purpose of the peace mass meeting was to uphold the hands of the delegates from the Woman's Peace Congress at The Hague who were to meet President Wilson and lay before him an appeal to name a delegate from the United States to the proposed peace conference to be held at The Hague with delegates from the neutral countries. On motion of Mrs. George Rublee, wife or a member of the Federal Trade Commission, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The envoys sent by the International Congress of Women to The Hague ascertained from the Governments of the belligerent nations of Europe that they would have no objections to the calling of

Turks Make Stand 10 Miles from Bagdad; British Reoccupy Ctesiphon Unopposed

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Turkish troops resisting the British advance in Mesopotamia are falling back, according to an official announcement tonight, reporting a Turkish retirement on Dialah, ten miles from Bagdad. It reads as follows:

"A telegram from General Sir John Eccles Nixon, Commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia, under date of the 25th, reports that General Townshend's troops were in possession of the battlefield, while the Turks were reported to be retiring on Dialah, ten miles above Ctesiphon and the same distance from Bagdad. General Townshend was engaged in clearing the field of wounded and prisoners.

"At first it was stated that 800 prisoners had been taken. It now appears that no less than 1,300 have been marched back to Lajj.

"Our wounded are reported to number 2,500, of whom 1,800 were leaving that day by steamer for Basra (Bussorah). The number of killed has not yet been reported.

"General Nixon praises the excellent handling of the troops by General Townshend and the splendid spirit shown by them after their severe losses and hardships from want of water and food."

DELHI, Nov. 26, (via London, Saturday, Nov. 27.)—An official dispatch received here says that General Nixon's British forces, having secured a water supply, reoccupied Ctesiphon on the afternoon of Nov. 24 without opposition. Besides prisoners, the British captured a large quantity of arms and ammunition.

British aviators, the report adds, say that the Turks are apparently preparing fresh positions at Dialah.

AMERICAN SOLDIER KILLED BY MEXICANS

After Routing Villa Band Our Troops Engage Obregon's Men by Mistake.

20 SNIPERS REPORTED DEAD

Rebels Evacuate Nogales, Sonora, Which Is Now Occupied by the Carranza Forces.

NOGALES, Ariz., Nov. 26.—Carrying out threats that they would fight Americans before they left the border, Villa snipers posted in Nogales, Sonora, after Francisco Villa had evacuated the town, opened fire today on soldiers of the Twelfth United States Infantry, posted at the border.

The Americans, who had endured taunts of cowardice for a week, returned the fire. More than twenty Mexicans were killed. The Americans had three wounded, one of whom died tonight.

The American casualties were suffered in a brush with Carranza cavalry, who were mistaken for Villa troops as they rushed over a hill to enter the town. In the exchange of shots that followed three Carranza soldiers were shot. One of them, a courier sent to apprise Colonel W. H. Sage, the American officer on the line, that the Carranza forces had captured the Mexican town just across the border, was only slightly wounded.

The snipers were silenced after firing had continued about ten minutes. There followed a period of quiet lasting an hour. Then [illegible] cloned at Titcomb Hill, discovered what appeared to be Villa cavalrymen trying to gain a position on a hill opposite on the Mexican side. Firing promptly began, and while machine guns were being sent to the aid of the American riflemen a brisk fire was exchanged early in the engagement, and three Americans were hit. Later it became known that the Mexicans were Carranza cavalry, under Colonel Lazaro Cardenas, forming the advance guard of the advancing Carranza troops. General Obregon and the American officers later exchanged apologies and regrets.

Stephen Littles of Fairmont, N. C., one of the three soldiers wounded in to-day's battle, died tonight. He was shot through the head.

The Wounded.

The wounded are:

CATES, HERBERT L., 25, shot twice in abdomen and hips; recovery doubtful. Home, Swepsoneville, N. C. Second enlistment.

SAUPE, ARTHUR L., 19, shot right foot. Home, Vernon. Ind.

The Villa troops who participated in today's outbreak were ordered off an overloaded troop trains which started southward early today. They returned to Nogales and continued the debauch started the night before. The return of the soldiers was marked by the flight from the Mexican town of peaceful residents, many of whom crossed the border into the United States.

Five troops of the Tenth Cavalry arrived here shortly after Nogales had been taken by Obregon and the firing across the border stopped. They had ridden sixty-two miles.

Brig. Gen. George Bell, commanding the Provisional Brigade made up of the Seventh and Twentieth Regiments of Infantry, telegraphed that 1,700 men had been entrained at Douglas at 4 P. M. today, and would arrive before daylight tomorrow. Two batteries of the Sixth Field Artillery arrived today from Douglas.

500 MARINES TO WEST COAST.

Two Companies at San Diego to Join the Expedition.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 26.—Two companies of marines from the Fourth Regiment, stationed here, have been ordered to ship on the San Diego, en route from San Francisco for Topolobampo, Mexico. The addition of the two companies will bring the total number of marines on board the San Diego up to about 500 men. No further anti-foreign outrages have been reported from the Sinaloa coast.

The equipment to be sent south in the San Diego includes a field hospital, artillery, machine guns, and one automobile truck. The expedition will leave here early tomorrow.

MORE TROOPS TO THE SCENE.

Washington to Protect Border from Attacks by Villa Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—An ugly attitude on the part of Villista troops in the States of Sonora and Sinaloa has developed anew the concern of the Administration and resulted in the ordering of more American Army forces to the affected portions of the border.

One of the reports from Gen. Funston today explained not only that there had been skirmishes, but that Villistas had vilely insulted and nagged American officials at Douglas.

Another dispatch from General Funston read as follows:

"Since three combats reported in my message number 821, Captain Valentine reports two more as follows: Yesterday afternoon patrol Tenth Cavalry, two miles west of Monument 118, attacked by sixty Mexicans when charged to boundary fence, but driven back with three casualties. Patrol, while retiring after dark, fired upon again. Today outpost at same place fired on by forty Mexicans at 500 yards, a few charging to boundary fence. Known Mexican casualties two. A company of Twelfth Infantry has gone to scene."

AVIATOR LANDS HERE IN 600-MILE FLIGHT

Carlstrom, Starting in Toronto, Reaches Palisades After 400 Minutes Actually in Air.

USED MOTOR OF NEW TYPE

Aero Club President Praises the Achievement and Recommends Flier for Medal of Honor.

Victor Carlstrom, the Swedish aviator, completed yesterday a flight of 600 miles, from Toronto to this city, in six hours and forty minutes, which is one of the fastest distance flights known. The distance from Toronto to New York in a direct line is 617 miles. But it was estimated that Mr. Carlstrom covered 83 miles in addition owing to the fact that he was blown out of his course by the high wind.

Leaving Toronto at 9:48 o'clock Wednesday morning, he landed at Binghamton at 1:31 o'clock in the afternoon. Starting yesterday from Binghamton at 2:10 o'clock in the afternoon, he flew over New York City and landed on the Palisades, near Fort Lee, N. J., at 5:07 o'clock. His landing was perhaps the most remarkable part of the flight. He was in darkness, and was forced to pick out, by its indistinct outlines, a vacant field in which to descend. The machine came down at the rate of forty miles an hour, without any damage.

Mr. Carlstrom, who is a young, fair-haired man, told in excellent manner, related the story of his flight to a reporter [illegible] night at the Aero Club of America, 297 Madison Avenue.

"I intended to make the whole distance in one flight," he said, "and I would have done it if I had not become dizzy not long before I reached Binghamton. There was a strong, gusty wind blowing, and the machine rocked a great deal, and in addition to that I had been having some trouble with my stomach, so I had to come down. I was then about 5,000 feet up, and it is not a very healthy thing to get dizzy when you are up that far," he observed, smiling dryly.

"The people of Binghamton seemed surprised when I dropped out of the sky," he went on, "but they afforded me every help I needed and took care of the machine overnight. They seemed most astonished that I carried a suitcase and was able to get out of my flying clothes into an ordinary street costume. They seemed to think it queer that an aviator should carry his wardrobe with him.

"When I swung toward Binghamton from Toronto, I guided myself by the compass and kept my eye on the chart, until I picked up the tracks of the Lackawanna Railroad, which I followed thereafter, and so did not have to watch my compass.

"In the same way I followed the Erie Railroad soon after I left Binghamton today and came down the Hudson. The wind was very strong, and I tried flying at about 7,000 feet for a short time, but it was much worse there, and I had to come down to 5,000. As I neared New York it was almost dark and quite hazy. I could only see one bank of the Hudson, and I wasn't any too sure of that. However, I swung over the city and went west on Forty-second Street, across the Forty-second Street ferry. On reaching the Jersey shore I thought I would find a place to land without much trouble, but I had to circle about for some minutes before I located the field where I landed. Of course I could not know that the field was pretty soft, and when I landed I made the dirt fly. I guess the machine will have to be dug out."

The machine which Mr. Carlstrom flew is an R-2 military tractor Curtiss biplane, of the type now being supplied to the Allies. Instead of carrying an observer, as is done in war practice, he carried 146 gallons of gasoline, of which a quantity was unused in the flight.

In addition to the aviator, who weighed about 160 pounds, the aeroplane carried about 960 pounds dead weight when the flight was begun. The machine was built to carry 1,400 pounds in all, and to make a speed of ninety miles an hour with such a load.

The purpose of the flight was to test the new 160 horse power steel motor, the V-X type, which Glenn H. Curtiss has just perfected. In this motor the new American steel is used, the invention of which was described exclusively in THE TIMES on Tuesday. This steel, or similar steel, was formerly supplied by the Krupp Works at Essen, and after the war began American motor manufacturers were severely handicapped by lack of it, but experts in American steel mills eventually succeeded in turning out as good, if not a better, product.

According to Mr. Carlstrom, the motor did not "miss" during the entire flight, and he was never in danger of "engine trouble" at any time. Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club, said last night that the flight was a splendid performance.

"It was the best this year," Mr. Hawley said, "and was exceptional in that Mr. Carlstrom was forced to buck a strong wind the greater part of the way. I have recommended him for the Aviation Medal of America, which is soon to be awarded for 1915 by the Governors of the Aero Club. The medal is given for the best cross-country flight each year."

FRENCH IN SERBIA CAPTURE A TOWN AND DROP 50 BOMBS ON STRUMITZA; SERBS DRIVEN FROM KOSSOVO PLAIN

Allied Strategy Board to Pass On War Plans; Will Refer Its Decision to Higher Council

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Plans for the centralization of the conduct of the war by the Allies have crystallized into the following shape:

There is to be an allied Board of Strategy, composed of Generals, tacticians, and other military and naval experts from the four great powers, which will sit permanently in Paris, to discuss only those plans suggested by the individual Governments, through their own War Offices and General Staffs, and approved by the latter bodies.

Thus the new council will have critical or deliberate rather than initiative force as regards new propositions, but will arrange full plans for the execution of all propositions which it approves. These it will submit, with its plans, to a higher council, which will not be permanent, for final decision.

The latter council will probably also sit in Paris, and be composed of representatives from each Quadruple Entente Cabinet.

This suggestion emanates from a French source, and is reported to have met with a favorable reception in England and is likely to prove equally acceptable to Russia and Italy.

AUSTRIANS CHECK ITALIAN ADVANCE

Still Hold Gorizia by Means of Counterattacks on Heights Above the City.

HOT FIGHT ON THE CARSO

King Victor's Men Lose Position on San Michele, but Retake and Hold It.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Reports from the Italian front today indicate that while the Austrians opposing the Italian offensive on the Isonzo are unable to get assistance, they are counterattacking with terrific fury, and have thus far prevented the Italians from capturing Gorizia, which has been hard pressed [illegible]. Nevertheless, the Italian attacks continue, with considerable success at some points.

The following official communication was issued today in Rome:

In the Valley of the Concei on the evening of the 24th the enemy attacked our positions on Mount Vies, northwest of the Bezzecca basin. This attack, which was preceded by an intense artillery preparation, was repulsed.

On the heights northwest of Gorizia the action continued yesterday. Stubborn counter attacks, renewed several times, failed to prevent our troops from consolidating the positions they had reached and gradually extending them.

On the Carso front yesterday the struggles was acentuated along the spur which runs down from the northern slope of Monte San Michele toward the Isonzo between Peteano and Boschini. This spur, which the enemy occupied, thanks to his abrupt attack, was reconquered by our soldiers and remains solidly in our possession. We took forty unwounded prisoners.

The Austrian official report issued in Vienna today said:

The situation in the district of Gorizia is unchanged. The fighting there continues. Repeated enemy attacks against the sector of Oslavia failed.

During the night there was fighting on the northern slope of Monte San Michele, but progress in the attack against the summit of this mountain was impossible under our fire. Attacks against the sector of San Martino were repulsed. The Italians must recognize the uselessness of their offensive.

Many heavy bombs and incendiary bombs have fallen in the town of Gorizia, which is now being systematically shot to pieces. Daily a number of churches and houses are burned. The damage done is estimated at 25,000,000 crowns, ($5,000,000,) while the loss on private property, works of art, and art collections cannot be estimated.

CALL GORIZIA DESTROYED.

Germans Declare Italians Shell City in Spirit of Impotent Rage.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The destruction of Gorizia by Italian artillery is generally ascribed by the German war correspondents to the impotent rage of General Cadorna over the never-varying defeats in his attack on the Austrian defenses. The Vossische Zeitung correspondent says:

"Italian captives told me long before the bombardment the exact day and hour when it would begin, admitting that it could not possibly serve any military purpose. For two days it rained shrapnel shells on the unlucky city. When toward midday on Nov. 19 the artillery died down Italian airmen appeared and threw bombs and iron arrows on the defenseless citizens trying to escape from the burning town.

"The Piazza Grande is a mass of ruins. The historic City Hall, the episcopal palace, the seminary, and nearly all the important public buildings and many churches of great artistic value are completely destroyed. The whole district is burned and numberless peaceful citizens, women and children, have been killed."

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (by wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The Overseas News Agency today made public the following:

"The Italians continue their destruction of Gorizia. The episcopal palace has been completely destroyed and all the churches have been more or less damaged.

"Horrible scenes as a result of the bombardment are reported. Many persons went mad. Others were burned or torn to pieces by the explosion of grenades. In the Via Castello four children who were asleep in one room were killed by one grenade. On the Piazenta a woman was pierced from head to foot by an airman's arrow. One bomb killed on the Piazenta a mother and three little children. These people could not escape from Gorizia, as the Italians bombarded the roads leading out of the town."

TEUTONS RESUME GALICIA ATTACKS

Also Assail Russians in Volhynia, Hoping to Divert Army Bound for Bulgaria.

MORE FIGHTING IN NORTH

Petrograd Reports Success in a Violent Engagement with Hindenburg's Troops.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Austro-German forces in Galicia are attacking the Russian lines apparently in the hope of compelling the Czar to divert to that region part of the army which is being gathered in Bessarabia for the invasion of Bulgaria. The Russian official bulletin tonight also tells of two attempts [illegible] forces to make an advance in Volhynia, but say both failed.

In the north a violent engagement has [illegible] between the Russians and von Hindenburg's troops, and Petrograd reports the outcome was favorable. A dispatch from Petrograd to the Havas Agency in Paris says that German prisoners confirm the reports of the evacuation of Mitau.

The Russian official bulletin says:

The action near the farm of Borsemuende continued all day yesterday, but without decisive result. Toward evening the fighting became less violent.

A violent engagement near the village of Mintalouny, north of Vidzy, ended in our troops occupying the wood to the south of the village.

Quiet prevails on all the other sectors on the front, from the Gulf of Riga as far as the Pripet River, and also on the Styr.

In the region west of the town of Olyka, between Rovno and Lutsk, the enemy attempted an advance, but, being threatened by envelopment, he fell back to his point of departure. His attempt to make progress in the direction of the village of Janowka, northeast of Buczacz, was equally unfortunate.

The German Headquarters Staff issued this communication:

Army Group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: An attempt was made by the Russians to cross the Misse River near Pulpe, but it was frustrated. Russian attacks near Borsemuende and on the western front of Dvinsk were repulsed.

Report German Forces Dispirited.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—The Russian General Staff is not disposed to overestimate the importance of actions that occur from time to time along the central sector of the battle line, where no determined offensive movement is now under way. Local commanders thus have opportunity to act on their own initiative, isolated engagements resulting, as reported from time to time.

Germans who have been taken prisoner along some parts of the line represent the German forces to which they were attached as low-spirited in view of the knowledge that the rigors of the coming Winter have now to be faced. This feeling has been particularly noticeable, according to the prisoners' statements, since Russian successes at many points on the line have compelled the retirement of the Germans from comfortable trenches. Many detachments are said to be unable properly to dig in, owing to the freezing of the ground, and must spend the Winter virtually on the surface.

RUSSIAN MISSION IN LONDON.

Military Board Comes to Get in Touch with British Allies.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—An important Russian military mission under Vice Admiral Roussine, chief of the Naval Staff, has arrived in London from Petrograd.

The mission is the outcome of the desire of Earl Kitchener, the British War Secretary, that the British Government should be in closer touch with the Russian authorities with regard to the conduct of the war. The mission will remain in London as long as may be necessary.

PATRIOT IN HARDIE'S SEAT.

Unofficial Labor Candidate Easily Elected in Socialist's District.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A remarkable illustration of the temper of the English people was given in the result of the Merthyr-Tydvil election in Wales to fill the vacancy in the Commons caused by the death of J. Keir Hardie. Stanton the unofficial labor candidate, was returned with a majority of 4,206 over Winston, the official labor candidate.

Stanton fought the election on a patriotic issue, and stood for an energetic prosecution of the war. Winston, as President of the South Wales Miners' Federation, had all organizations of that federation at his disposal. He pledged himself to support the Government's war policy on the lines laid down by Premier Asquith, yet with all his influence in the district he was soundly beaten. The electors remembered he formerly was a pacifist, and his connection with the Independent Labor Party and its anti-war doctrines was against him.

British Naval Airman Flies 50 Miles Inland to Drop Bombs on Kuleli-Burgas Bridge.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SALONIKI, Nov. 26, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Greater activity than ever prevails here, chiefly on the part of the British. The landing of men is continuous. At a late hour last night a large detachment of Scottish troops came ashore and Saloniki heard the Scottish bagpipes for the first time. A large crowd watched the men march through the streets.

The British are taking over a portion of the present French front.

French aviators carried out their first raid yesterday from the French right to Strumitza town. They dropped nearly fifty bombs on the town and on the troops encamped near by.

The Bulgars are still making no impression on the Serb line before Monastir.

It is reported on reliable authority that the Serbian army, recently stated to be descending toward Uskub, has changed its line of retreat, and now is proceeding in the direction of Prilep, via Kachanik. A junction of the Serbs with the allied armies is said to be expected near Prilep.

The Serbs have been forced to abandon some guns in this march, but the Allies are providing cannon to take the place of those lost. This movement should sensibly improve the Serbian position generally.

British Airman's Daring Feat.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 27.—A daring night flight by a British naval airman is announced in The London Gazette. Flying fifty miles inland from the Dedeaghatch shore, Flight Commander Smyth-Pigott reached Kuleli-Burgas, in the Bulgarian territory recently ceded to Turkey, and in the moonlight dropped bombs on the great bridge of the Orient Trunk Line crossing the Maritsa River into Turkey on the way to Constantinople, the only railway connecting the Turkish capital with Dedeaghatch, Adrianople, Sofia, and the whole system of central European railways.

In recognition of this Commander Smyth-Pigott has been appointed a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order. He was able to locate the bridge by the moonlight shining on the river, and descended within 300 feet of it before releasing his bombs. He was heavily fired on, and in spite of trouble with the engine of his machine returned safely to the base after a flight lasting four hours.

BULGARS ABANDON ATTACK ON MONASTIR

Hints That French Right Wing May be Withdrawn From the Krivolak Region.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 27. — The Serbian main army having been driven back to the borders of Albania and Montenegro, where they are being attacked by the Austro-Germans, the Bulgarians, with the assistance of General von Gallwitz's forces, are now giving their attention to the Anglo-French troops. Important military developments may therefore be looked for on the Vardar River.

The Bulgars appear to have abandoned definitely, for the time being, their advance on Monastir in order to attack the French left positions on the Cerna, where fighting already has been reported. So far the French have held all their positions, but dispatches from Saloniki hint that it may be necessary to withdraw the right wing from Krivelak to the southeast, where British-French reinforcements are being concentrated.

Meanwhile the fighting which was reported to be taking place in the vicinity of Brusnik, near Krivolak, has resulted in the capture of that town by the French, according to a dispatch from Saloniki to the Paris Havas Agency, filed on Thursday.

The French attack was made at a point east of Krivolak on the route to Radovista. Brusnik was captured in the afternoon, the dispatch says. The Bulgarians made a counterattack during the following night, but without success. An important result of the occupation of this town is that it protects Krivolak from further artillery fire.

The dispatch adds that important reinforcements of French and British troops continue to arrive at Saloniki, and that the Serbian Minister of War, General Bokovitch, has left that place for Glevgeli, in the French sector.

A dispatch from the same correspondent under date of Friday says:

"In consequence of the retreat of the Serbians from Katchanik toward Monastir, orders were given to burn the bridges at Vozarci and Gradisce after the last French patrols coming from Dobrista, Morzen, and Camendols had regained the right bank of the Cerna. Henceforth the Cerna will constitute an important strategic position against possible Bulgar attacks.

"The Serbian Army of Monastir, reinforced by contingents from Katchanik, attacked the Bulgars close to Prilep. The results of the fighting, which continued last evening, are unknown.

"For the last forty-eight hours the English have been in the firing line, commencing at Doiran. Reinforcements of English troops are disembarking uninterruptedly."

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Saloniki, referring to a French counterattack in which they recaptured most of their lost positions on the Krivolak-Cerna-Rajec line, says the Bulgarians were compelled to retreat because they had attempted to force the French lines with their full strength and had left in the rear no covering troops.

"The Serbians are still attacking the Bulgarian forces covering Prilep," says the correspondent, "but the result of the fighting is not known. Austro-Germans are marching toward Uskub.

"There are indications of a possible disagreement between the Turks and Bulgarians, arising out of the presence of Turkish forces in Thrace. Five Turkish divisions are at Sufli and one division at Mustafa Pasha, Varna, and Burgas."

Only fighting with Serbian rearguards is reported by the Teutonic Allies pressing the main Serb and Montenegrin armies in the west. The official bulletin issued in Vienna yesterday says:

The Austro-Hungarian forces fighting on the Upper Drina River have repulsed the enemy across the Peles and Kezara Ridge and captured Cajnies. On the Jiljeva Planina, southwest of Sjonico, the Montenegrins also have been driven back by our battalions.

South of Novibazar our columns are ascending the Tekra Planina. Southwest of Mitrovitza we drove off an enemy rearguard.

The Kossovo Plain is completely in the hands of the Teutonic allies.

Berlin issued the following brief communication:

Southwest of Sienica, and near Mitrivista, enemy rearguards which had still remained before the front of Field Marshal von Mackensen were driven back.

It is reported from Switzerland that the Austro-Germans are sending reinforcements into the Balkans to meet this new Russian offensive, but other sources state that these reinforcements are en route to the Western front because of the fact that the Balkan campaign is having a direct effect on all fronts.

Information received in Petrograd from what is described there as excellent sources locates the landing of Italian troops in Albania at Avlona.

FIGURES SERBS AT 100,000.

Moraht Also Thinks Bulgars Will Make Short Work of Allies.

From a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Major Moraht in the Tageblatt estimates that about 75,000 men of the Serbian Army have reached or are about to reach Albanian and Montenegrin soil, while 25,000 are still in Southern Macedonia. He figures also that 136,000 have been captured, and that about as many more have been killed or wounded, are sick or have deserted.

"Most of the latter," he continues, "are inferior troops which have been sacrificed to enable the best forces to escape. These will again appear after recovery from their terrible flight, either as mercenaries serving the English purpose more directly than at present, or as guerrilla bands raiding the Sanjak of Southern Macedonia.

It is quite evident that the Bulgarians do not think it necessary to follow up their victory over the small Serbian army at the Babuna Pass at present, being content with the capture of Prilep. The enemy's press itself gives the reason for this new grouping of the Bulgarian armies. It is obvious what the purpose of this strategical measure is. Undoubtedly General Boyadjieff was right when he told a journalist that after having finished the Serbian Army he would as quickly dispose of the Allies' expedition. Neither General Sarrail nor General Munro is following Lord Kitchener's orders because the Bulgarians move so quickly. Will it be the Bulgarians and not the great English General Staff who will decide when the expedition of the Allies shall end?"

GREECE TO DECREASE ARMY UNDER ARMS

Has Also Agreed to Withdraw Her Troops from Saloniki—Cochin Off to Italy.

ATHENS, Nov. 26.—It is understood that the Greek reply to the note of the Entente powers agrees to a partial demobilization with a view to relieving the strain on the country's finances, and that it also undertakes to withdraw Greek troops from Saloniki and distribute them to other points on the frontier.

Some of the Government papers assert that the Cabinet has discussed the question of instituting judicial proceedings against Eleutherios Venizelos, the former Premier, because of his recent manifesto urging his followers to abstain from taking part in the coming elections.

Denys Cochin, the French Cabinet Minister, who has been the recipient of public ovations and honors while in Greece, left for Italy today aboard the Greek cruiser Helle.

SEES END OF BALKAN WAR.

Bulgar Chief Predicts Entente Allies Will Be Crushed Speedily.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—General Boyadjieff, commanding the Bulgarian forces, said in an interview granted at Nish to the correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt:

"Within two weeks fighting in old Serbia and the Sandjak will be finished. Then our allies and ourselves can turn toward the south.

"Considering that we have reduced the Serbian Army, 300,000 strong, in a short period, I am convinced that we can finish very quickly with the motley gathering of 100,000 troops from Saloniki, say in half the time.

"I shall prove no false prophet in saying that in a month at the utmost only Bulgarian, German, and Austro-Hungarian troops will remain on Serbian soil and that the Entente, like Serbia, will have buried their Balkan hopes."

SAYS SERBIA CANNOT DIE.

Will Grow Greater, No Matter What Happens, War Minister Declares.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—A prediction that no matter what happens Serbia will be "born again" was made by War Minister Bokovitch to the Matin's Monastir correspondent, who quotes the Serb General as saying:

"We all are ready to hold out to the last. If fortune abandons us altogether, so much the worse; but we still shall hope. Serbia knew how to win liberty after five centuries under the Turkish yoke. It will be the same tomorrow. Serbia will live forever. You cannot kill all Serbs, and Serbia will be born again to grow greater in the future."

NEUTRALS HELPLESS, DECLARES CARSON

Ex-Attorney General of England Says War Proves International Law a Failure.

DOES NOT BLAME AMERICA

Even if This Country Has Not Done All He Hoped—Numerous Diplomatic Notes Are Futile.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Speaking as the guest of honor at the American Luncheon Club today, Sir Edward Carson, ex-Attorney General, discussed "The Duty of Neutrals."

Sir Edward expressed the fear that international law had been entirely abolished, or, at any rate, greatly encroached upon, by the impotence of the neutrals themselves. After acknowledging the introductory speech, which praised him as an Irishman, he said:

"I am proud to be an Irishman; but at the same time I am not a hyphenated Britisher."

The speaker said he would make no startling revelations, for until recently he had been a member of the Cabinet—at all events, a part of it, though just how much of it he never quite knew.

Discussing neutrality, Sir Edward said:

"America is the greatest neutral at the present moment. When I mention America as the greatest neutral, naturally I turn to the conduct of neutrals in relation to the mitigation of the horrors of war, and nothing fills me more with dismay when I think of the outcome of the horrible period through which we are passing than the fact—I am not blaming anybody, but it is a fact—that international law, the product of all the peace instincts of all nations with a view to preventing interruption to civilization, even in the time of hostilities, has, I fear, been entirely abolished, or has, at any rate, been greatly encroached upon by the impotence of the neutrals themselves."

Sir Edward then explained that conventions adopted in times of peace could only be upheld by neutrals.

"Abolish the power of countries not at war, and you abolish international law itself," he said. "This war from the start has shown the ineptitude and powerlessness of neutrals."

The Futility of Guarantees.

Sir Edward said the invasion of Belgium showed the futility of guarantees, although they were supported by the great powers of Europe, and he added:

"The necessity for the maintenance, the sustaining, and supporting of international law and international jurisprudence becomes more vivid, as more brought home to us, when we remember that a breach of international law, necessarily in the rules of war, leads to reprisals—and reprisals know no limit. Therefore the first breach leads on in the downward path almost to its abrogation. * * *

"Just as you may delude or mystify or lull into a sense of security our own citizens by speeches and perorations—you will not thereby win a war—so in the international sphere you may by diplomatic notes, numerous and strong, satisfy the consciences of your citizens, but you will not by a mere note maintain the obligations put upon you as parties to international law, which is to prevent breaches of civilization and to mitigate the horrors of war."

The speaker then expressed his fear for the future, since if international law proved futile in this conflict, no faith could be put in future conventions. There could only be one safeguard for peace—increased armaments and the maintenance of greater armies than in the past.

Speech Not a Reproach.

"I am sure no one here will be offended by anything I have said," Sir Edward continued. "It is not meant to be a reproach to any one. It is meant in some way or other to draw attention to what seems to me to be the realities of the lessons we have learned through the war. But do not imagine for a moment that I am without gratitude to our cousins beyond the Atlantic. God knows what we owe to them!

"I could never get through if I attempted to describe the many benefits they have conferred on humanity, even if they have not done all we hoped for in this terrible struggle. But their latest one—and not the least—I call to mind in the murder of that brave woman in Belgium, nurse Cavell. Never will there depart from the minds of Englishmen and Irishmen who understand the situation the brave and humane efforts made by Brand Whitlock and Hugh Gibson, who, indeed, fulfilled not merely the functions of representatives of your great United States, but showed themselves men who had engraved in them those great qualities and feelings of humanity which, even in times of war, are implanted by our great Maker, of mercy, forgiveness, and comfort, developed in them in the highest degree. We are grateful to them. America ought to be proud of them, as I am sure she is."

Sir Edward concluded with the expression of the hope that the United States and Great Britain would be drawn closer together in the interests of civilization and humanity.

TO TAX WAR PROFITS.

German Companies Must Hold Half Earnings at State's Disposal.

From a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (via London.)—The Berlin papers unanimously approve the Government's scheme for taxing war profits, announced this morning. At present the plans apply only to public and limited companies, and also to the Reichsbank, but individual war profits will not escape.

While the amount of the new taxation has not yet been fixed, there is good reason to believe that it will not exceed 50 per cent. of the super-profits. The companies are being advised to create funds covering that amount.

A noticeable feature of the new law will probably be that the taxes can be paid in war loan paper.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (via London.)—The Federal Council has adopted a preliminary bill for taxing the war profits of joint stock companies and corporations. The measure does not levy a tax. This is left for another bill after the war. The present bill merely requires that companies carry as reserves half the profits earned in making war supplies and invest them separately from the ordinary resources, thus holding them in readiness for the final decision of the Government.

Another bill deals specially with the Reichsbank. This measure contemplates taking half the net profits exceeding the average of the three years preceding the war. The bill would provide for a special tax taking the place of the note tax abolished at the beginning of the war.

HOW GERMANY IS ABLE TO GET BELGIAN TAX

Societe Generale de Belgique Arranged for Payments from the Provinces.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Nearly $100,000,000 had been exacted in tribute by Germany from the occupied provinces of Belgium up to Nov. 10, since which date the German Governor General has issued orders for a monthly war tax of 40,000,000f. ($8,000,000) until further notice.

Calculating that the Belgians in the occupied territory number 6,000,000, the levy means that every man, woman, and child must pay into the German war treasury 6f. 70c (about $1.35) monthly.

This annual payment of 480,000,000f. may be compared with the total Belgian budget in peace times, which amounted to between 600,000,000f. and 800,000,000f. The Manchester Guardian's correspondent at The Hague writes:

"How has such a colossal amount been found, and how will the overburdened Belgian population be able to bear this continued strain? Some information is just at hand from Brussels. That nine provinces have hitherto been able regularly to pay monthly installments is due to the fact that the provincial authorities secured large support from the Société Générale de Belgique, which bank expressed its readiness, on conditions which have not been made public, to lend money to the provinces and make payments for them, these transactions, of course, taking place under the supervision of the German authorities.

"On the other hand, the Société Générale was granted by the Germans the exclusive right to issue banknotes, which had hitherto been the privilege of the Belgian National Bank.

"The latest levy order issued by Baron von Bissing differs from the one issued over a year ago in some important particulars. In the first place, no limit is referred to upon the expiration of which the tax shall cease. The period of a year was previously mentioned. A clause, likewise new, that the German administration shall have the right to demand the payment in German money at the customary rate in Brussels of 80 marks to 100f., probably aims at raising the rate of the mark abroad, as the Société Générale can in that way be compelled to obtain 32,000,000 marks monthly.

"The Provincial Councils have been called together to arrange for the payment of the war tax, their sittings having been fixed for Nov. 30."

DIG BEYOND TEUTONS, FORCED TO DIG BACK

French Sappers, Cut Off by Mine Explosion, Spend Two Days Burrowing for Safety.

NEVER THINK OF SURRENDER

Finally Come Out in Mine Crater and Crawl at Night Back Into Friendly Trenches.

BEHIND THE LINES, NEAR ARRAS, France, Nov. 26, (via Paris.)—The intense and continuous activity along the front with grenades, mines, and heavy guns can be only vaguely understood from the brief chronicle of the official bulletins. The underground warfare, to which only dry references are made, is carried on steadily day and night. The mines, exploding at irregular intervals along the lines, give place to singular incidents which become public rarely.

Near here in Artois, where sappers largely displace infantry, is told the story of Sappers Mauduit and Cadoret, who have been mentioned as having received the Military Medal. This is how they won it:

They had dug their way under and beyond German trenches when the explosion of a German mine between the lines cut their gallery, leaving them imprisoned in a space eight feet long. This was at 9:55 o'clock in the morning. They determined to dig toward the surface and encouraged each other by singing Breton songs in low tones while they dug. The air became bad and they were almost suffocated. Their candles went out, leaving them to work in darkness.

After hours of intense labor the appearance of a glowworm told them that they were near the surface. Then a fissure of the earth opened and admitted air.

The miners pushed out into the clear starlight. Within arm's reach they saw the loophole of a German trench and could hear German voices. The thought seems not to have occurred to them to give themselves up. They drew back and began to dig in another direction, enduring still longer the distress which they had undergone without food or drink.

After digging another day they came out in the crater of a mine. The night was again clear and it was impossible for them to show themselves without being shot by one side or the other. So they decided to hold out until another night. They lay inside the crater exposed to shells, bombs, and grenades from both sides, eating roots and drinking rain water.

On the third night Mauduit crept near the edge of the crater and got near an advance sentinel, one of those pushed out at night beyond the lines to protect against surprise. Cadoret, exhausted, lost his balance and fell back into the crater. Under the German fire Mauduit went back and helped his companion out. Both crawled along until they fell into the French trenches. To his comrades Mauduit remarked:

"The next time this happens we will know how to come back quicker."

REVOLT AGAINST RULE OF MRS. PANKHURST

Followers Accuse Her of Neglecting War Service and Also Demand an Accounting.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—At a meeting today of members and former members of the Women's Social and Political Union a resolution was passed asserting that in using the name of the union for political purposes outside the scope of its objects Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst was acting without authority, and that Mrs. Pankhurst's circular announcing the suspension of the union's activities, coupled with her complete control of the funds, and the central machinery was virtually to disband the union as a national organization.

"Mrs. Pankhurst," the resolution continues, "has assumed the authority to expel from the union all members who differ from her in opinion even on matters not connected with suffrage, and this unwarrantable usurpation has resulted in removal from the members' list of the names of almost all women who are possessed of influence, capacity, or independence of thought."

The resolution calls for a financial statement and the resignation of Christabel Pankhurst unless she returns from abroad "at a time when the services of all women of capacity are so sorely needed here."

The resolution in addition accuses Mrs. Pankhurst of failing to utilize the organization for some sort of national service during the war, such as was desired by a majority of the members.

REPORTS AN ARAB HOLY WAR

Berlin Hears from Constantinople of New Movement Against French.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (by Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—The Overseas News Agency says:

"It is reported from Constantinople that Ameer Abdul Malik, grandson of the famous Abdul Kadir, Ameer of Algiers, has called on all Arab tribes to take up the holy war against the French. A large number of chieftains, with their tribes, responded to the call. The general opinion is that Abdul Malik will obtain the participation of all tribes there.

"It is reported from Tangier that Moroccan tribes attacked the French camp at Kreibia."

Abdul Malik is leader of the Moroccan rebels who have been reported, in dispatches from Berlin on several occasions previously, to have won victories over the French.

SINKING OF GERMAN CRUISER CONFIRMED

Frauenlob, Like Her Sister Ship, Undine, Torpedoed by Submarine, Petrograd Reports.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The German protected cruiser Frauenlob has been sunk by a submarine of the Entente Allies, according to a semi-official announcement made at Petrograd, says a dispatch to the Central News Agency.

The Frauenlob is reported to have been sent to the bottom in the same locality where the German protected cruiser Undine, a sister ship of the Frauenlob, was lost.

The Frauenlob was a protected cruiser of 2,672 tons, and was built in 1901. A dispatch published in the Politiken of Copenhagen on Nov. 11 said a report had been received that the Frauenlob had been sunk off the south coast of Sweden. Her sister ship, the Undine, was sunk, according to an official announcement made in Berlin, by two torpedoes from a submarine on the afternoon of Nov. 7 while patrolling the south Swedish coast. Nearly the entire crew was saved.

The Frauenlob and Undine carried crews consisting of 275 men each. The vessels were 328 feet long, 40.3 feet beam, and had a depth of 15.8 feet. They were armed with ten 4.1-inch guns and were equipped with two 18-inch torpedo tubes. Both cruisers were capable of traveling at a speed of 21 knots.

DENIES CARDINAL HAS PEACE PROPOSALS

Statement of German Official Agency Regarding von Hartmann's Visit to Rome.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (by Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—"In the foreign press more reports loom up, according to which Germany asks for peace," says an item given out by the Overseas News Agency. It adds:

"This time it is asserted that the German Cardinal von Hartmann, who is in Rome, is the bearer of peace proposals. The inventiveness of those who professionally disseminate these false reports is no doubt admirable, although the obstinacy with which they repeat the often denied affirmations, after all, becomes childish. Cardinal von Hartmann, of course, is not the bearer of peace proposals."

ROME, Nov. 26, (via Paris.)—It was asserted in well-informed quarters here today that Cardinal von Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, who arrived in Rome yesterday, was the bearer of an important message from Emperor William to Pope Benedict, in which the war situation was presented from the German point of view.

In the message the Emperor is reported to have disclaimed responsibility for the war, Germany being described as having been forced into it in self-defense.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Cardinal Hartmann visited the Vatican today, having a long conference with Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal Secretary of State, says a dispatch from Rome to the Havas News Agency. The Cardinal also conferred with Mgr. Sanz de Samper, the Pope's Chamberlain.

Pope Benedict will receive the Cardinal tomorrow.

PROTESTS GALLIENI ORDER.

French Deputy Upholds Families' Right to Ask Soldiers' Fate.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The latest order issued by General Gallieni, Minister of War, prohibiting families of soldiers, writing direct to the officers of regiments at the front for news regarding the soldiers' fate, has resulted in a letter of protest from Cruese Connevot, a member of the Chamber of Deputies.

The purpose of the order is to prevent voluminous correspondence and relieve the officers from work of this nature. The public is requested to make its inquiries through the Mayors' offices.

M. Connevot said in his letter that information, given in the usual way, was too much delayed and imparted with an inexactness that was regrettable.

Russia May Call 1918 Class.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—The Minister of the Interior has issued a communication which foreshadows the possible summoning to the colors of men born in 1897, who normally are not liable to military service until 1918.

BRITISH GUNS ACTIVE, GERMAN FIRE SLACK

General French Reports Damage to Foe's Trenches—Argonne Artillery in Violent Duels.

LONDON, Nov. 26. — Considerable activity by the artillery is reported along the British front in France by an official bulletin, issued tonight, giving a communication from Sir John French. Damage has been done in the German trenches, but the German guns have made little reply as a rule.

The statement by the British War Office reads:

General French reports that our artillery has successfully bombarded many portions of the enemy's trenches during the last four days, destroying wire entanglements and reaching their parapets. To the bombardments the enemy made little reply. The enemy artillery, however, has been active north of Albert, north of Loos, north of Ploegs Street, and east of Ypres.

On the evening of the 22d the enemy made a heavy bombing attack on a mine crater held by our troops south re of the Bethune-La Bassée road, but was repulsed.

Mining has been constant on both sides during the last few days. On the 23d we exploded a mine north of the Bethune-La Bassée road and occupied the crater. On the 24th the enemy exploded a mine south of Cuinchy, causing some damage to our trenches. A hostile bombing attack against the crater was repulsed. Yesterday the enemy exploded mines near Carnoy and Givenchy.

On the 25th twenty-three of our aeroplanes successfully bombarded a German hut encampment at Achiet le Grand, northeast of Albert. The enemy replied with a single aeroplane, which dropped bombs near Bray, doing no damage.

Artillery activity is more pronounced in the Argonne district, according to the night bulletin of the French War Office, and a German ammunition depot in the Fille Morte region has been blown up. There has been cannonading along the front, but in the Vosges a heavy fall of snow bids fair to restrict operations. The night bulletin from Paris says:

During the day there was an intermittent cannonade on the whole front. The activity of the artillery has taken a more violent turn in the Argonne, where, notably, our batteries blew up a German ammunition depot in the Fille Morte region. There has been fighting with grenades in the sector of Courtes-Chaussées. We dislodged the enemy from a mine excavation, which we occupied.

The day bulletin says:

The night was calm over the whole front. In the Vosges snow fell heavily, especially in the region of the Fecht and Thur Rivers.

The Belgian official communication reads:

A rather violent bombardment has occurred in front of St. Heewege. To the north of Dixmude and to the east of St. Jacques Capelle there has been a retaliatory fire by the Belgian batteries.

This statement as to western operations is issued by the German Headquarters Staff:

There were artillery duels at various places on the front; otherwise nothing of importance took place.

WE LOSE BIG KHAKI ORDERS.

Russia Buys 6,000,000 Yards in England, Following a Protest.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 27.—Russia, in the last few days, has placed orders for 6,000,000 yards of khaki cloth in Yorkshire.

In announcing this at a meeting of the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce yesterday, Chairman Kaye said he had recently seen in London representatives of the various allied Governments on the subject of orders given in America, and he regarded the large Russian order as the outcome of a protest made by the Huddersfield Chamber.

Mr. Kaye stated he had been assured that no Italian orders for khaki would now go to America.

BOMB AT CANADIAN CANAL.

Attempt to Wreck the Lachine Waterway Is Frustrated.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—The discovery today of a bomb filled with high explosives near the Montreal Blanket Company's factory frustrated, the police believe, an attempt to wreck the Lachine Canal, on the bank of which the factory is located.

The wrecking of the canal would suspend the shipment of grain from lake ports.

A policeman saw a man place the bomb and run away. The fuse was not lighted.

a conference of the neutral nations of the world looking to the possible termination of the war; and

Whereas, The belligerent nations seem to be unable themselves to take the initiative to this end; and

Whereas, The women, as well as the men of the nations in this war, are sufferers from its devastation; therefore

Resolved, That we, members of the Woman's Peace Party and others assembled in Washington, urge that the President of the United States, the head of one of the principal neutral countries of the world, call upon the other neutral nations to appoint representatives to assemble in conference for constant mediation, without armistice, and dedicated to finding a just settlement of this conflict.

The delegates who went to the White House were Mme. Schwimmer and Mrs. Snowden. Jane Addams of Chicago, also a delegate from The Hague Congress, was unable to address the mass meeting, because she was called to a meeting in Michigan at the request of Governor Ferris. Miss Addams went to New Hampshire last Summer to appeal to the President to initiate a movement for a peace conference, and received the answer that the time was not yet ripe.

Encouraged by President.

After their conference with President Wilson this afternoon the two delegates expressed a strong hope that the President would act affirmatively in a movement for peace.

"Were you encouraged by what the President said?" they were asked as they left the White House.

"Most positively," replied Mrs. Snowden.

"I have had no feeling but discouragement in America until now, and now I am optimistic," said Mme. Schwimmer.

The interview with the President lasted nearly an hour. Outside, during its progress, a gathering of men and women from the mass meeting waited, in moral support of the appeal. The delegates laid before the President what he frankly said was wholly new information. They told him that the people in every country at war desired peace, and that but for censorships preventing publication nere of news of the peace movement in the warring countries the American people would realize how strong was the demand for peace. This was the first point emphasized by the delegates.

Mrs. Snowden, whose husband is a labor member of the British Parliament, told the President that strong peace speeches had been made in the House of Lords and the House of Commons, news reports of which never had reached the United States. She said that hundreds of thousands of people in England were members of peace societies. Mrs Snowden and Mme. Schwimmer joined in the statement that so strong and rapid was the growth of the peace demand in 7urope that unless some practical step toward peace were taken soon the people would rise and seek relief in their own way.

Emphasis was laid upon the interpretation in Europe of the attitude of public opinion in the United States toward the war.

"Our people," said Mrs. Snowden, "think America wants the war to go on because Americans are making money out of it. We who are here know this is not true. But, alas, how shall our people know what is the truth if you do not manifest a desire to aid in the movement for peace and cease this awful world murder?"

Did Not Say "Yes" or "No."

The President, it was asserted after the conference, showed earnest and alert sympathy and gave assurances that he would be heard from at the suitable time.

"Did he say 'Yes' or 'No' as to whether he would appoint a delegate to the proposed conference from the neutral countries at The Hague?" was asked.

"He did not," replied both delegates in unison. It is understood that there were laid before the President numerous representations and certain documentary evidence of the reputed willingness of the belligerent countries to accept, without objection, the presence of a peace conference at The Hague. It was explained that there was to be no official character bestowed upon the conference, that it was simply to continue without any armistice, until some suitable plan was advanced whereby an acceptable peace might be suggested to the principal belligerents.

The President was urged to consider that already six neutral powers had "indicated positively their friendliness to the idea of mediation" and that, while it might be his prerogative to take the initiative for the United States as the greatest power not now drawn into the war, it would possibly be quite as effective if this country should join with a smaller power that had led the way. This course, it was said, might prove more agreeable to all the great powers at war and have a salutary influence on subsequent negotiations.

The addresses at the mass meeting were characterized by directness and force. Mrs. Snowden criticised the President for committing himself to the policy of preparedness, and expressed the fear that his act might stand in the way of peace. Mme. Schwimmer said some one called her by telephone just before she left her hotel to caution her to "be careful not to say anything indiscreet." She said she could not understand the name of the man who was speaking to her, but he had said she had been described as a German and as behind the peace movement in this country.

"I am not a German," declared Mme. Schwimmer. "Politically I am a Hungarian. But, like Mrs. Snowden, who speaks for England, I ask you to do all you can for peace before another 10,000,000 and the next 10,000,000 are killed or mutilated."

Throughout the day the executive offices at the White House were deluged with telegrams urging peace. It was estimated that there were more than 20,000 in all. Early in the day the White House telegraphers gave up trying to take them and shifted the burden to the local telegraph offices. Mrs. Henry Ford gave $10,000 to pay the tolls on these messages. Each telegram read: "We work for peace. The mothers of America pray for it." This form was suggested by Miss Jane Addams of Chicago.

GOVERNORS' REPLIES TO FORD.

Willis of Ohio Tells of Declination by Long-Distance to Dinner.

Governor Frank B. Willis of Ohio said last night over the telephone from Columbus that he would not go on Henry Ford's peace ship. He intimated, however, that he was in favor of the project.

Governor Willis was communicated with by long distance at the Ohio State University dinner at the Park Avenue Hotel. In a speech over the wire to Ohio State alumni listening in New York and San Francisco he referred to Mr. Ford and his peace project.

"I hope that the good-will of the people of the State of Ohio will go with Henry Ford on his mission," he said.

H. W. Casler of the New York Telephone Company, presiding at the New York dinner, asked him if he intended to go on the trip.

"I have had a perfectly delightful telegram from Mr. Ford," Governor Willis replied, "asking me to be a member of the party. I wired him that I would be forced to decline because of important business which is coming up in Ohio and which will require my presence there."

Governor Willis said in response to another question that he was in favor of a program of preparedness.

"Are you in favor of President Wilson's plan?" he was asked.

"Some of it I am in favor of, some of it I am not," was his reply. "I think it is a mistake to put the National Guard into the program in the way that is suggested. It places the Guard in a minor position. It is a mistake to organize a continental army in place of the guard."

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Governor Fielder does not believe in the peace overtures proposed by Henry Ford, and he emphatically expressed himself to that effect today. The Governor, like other State executives, received Mr. Ford's invitation to be a guest on the peace ship to Europe, but refused to accept. He sent this telegram to Mr. Ford:

"Invitation declined. Believe that efforts for peace by citizens of neutral nations as individuals would be considered meddlesome."

HARRISBURG, Penn., Nov. 26.—Governor Brumbaugh tonight declined an invitation to become a member of the Henry Ford Peace Commission.

"Our Constitution makes no provision for the care of public business under circumstances such as your kind invitation figures," the Governor telegraphed Mr. Ford. "My duty is to serve our people. Regret my inability to go. Believe it the duty of a Governor here not to take steps you have in mind. Private individuals can act with much more freedom."

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—Governor David I. Walsh today sent this telegram to Henry Ford:

"Cannot leave in December on the excellent mission you are planning. Will consider invitation if mission's work is unfinished when my term of office expires on Jan. 6."

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 26.—Governor Oakley C. Curtis today declined an invitation to join Henry Ford's peace trip to Europe, because of personal and official business.

FRANKLIN, Vt., Nov. 26.—Governor Charles D. Gates said tonight he would be unable to accept Henry Ford's invitation to be a member of his peace party to Europe.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 26.—Governor H. D. Hatfield today declined Henry Ford's invitation to go to Europe on the peace ship, giving urgency of official business as his reason.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 26.—Governor Manning today declined Henry Ford's invitation to go to Europe on the Ford peace ship. Governor Manning explained that he was too busy at home.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 26.—Governor Marcus H. Holcomb announced here tonight that he had declined the invitation of Henry Ford to go to Europe on the peace ship. He said he was too busy with State affairs.

MIGHT BAR FORD TRIP.

Lawyer Points to Section of Penal Code That Suggests Action.

Attention was called yesterday by a well-known New York lawyer, who is recognized as an authority on international law, to Section 5 of the Federal Penal Code, which, in his opinion, might be construed to apply to Henry Ford's project of sending a peace ship to Europe. This section, enacted by Congress in 1798, reads:

Sec. 5. Every citizen of the United States, whether actually resident or abiding within the same, or in any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or in any foreign country, who, without the permission or authority of the Government, directly or indirectly, commences or carries on any verbal or written correspondence or intercourse with any foreign Government or any officer or agent thereof, with an intent to influence the measures or conduct of any foreign Government or of any officer or agent thereof, in relation to any disputes or controversies with the United States, or to defeat the measures of the Government of the United States, and every person, being a citizen of or resident within the United States or in any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, and not duly authorized, who counsels, advises, or assists in any such correspondence with such intent, shall be fined not more than five thousand dollars and imprisoned not more than three years; but nothing in this section shall be construed to abridge the right of a citizen to apply, himself or his agent, to any foreign Government or the agents thereof for redress of any injury which he may have sustained from such Government or any of its agents or subjects.

"This section," said the lawyer, "was adopted to deal with a case of interference in international affairs somewhat similar to that which Mr. Ford seems now to be contemplating. The President has officially asserted that it is the intention of the United States to offer its services as mediator to the belligerent Governments. Although the section has never been judicially interpreted, I think the courts might easily construe Mr. Ford's action as interfering with that purpose."

The peace negotiator of 1798 was Dr. George Logan, a Quaker of Philadelphia. War was raging between Great Britain and the French Republic. Feeling between this country and France rose high and, as today, there were questions concerning seizure of ships and injury to commerce. In an attempt to settle the dispute, President Adams dispatched three Commissioners to the French Directory. Their mission failed. Then Dr. Logan went on his own account to Paris and renewed negotiations, which, however, came to nothing. His action was looked upon as an attempt by the Republicans to discredit the Federalist Administration, hence the enactment of Section 5.

HITCH OVER PEACE SHIP.

May Concern Ford's Stipulation That No Contraband Be Carried.

Henry Ford, upon departing for Washington early yesterday morning, left his peace office in the Hotel Biltmore in charge of Gaston Plantiff, his New York sales manager.

The limited office staff continues sending out invitations to sail on the peace ship Oscar II. Thirty acceptances were received and many letters in which the writers begged for additional information. Messages were received from the Governors of several States, and in most of these, it is said, were expressions of sympathy for Mr. Ford's project.

A hitch developed in the plan to charter the Oscar II. What this was those at Mr. Ford's office would not explain, but Mr. Plantiff said it would be straightened out, and he had no doubt that the vessel would be chartered. One stipulation had been made by Mr. Ford, it was learned, and that was that the vessel should not carry a single pound of contraband. Whether the hitch came over this clause could not learned.

DID NOT SEE CARDINAL.

Some Slip in Ford's Arrangements for Baltimore Visit.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 26.—Henry Ford had two appointments today with Cardinal Gibbons for a conference on peace. He was to have seen the Cardinal at 9 o'clock this morning, but did not reach Baltimore until 1:40 P. M. He did not leave the train. On his arrival in Washington he wired the Cardinal his regrets and requested that the Cardinal see him this evening. The Cardinal replied by wire that if Mr. Ford would call before 9 o'clock he would be pleased to receive him. Mr. Ford did not appear.

Mr. Ford, interviewed when his train stopped at the Union Station here today, said that if the Cardinal should decline his invitation to make the trip on the peace ship he would ask the prelate to say a word of approval of Mr. Ford's plan, which, Mr. Ford expressed the hope, would arouse the sympathies and co-operation of Catholics in European countries. It is certain that the Cardinal will not be a member of the peace mission.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Henry Ford said tonight he had no engagement to meet Cardinal Gibbons in Baltimore at 9 o'clock. He added that he would not go to Baltimore tonight, but would remain in Washington and give himself to the work of peace in hand here. His visit to the Cardinal, he intimated, might be made late tomorrow, or Monday.

TRY TO BAR EVIDENCE OF QUESADA'S CRUISE

Witnesses Against Buenz Tell How Ship's Name Was Changed at Sea.

PAPERS THROWN OVERBOARD

Agents of North German Lloyd Line, Who May Figure as Defendants, Brought Into the Case.

Counsel for Dr. Karl Buenz and other officials of the Hamburg-American Line on trial in the United States District Court on a charge of conspiring to defraud the United States, made an energetic opposition yesterday to the admission of testimony regarding the ship Marina Quesada, sent out from Newport News to supply German cruisers at sea.

The evidence concerning the Marina Quesada brought repeatedly into the case the name of Captain Boy-Ed, who was usually referred to by those connected with the German-American naval auxiliary service in this country as "Room No. 801 at 11 Broadway." It also introduced into the case agents of the North German Lloyd Line who may figure as defendants in this case, according to Assistant District Attorney Roger B. Wood, under that part of the indictment which, in addition to Dr. Buenz and his three associates on trial, accuses "other defendants unknown."

The Marina Quesada was one of the supply ships whose brief career in the service of the German Navy was full of incident. A quick change of its name was made by the ship's painter in mid-ocean. It ran up a different flag on its mastheads, rated away from a British ship which proved later to be a harmless mail packet, and lost its papers only to have them, according to the Government, recovered from the stomach of a shark.

Chief Engineer's Story.

Witnesses of the Government testified yesterday that the coal on the Marina Quesada was purchased by the Baltimore agents of the North German Lloyd Line. Telegrams had already been introduced proving that Philip Volz, an employe of the North German Lloyd Line, communicated with Purchasing Agent Hachmeister and with Room 801 at 11 Broadway—Captain Boy-Ed's office—about the cargo and voyage of the Marina Quesada.

John Olsen, chief engineer of the Marina Quesada, testified that one day after the ship had left Newport News, Captain Hans Suhren had called him into his office and said that they were on their way to get in touch with German ships.

"What else did he say?" asked Assistant United States District Attorney Roger B. Wood.

"He said that if everything went all right we would all get a month's extra pay and a 10 per cent. bonus."

"Anything else?"

"He said we would all be millionaires and right next to Kaiser Wilhelm."

Olsen testified that Captain Suhren gave him a book about an inch thick and said:

"This contains the German cipher code. I want you to keep it so that you can hide it in case we are stopped by a British cruiser."

"One day he came running down into the engine room," Olsen continued later, "and said that a British flag had been sighted. He gave me a package of papers bound up in a white handkerchief and told me to hide them with the code book. I put them all in the bottom of a barrel and covered them with lime."

"Did anything else unusual happen on the trip?"

Changed the Name at Sea.

"We started out as the Marina Quesada under the Costa Rican flag, but when we were getting near to Pernambuco the Captain had the name painted out and 'Gladstone,' the former name of the ship, painted on instead. Then the Norwegian flag was run up in place of the Costa Rican."

The ship failed to connect with any German cruisers, and finally put into Pernambuco, although it had left port destined for Valparaiso. When the port officer came on the ship to board her, Captain Suhren pretended to hand over the weather sack containing the ship's papers, according to the witness, but let them slip from his hand and fall into the water. Later, Olsen said that the Captain turned to the first mate and said:

"Did you see the trick I played him?"

To his evident great disappointment, Olsen was not allowed to tell of the ship's papers being found later on the inside of a shark. In reply to a question by Mr. Wood, however, he said that he had seen the leather satchel which contained the papers.

"Where?"

"In a news office in Pernambuco."

Olsen's testimony and all of the testimony regarding the Marina Quesada was allowed by Judge Howe, with the understanding that it would be stricken out if he considered that the prosecution had failed to connect the defendants with the Marina Quesada.

"No evidence has yet been introduced showing the defendants in this case had anything to do with the sailing of the Quesada," said Mr. Rand. "and I will venture to add that no evidence of that kind will be introduced. We have admitted freely our part in the voyages of the other ships, but we object to this testimony because these defendants had nothing to do with that ship.

Protest Against Testimony.

"We wish to bring that forward strongly at this time, because of the reason that this testimony may prove confusing and prejudical to the defense. It will be harmful to us, if a sinister aspect is placed upon this testimony, even though it is later stricken out and we protest at this time, and ask that your Honor be explicit in directing the jury to disregard this testimony and put it out of their minds completely, if it is stricken out of the record."

Mr. Wood argued that the correspondence between Purchasing Agent Hachmeister of the Hamburg-American Line and Captain Suhren of the Marina Quesada as to the loading of the ship and payment of expenses proved the connection between that ship and the officials of the Hamburg-American Line.

"Not at all," said Mr. Rand. "It simply shows that certain provisions belonging to the Hamburg-American Line were taken over by those who sent out those ships. Supposing Captain Boy-Ed did order certain supplies to be turned over to the Marina Quesada and did order the payment of $1,000 for expenses in connection with that ship. How is that binding upon these defendants? The Government can hardly claim that Captain Moy-Ed is one of the conspirators in this case, if there be any conspirators."

The admission of evidence regarding the Marina Quesada would place an additional burden upon the defense, because of the fact that the Marina Quesada sailed to Pernambuco instead of going to Valparaiso, its port of destination, without any good reason for that change, so far as the testimony has shown. It is the contention of the defense that those ships in which Dr. Buenz was interested all meant to go to their ports of destination after supplying German cruisers, but were prevented by accidents or by British cruisers.

Feared British Cruisers.

The defense proved yesterday through a State witness that the Nepos—one of the long list of supply ships for German cruisers leaving American ports—had failed to get to its destination at Monrovia because of British warships.

Captain Nielsen of the Nepos told how, before his ship left Philadelphia on a trip, ostensibly to Monrovia, Liberia, by way of Teneriffe, in the Canary Islands, it had been suggested to him that he would do well by himself if he took his instructions from a supercargo named Flohr, placed on board by the Hamburg-American Line. Flohr, he said, first suggested that the ship should sail to the Cape Verde Islands. Captain Nielsen objected. Flohr then suggested that it should go to the Western Islands. Captain Nielsen again objected, and insisted on going straight to Teneriffe. Before they had reached Teneriffe he had his supercargo were no longer on speaking terms. Arriving at Teneriffe, he said, he had refused to go any further for fear of British warships.

"How long did you remain there?" asked Mr. Wood.

"For 144 days, until some time in February, 1915."

"Did you see British cruisers outside of the harbor while you were there?"

"On every day except two of the 144 there were one or more British ships outside waiting for me."

Captain Nielsen said that he had finally, through the German Consul, sold his cargo, which was beginning to spoil, and discharged his coal after it had caught fire. He finally got orders from the owners to come back to the United States.

Mr. Rand on cross-examination drove home the point that the Nepos had failed to go to its port of destination because the Captain was afraid of British warships. The defense contends that all of the ships they sent out would have gone to their ports if they had been let alone, and that it is not necessary in law for a ship to land its cargo where it had been destined in order to make good the statements of the manifest.

Aubrey G. Bailey of Norfolk was asked what conversations he had had with Captain Suhren of the Marina Quesada.

He turned to Judge Howe then and asked whether he had a right to answer, saying that, though an American, he was the acting Vice Consul for Chile at Norfolk and that all his conversations with Suhren had taken place in his capacity of Chilean representative. Mr. Wood argued that, because Mr. Bailey was an American and because a Consul is a business representative and not a diplomatic official, he ought to be allowed to testify. Judge Howe said that the point was a new one to him and dismissed Bailey from the stand until he should have ruled on the point.

Bullowa Was Skeptical.

Ralph James M. Bullowa, the New York lawyer who originally made public the Hamburg-American Line's use of a chain of neutral ships for German war vessels and is now suing the Hamburg-American Line in behalf of Norwegian steamship lines, whose ships suffered damage and delay in the cause of Germany, declared that Purchasing Agent Hachmeister of the Hamburg-American Line had told him that the Fram and Sommerstad had been chartered to supply German merchant ships, not German warships.

"I replied that I was three times seven years old," said Mr. Bullowa. He told how he had, as the lawyer for the agents of the ships, demanded a contract providing that the Hamburg-American Line should pay, if the ships were injured. This agreement, signed by Karl Buenz, was introduced in evidence. It provides that the letters given to the Captain are to be treated as private papers, and that the Hamburg-American Line would be responsible for any damage to the ships by possible collision with German warships in the process of transshipment. Mr. Bullowa said that, because of his protest against the Fram and Sommerstad leaving port, they remained in Philadelphia and their cargoes were taken out.

George W. Atkinson, a coal dealer at Norfolk, admitted that he had signed the manifest of the Marina Quesada at Newport News, and taken oath that the destination of the coal was Valparaiso. Mr. Wood pointed out that to the customary absolute form of the oath there had been written in the phrase "to the best of my knowledge and belief."

"Did you have any particular reason for having that put into the oath?" asked Mr. Wood.

"Well, there were several clerks there, each very much excited, and all telling me to do it differently," he said, "and I thought best, under the circumstances, to protect myself by adding those words."

On cross-examination Mr. Atkinson said that he had never had any negotiations of any kind with any of the defendants regarding the coal. He said that he had sold it to a man named Hilken of the firm of Schumacher & Co. of Baltimore, which represented the North German Lloyd Line.

Employes of the Postal Telegraph and Western Union identified several telegrams, one of which brought in Captain Boy-Ed's office, Room 801, at 11 Broadway, again. This was as follows:

Newport News, Va., Dec. 10, 1914.
Mr. Hachmeister, Hamburg-American Line, New York City:
Sailing today and drafting on you favor Reyner $1,000. Wire Reyner you will accept. Communicate with 11 Broadway, Room 801. Letter to follow.
HANS SUHREN.

The trial will be resumed before Judge Howe on Monday morning.

BOY-ED DENIES INTERVIEW.

Says He Did Not 'Cheerfully Admit' Financing Sea Raids.

Captain Boy-Ed yesterday authorized the statement, apropos a report that he "cheerfully admitted" financing the operations of sea raiders, published in a morning paper, that he had not given out any interview of the kind.

It was learned that within two weeks he received a call from a German-American journalist, at present unattached, who obtained a bundle of German newspaper clippings from him and asked him for material for an article on international law.

WAGNER DEMANDS CONVOY FOR SHIP

Wants American War Vessel to Protect the Winnebago from the British.

TIED UP IN BUENOS AIRES

President of New Shipping Company Insists There Is No Foreign Capital Involved.

Demand that an American warship be sent to convoy the steamship Winnebago from Buenos Aires to this port, so that she shall not fall into the hands of the British, was made yesterday upon the Secretary of State by the American Transatlantic Company, owner of the vessel, according to an announcement issued at its offices at 17 Battery Place.

R. G. Wagner, President of the company, at the same time vigorously asserted that the eleven vessels of the company were not in any sense German owned. He declared that the United States Government, through the Commissioner of Navigation, had helped to spread this suspicion, which was responsible for most of the fleet having been captured or bottled up by British cruisers. He said he was prepared to prove that every hull and every spar and every funnel was American and entitled to the full protection of the Stars and Stripes these vessels flew.

First of all, the protection of an American man of war is asked for the Winnebago, formerly the British steamship Rags, because she is down at the Argentine port laden with quebracho, a valuable dyewood, for a manufacturing company in Stamford. Mr. Wagner dare not let the vessel come out of the South American port for fear of the British cruisers which lie in wait, and yet constant demands for damages are being made upon the American Transatlantic Company because of the untoward delay.

The head of the corporation said that on Nov. 13 he wrote to Secretary Lansing urging that action be taken with regard to the fleet, and it was not until yesterday, thirteen days later, that he received a reply.

"It is announced by politicians and by the newspapers and by those who study public questions," said Mr. Wagner, "that this country desires to build up a merchant marine, and yet when a group of American citizens makes a sincere effort to aid in that direction it receives only such treatment as this.

Officers' Names Sound German.

"The British Government on Oct. 25 decided that it would not consider the flag of a vessel, but would inquire into the nationality of owners. Thus, because the names of the officers of this company have a German sound and because of certain circumstances, our fleet is treated as though it were German-owned. The idea is without foundation. We shall establish in every way that there is not a dollar of German capital in this organization. True, my name is German and my father was a German, yet I was born in this country. My son is Treasurer of the company; my nephew, W. J. Berger, is also an officer. All of us are citizens by birth. We thought we would avail ourselves of the opportunity to organize an American steamship company. This corporation was established under the laws of Delaware, with a capital of $2,500,000, as it is intended $1,000,000 for the purchase of vessels formerly owned in Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Greece. We owe not a cent on the purchase price.

"We went to Washington and called upon Eugene T. Chamberlain, the Commissioner of Shipping, attached to the Department of Commerce. At that time there was associated with us Albert Jensen of Copenhagen. We told Mr. Chamberlain that and he said that in that case an inquiry would have to be made, as it was preferable that there be no foreign capital. We paid for the expense of cabling abroad. It was found that Mr. Jensen, who was a wealthy coal merchant, had extensive dealings with Hugo Stinnes of Essen, a miner of coal and the owner of a large fleet of steamships. Because Mr. Stinnes owned vessels, the assumption was made that he must, therefore, control our company. Nevertheless, we had Mr. Jensen take out his money.

"It developed also by the questioning of Mr. Chamberlain that we had the same firm of lawyers that the Hamburg-American Line had employed for twenty years. I never knew anything about that. I had inquired of the Bankers Trust Company for the names of reliable admiralty lawyers and was referred to its counsel, who recommended several firms, one of which we retained. Then I found that this firm had given legal advice to the Hamburg-American Line. When Mr. Chamberlain learned of this, he commented upon it, and the firm, fearing to embarrass us, withdrew.

Britain's Suspicion Aroused.

"These circumstances were made public by the Commissioner of Navigation, and were cabled to England. Hence the British Government regarded us with suspicion. The whole attitude of the British authorities is unjustified. We were able, by appealing to the Secretary of State, to get American registration for our vessels.

"The Winnebago, now useless, could earn $1,000 a day. Our other vessels could give us earnings of $10,000 a day if we were permitted to operate them. We sought to carry no contraband. We intended to trade only between neutral ports. Surely we are entitled to the protection of this Government.

"At present little is being done except the collection of affidavits. We can furnish plenty of them. They will be from our officers and our various stockholders, and will show conclusively that only American capital and American citizens are concerned with this company. We are told that the Government needs these to present our case to Great Britain."

According to the company, its fleet is now distributed as follows: Manitowoc, Buenos Aires; Saginaw, held as a prize by the French at Marseilles; Winnebago, at Buenos Aires; Allaquash, Rio Janeiro; Kankakee, in transit and reported seized near Buenos Aires; Muskegon, at an Argentine port; Ausable, Galveston; Genesee, Santa Lucia; Maumee, Gothenburg; Hocking, captured off Sandy Hook by a British cruiser and now at Halifax as a prize; Winconne, in this port.

Captain of Anchor Line Ship Was Within Three Miles of Torpedoed Vessel.

According to Captain Johnston and the officers and passengers of the Anchor Line steamship Italia, which arrived at Quarantine last night from Naples, that vessel nearly shared the fate of the Italian steamship Ancona when she was torpedoed on Nov. 7.

Captain Johnston said he left Palermo on Nov. 6, and in the forenoon of the following day he was steaming through a thick fog when he heard sounds like heavy gun firing. The Italia had seven cabin and eighty-eight steerage passengers and, to quiet them, the Captain said the sounds probably proceeded from Italian warships at target practice.

Shortly afterward the wireless operator received an "S O S" call from the Ancona and replied, asking for the Ancona's position and further particulars. All they received in reply was the position. Captain Johnson swung his ship and went full speed ahead to the rescue of the Ancona, and sighted her about three miles ahead on the port bow just as the fog lifted.

"Up to that moment," said Captain Johnston, "I did not know what I was up against. Looking through my glasses I saw that the Ancona was down by the head, and immediately afterward a torpedo sped through the water and evidently struck her side as a volume of water and wreckage was whirled up into the air.

"The Ancona was not flying any flags and the submarine which now appeared in view did not have her colors hoisted, either. I was positive, though, from my knowledge of submarines, that she was a German craft. Then another torpedo was fired at the Ancona, and I decided quickly that after the submarine had finished with the Ancona he would come after my ship full belt. I turned my ship, accordingly, and went ahead full speed toward Gibraltar, after notifying the wireless stations and all ships in range of the Ancona's plight.

"I kept the regular course toward the strait until night, when I changed it, expecting that the swift submarine might follow me. But I did not see any more of the underwater craft and reached Gibraltar safely."

Captain Johnston also mentioned that two hours before he got the S O S call from the Ancona he had received one from the French transport, France, which did not give any particulars or position, and as his operator on the Italia could not get anything further he kept on his way.

Officers and passengers on the Italia said that while the ship was waiting at Gibraltar one of the Admiralty pilots who came on board told them that on Nov. 2 five big German submarines had tried to get through the strait. He said four of them, it was understood, had succeeded in entering the Mediterranean, but the fifth did not. When asked what was the fate of this one the pilot spoke vaguely about nets and other things, and said it was very often hard to tell what really did happen. But they gathered from him that she had been captured by the British.

TALK OF BARALONG CASE.

Austrians Sinking Ancona More Humane Than British, Say Germans.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (by wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The Austrian detailed report in the Ancona case is the subject of comment in an article published identically by a number of afternoon papers. In this article the conduct of the crew of the Austrian submarine which sank the Ancona is contrasted, from the standpoint of humanity, with the conduct of the British marines in the Baralong case, as reported in affidavits made by American members of the crew of the steamship Nicosian.

The article declares that the British people wring their hands over the barbarism which the Austrians have learned from the Germans, while, as a matter of fact, the Austrians stretched possibilities to the uttermost to give to those aboard the Ancona an opportunity to save their lives, an opportunity which, the article says, was wasted through the panic of the Italian crew. The German object in the submarine campaign, it is stated, is the destruction of property, and not of life. It is the practice to grant a delay before sinking a ship upon the assumption that the delay will not be abused by an attack on the submarine.

The article asks how this consideration was regarded in the Baralong case. A submarine, waiting in the vicinity to allow a crew a chance to take to the boats, permitted another craft under the American flag to approach to pick up the crew, says the article. The Baralong, it continues, suddenly hoisted the British colors, and not only sank the submarine, but hunted down and killed the defenseless crew.

The charge made against the British in the Baralong case has been officially denied.

ACCUSED AS PLOTTER AGAINST COAST SHIPS

C. C. Crowley Charged in San Francisco with Directing a Wide Anti-Ally Conspiracy.

AN EX-U. S. INVESTIGATOR

Later Worked for German Consul and Went Into Service of a Powder Company.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—Charles C. Crowley, a detective of this city, was arrested today on the charge of conspiracy to further the destruction of munition plants and the blowing up of vessels carrying war supplies to the Allies. In particular Crowley is accused of supplying money to pay men to set afire and blow up docks and ships.

The specific charges in the warrant are:

That on May 9 Crowley paid Louis J. Smith of Tacoma in this city to go to Seattle to destroy by dynamite vessels having aboard ammunition for the Allies.

That on June 4 Crowley sent two money orders for $50 each to Smith at Tacoma.

That in making remittances Crowley used the name of Garrett.

That Crowley and Smith had instructions from persons, not named, to destroy by dynamite all vessels bound from Pacific Coast ports with munitions of war for Great Britain, France, and Russia.

The Federal District Attorney, John W. Preston, who ordered the arrest, asserts that Crowley was the "director general" in practically all the bomb outrages that have been perpetrated on shore and off shore for the last six months. The explosions have been at the rate of about four a day in the last ten weeks.

Speaking of Crowley's activities, Mr. Preston, who applied the "third degree" to Crowley for forty-eight hours previous to ordering his arrest, said tonight:

"Since the $100,000 barge explosion at Seattle in May Crowley has been in all parts of the country, superintending the blowing up of plants and ships. We have absolute proof of his connection with scores of heretofore unexplained explosions. We did not take Crowley into custody immediately on finding him, as we desired to give him an opportunity to verify our information as to the 'higher ups' who employed him. He has furnished much important information."

Mr. Preston stated that witnesses in the cases against Crowley would be brought by the Government from many points, including New York.

The Federal officials express confidence that the developments concerning Crowley will prove helpful to Federal authorities in the East in the prosecution of Lieutenant Robert Fay, held on similar charges in New York.

As indicating that Crowley had unsealed his lips while being questioned by Preston, Don S. Rathbun, a special investigator, and other Government officials, the accused man was allowed out on the comparatively small bail of $5,000, following arraignment before United States Commissioner Francis Krull.

Crowley's attorney said tonight:

"Crowley has been employed for some time by the German Consul. His work consisted practically in getting data and information concerning the activities of the agents of the Allies in this country. He was not employed to violate the laws of the United States or international laws. He has not directly or indirectly participated in violating any law whatever."

Crowley, who is 57 years old, was a special agent for the Southern Pacific Company for twenty years and chief of special agents for six years. Recently he was an investigator for the District Attorney of San Francisco, leaving this service in August.

Crowley, with Smith, according to allegations in the complaint, took employment with the Hercules Powder Company here in the Summer in order to obtain information regarding the shipments of explosives.

SEATTLE, Nov. 26.—On May 30 an explosion on a barge in the harbor here demolished the vessel, rocked the country for a radius of thirty miles around and broke all the plate glass in the business district of Seattle, causing a loss estimated at $100,000. The barge was loaded with dynamite, shipped from California, and consigned to Vladivostok.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Officials of the Department of Justice said tonight that they were acquainted with the circumstances, connected with the arrest in San Francisco today of C. C. Crowley, formerly a special investigator of the Department of Justice in the San Francisco District, but did not feel at liberty to make any statement on the subject. The District Attorney for that district had all the evidence, it was stated, and none would be made public unless he chose to give it out.

ASSERTS HE KNEW OF PLOT.

Alleged Smuggler in Tacoma Jail Willing to Tell at a Price.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Nov. 26.—That an organized gang, financed by representatives of the German Government, was responsible for the destruction of Pier 14 and a dynamite barge at Seattle, and attempts to destroy steamships and other property of the Allies on the Pacific Coast, was the assertion made tonight by Raleigh Falconer, who is in the county jail awaiting trial on a charge of smuggling.

Falconer asserts that he was asked to assist in the burning of Pier 14, and was promised $500 for his work, but refused. He says he is willing to tell the authorities what he knows if guaranteed protection from the gang and immunity in the smuggling case.

Falconer names as members of the gang Tarnaskey, Smith, alias Brown, whose actions in Tacoma caused him to be put under surveillance, and Tortus. Falconer refuses to name the leader, but declared that within thirty days there will be other big "jobs" in Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver, San Francisco, or Los Angeles, unless the men are taken into custody.

DYNAMITE NEAR IRON WORKS.

Bangor Police Seeking Supposed Plotter Against Big Plant.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 26.—The Union Iron Works plant is tonight being closely guarded, while the police are hunting for clues to the person who hid a stick and a half of 90 per cent. dynamite, two percussion caps, and a slow fuse in a shed of the Queen City Granite Company, just across the street from the big foundry and machine shop.

The plant is running full time on a large order for lathes used to make shells for machine guns. It is located on the fringe of Bangor's large foreign quarter, where Central Europe is largely represented.

The explosive was found accidentally on a beam by a workman. The fuse was fitted to the ends of the caps, and the dynamite was of a higher grade than that used by contractors here.

It is believed that the local authorities are working alone on the case.

Fire on the Bankdale.

The agents of the French Line received a cable dispatch yesterday from Bordeaux announcing that the freight steamer Bankdale had arrived there from New York with a fire in her forward hold. The dispatch added that the fire had been got under control, but the cause was not stated. In June last the Bankdale, which is a British steamer of 3,800 gross tonnage, left New York with a cargo of sugar for Havre, and on the voyage six fire bombs were discovered in No. 2 hold before they exploded. On this voyage the steamer did not have any ammunition, but carried a large quantity of war supplies for the French Government.

MERE COPY OF RHEIMS HEAD

French Minister Does Not Believe Col. du Pont Has "Divine Smile."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The papers devote a good deal of space to the report in THE NEW YORK TIMES that Colonel E. I. du Pont has bought the head of a statue from Rheims Cathedral.

The Secretary of State for Fine Arts said today:

"We have opened an inquiry into the matter, as a theft may have occurred, but we remember that a few years ago a dishonest dealer sold to a German client heads that he alleged to have been from Nôtre Dame which proved to be fakes.

"There exists in the Trocadéro Museum a mold of the celebrated head of an angel forming part of the cortège of Saint Nicaise on the western façade at Rheims, which is called 'The Smile of Rheims.' If this is the head mentioned by THE NEW YORK TIMES, it is probable that the buyer has been tricked, as it is easily copied.

"It is certain that thefts of cathedral débris occurred between Sept. 19 and Sept. 30 last year during the fire and bombardment, when surveillance was impossible, but we were under the impression that these were confined to unimportant fragments. Some statues were smashed and decapitated and several heads were not found. It is possible that one or more were stolen.

"Since our surveillance was established we receive detailed reports on the effects of every bombardment from the architect Sainsaulieu, who lives opposite the cathedral and has orders to collect all fragments in the cathedral cellars. We know that, although the classification is not yet finished, the 'Smile of Rheims' is not among them.

"The inquiry will decide the genuineness of Colonel du Pont's head, but I fear that the divine Smile has been destroyed by a German shell."

Doubt Report About Lady Paget.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—With reference to the report in German wireless dispatches that Lady Ralph Paget was in Sofia nursing the Bulgarian wounded, Lady Arthur Paget said tonight that she doubted it, as no news had reached her to that effect. On the other hand a message received yesterday that Sir Ralph Paget was coming home said there was no news of her daughter.

JEWISH RELIEF ENVOY ARRIVES IN BERLIN

Isadore Hershfield Seeking to Get Polish Sufferers in Touch With Relatives Here.

BERLIN, Nov. 26, (via London.)—Isadore Hershfield of New York, representing officially Jewish relief societies of America, arrived in Berlin today on a mission of relief for the Jews in the war areas of Poland and Galicia.

Mr. Hershfield's first object, it is stated, is to arrange means for opening communications between the Jews in the war area and their relatives and friends in America. Large numbers of those in the war zone have dropped out of sight through their forced peregrinations in Poland and the interruption of mail communications. Many friends and relatives in the United States are said to be in a position to send financial assistance to the distressed ones in the war theatre, which in itself will contribute greatly toward solving the problem of relief. Contributions for general relief, however, will probably form the second part of Mr. Hershfield's program.

Mr. Hershfield is conferring with Julius G. Lay, American Consul General in Berlin, who for several months has been working along the same lines, distributing broadcast through Poland circulars inviting natives with connections in the United States to write to them through the Consulates. The Consul General thus has a mass of addresses at hand and has had considerable practical experience with the problem.

The American Embassy is taking up with the Government the question of permission for Mr. Hershfield to go to Poland, which undoubtedly will be granted, though as a matter of form it will be referred to the authorities at Warsaw first.

DISTRESS IN SERBIA GREAT.

Mme. Groultch Pleads with Americans to Aid Them.

The following cablegram, dated Saloniki, Greece, was received by the Rockefeller Foundation yesterday:

"Terrible distress prevailing in whole of Serbia owing to lack of food. Starving fugitives along whole line of retreat. Would you consider supplying flour and obtaining consent of German and Bulgarian Government for its distribution within their lines similar to Belgian relief work? Importation from south impossible. Danube line open from Rumania through Prahovo to Zaicar and Nish."

The cablegram was from Mme. Groultch, wife of the Serbian Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, who is head of the principal relief organization in the Balkans, now working in behalf of the Serbian war sufferers.

BELGIAN REFUGEES COMING.

Germany Aids About 300 to Rejoin Families in America.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 26, (via London, Saturday, Nov. 27.)—About 300 Belgians, mostly women and children, today boarded the liner Nieuw Amsterdam, about to sail for New York. They are bound for Chicago and other districts in the United States, where they will rejoin their families, from whom they have been separated since the beginning of hostilities. They are accompanied by the Rev. John Deville of Chicago. Every facility was granted to these people by the German authorities, even in the fighting zone, from which most of the refugees came.

The steamer also is taking a delegation from the American Export Chamber of Commerce of Amsterdam for the purpose of furthering business relations between the United States and Holland. The representatives of the Chamber are the Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl of Chicago and J. Bendien of Amsterdam.

MRS. BOISSEVAIN PROPOSED.

She Admits It Herself In Discussing Freedom for Women.

Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain told Zoe Beckley of The Evening Mail yesterday that it was she, and not Mr. Boissevain, who had proposed, and that she had proposed just three times before she was accepted and engaged to become the wife of the young Belgian.

It wasn't a burst of confidence that prompted Mrs. Boissevain to make this confession, nor yet an o'erpowering yearning to tell some one the secret.

Mrs. Boissevain told it because she thinks all girls should propose if they first "realize the affinity of heart and soul," and she thinks the realization usually comes first to the woman because her sensibilities are finer and her perceptions more keen.

She regards proposals by women as part of their new freedom, something like the right to vote, but she did admit that "no new freedom comes without bearing with it a certain danger of misconstruction," adding: "But the girl who is sincere and honest, frank and capable, throws an aura of dignity about her that guards against misinterpretation of her motives. The little risk is more than outweighed by the big gain."

MR. ARCHIBALD INDIGNANT.

Says Mr. Faversham Is Trying to Gain Publicity at His Expense.

James F. J. Archibald yesterday sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES a copy of the following telegram:

President, Empire Club, Toronto, Ont., Canada.

If the dispatch to today's NEW YORK TIMES is accurate, in which William Faversham stated in a speech before your club that he was an intimate friend of mine, and concerned himself in my movements and questioned me, and tried to take credit for that service as service to England, I will say that such a statement is an unqualified falsehood from beginning to end. I have not seen or spoken to Mr. Faversham in seven years. On this side of the line he poses as an American, and is attempting to gain a little publicity at my expense, which I cannot allow to pass unchallenged.

JAMES F. J. ARCHIBALD.

GETS O'CONNOR'S PLEA.

Secretary Lansing Will Investigate Case of Deported American.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26. — Secretary of State Lansing promised Representative Chandler of New York today that he would investigate the case of Michael J. O'Connor, an American, of New York, who declares in an affidavit filed with the State Department that when he tried to get his property in Ireland last month he was kept a prisoner on the American liner St. Louis at Liverpool from Oct. 24 until Nov. 3 under guard of British soldiers.

He also charges that he was kept in the ship's brig for several hours. Admission to the United Kingdom was refused to him, and he returned to New York.

This $25 Overcoat Has a History

IT began several months ago. We determined to present an overcoat at $25 which would surpass anything we had ever seen at the price.

★ ★

A simple dress overcoat was determined upon — such as most professional men and many carefully groomed young men find useful for business and for evening wear.

★ ★

Black, oxford and blue unfinished worsted was selected as the material.

A large quantity of the goods was purchased, much lower than at the present price.

It is this season's fly-front, semi-fitted model from a leading New York tailor—reproduced exactly.

Full satin lined throughout.

Without having thus planned for it, the coat would necessarily be $35.

We have never been able to offer such a coat for $25 before.

NAVY EXPERTS CALL DEFENSE PLAN SLOW

National Security League Committee Criticises Proposed Shipbuilding Program.

"LAY ALL THE KEELS NOW"

If Construction Capacity Is Too Limited, Then Increase It at Once, Report Urges.

At the first general meeting of the National Security League, which will convene in Chicago today, there will be read a report on the navy and its needs. The report was compiled by a committee made up as follows: W. Butler Duncan, Commodore Robert P. Forshew, ex-Assistant Secretaries of the Navy Beekman Winthrop, Herbert L. Satterlee, and William McAdoo; Robert W. Neeser, the naval historian; J. Bernard Walker, editor of The Scientific American; Henry A. Wise Wood of the Naval Advisory Board, William S. Lloyd, and Roland B. Riggs.

The committee in the beginning of its report expresses the opinion that the United States is "confronted with the gravest questions of national and international concern that we have had to face since the civil war." The committee urges that the navy be restored immediately to the position of second strongest in the world—a position it held and lost several years ago.

"This," the report continues, "is the most vital question before the country today. Its importance to every citizen places it above a party issue. All needful sacrifices must be made to attain this end immediately. To delay may be fatal."

The essential weakness of the proposed naval legislation, the committee says, is the failure to provide for an adequate increase in the personnel.

"To man the ships now built and building and to place the navy on a war footing," the report continues, "would require 105,000 men, as estimated by the Navy Department.

The report says further:

"We are then between 50,000 and 55,000 men short of what would be required in war. The ships in commission in the whole Atlantic fleet are 7,800 men short. The other fleets are about in the same condition, and this refers only to ships supposed to be in full commission. It is a physical impossibility today to commission our reserve ships.

"In order to correct a popular misapprehension it must be made clear that this shortage in men is not due in any way to difficulty in recruiting up to full authorized strength. The sole trouble lies in the fact that Congress has limited the number of men to 51,500, a figure far below the number required. The remedy lies with Congress.

"As to the proposed building program, your committee believes that the Government has, in the General Board of the Navy, a body of men entirely competent to deal with the question. The officers comprising this board have spent a lifetime studying the problems before them. They have all the available data at hand, and their sole duty is to deduce correct conclusions from these data.

"So far as the building program, as announced by the Secretary, follows the recommendations of the General Board it has the hearty support of the league. However, it must be constantly borne in mind that no Congress can bind any future Congress. For this and other reasons, it is believed that the ships contemplated should be laid down at once, to the full building capacity of the country, and if that capacity be not sufficient, that means should promptly be taken to enlarge it.

"It is to be noted that the published program calls for two battle cruisers for this year. There may be room for honest difference of opinion as to the relative value to the United States today of battleships and battle cruisers. But there is an entire unanimity in the service on the point that if we are to have any battle cruisers, we must have at least a division of four. Two such ships would be utterly unable to perform the service for which battle cruisers are designed, as all naval authorities agree that four is the effective number. Hence we believe that not less than this number of battle cruisers should be included in the estimates for the coming Winter."

INDORSES DEFENSE PROGRAM.

Revenue Measures Proposed Also Approved by Senator Simmons.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Senator Simmons of North Carolina, Chairman of the Committee on Finance, today indorsed the President's program for national preparedness and the proposals for raising new revenues suggested by Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury. Mr. Simmons did not go into the details of Mr. McAdoo's figures. He favored lowering the limit at which the surtax on incomes would begin and the proposal for taxing automobiles and gasoline and continuing the war tax and the levy on sugar. When the war tax was first proposed he advocated a tax on gasoline.

"I feel that we need to strengthen our naval and military position," said Mr. Simmons. "With reference to preparedness generally, I think that the sentiment of the people or my State would be against what has been characterized as frenzied preparedness, but overwhelmingly in favor of what should be termed common-sense preparedness—that is, preparedness that would enable us to protect ourselves if attacked and to defend our rights upon the seas, as well as the land, if these rights are invaded. I would have a navy adequate not only for defense, but adequate to assert our rights.

"I think the reasons why the Government should provide for a merchant marine are even greater today than they were when the bill which failed at the last Congress was introduced, and I believe that the reasons will be stronger when the war closes than they have been during its continuance, because when the war closes and the scramble for international trade sets in, as it inevitably will, our position will be a pitiably helpless one if we have to depend for the transportation to accommodate our nearly $5,000,000,000 trade almost wholly upon our competitors in that trade. So that, as I was in favor of the Ship Purchase bill, I am more ardently in favor of a like proposition now; but I like very much the suggestion of acquiring ships that may be easily converted into auxiliaries for the navy.

"I am not in a position to express any definite views about revenue needs because I have not conferred with President Wilson, the Secretary of the Treasury, or members of the Finance Committee. Of course, if we are going to enlarge our army and navy we will need considerably more money. I do not know exactly what the deficit is and probably will be upon the basis of legislation for the next year.

"I incline also to think that the income tax exemption is too high. It has resulted in ess than 500,000 people out of a total of 100,000,000 paying the entire tax derived from incomes. That does not seem to me to be quite fair. But, in this, I am expressing only an individual opinion, and I have not considered the question sufficiently to have a definite conception of a program for raising additional revenues."

BARS CONTRACT WORK.

La Follette Gives His Views on the Preparedness Program.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 26. — Senator Robert M. La Follette today published a signed statement in his newspaper attacking the preparedness program, if it was to be carried out through private contracts. He cited figures tending to prove that huge profits were being made by the millionaires of the United States who are interested in munitions plants. The statement in part follows:

"At present these patriots are devoting their great talents to the making of public opinion for a big standing army and a big navy. This is most immediately necessary. They have been enlarging their manufacturing establishments and building many new plants to supply the urgent needs of the Allies at 800 per cent. profit.

"The Government Arsenal at Philadelphia is today making 3.8-inch common shrapnel at a cost of only $7.94, while at the same time it is paying private firms for the identical shrapnel exactly $17.50. The Government makes a thirty-one-second combination fuse for $2.92. For this same fuse it pays the private maker just $7. The Government makes a three-inch finished shrapnel case at a cost of only $1.75. It pays the private manufacturing concern $3.06 for the same article.

"The Government makes a gun carriage for a three-inch rifle field gun at exactly $2,510.60. It pays the private manufacturer $3,398.82 for the same gun carriage. The Government has manufactured caissons for $1,128.67, and it has paid private concerns $1,144.10 for the same caisson. The Government filled one of its own orders for ammunition at its own arsenal which cost $1,900,094. It saved on this order $979,840, for it would have cost exactly $2,879,904 if filled by private manufacturers."

NAVY OPENS STEEL PLANT.

Will Make Castings at Yard Here to Avoid Delays.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Orders were issued today by Secretary Daniels for the immediate reopening of the steel plant at the New York Navy Yard. It was announced by the Secretary that this action was taken on account of the extraordinary rise in the price of steel and the likelihood of serious delays in obtaining castings at any price. The steel plant at the New York Yard, while not intended for large work, can make castings weighing up to four tons, and its operation, Secretary Daniels believes, will effect economies and obviate delays.

"In a small way," said Mr. Daniels today, "the steel plant at the New York Yard serves to illustrate the advantages of equipping the navy with facilities for the manufacture of its own materials. The building of a battleship can be seriously delayed by a lack of comparatively small castings, and when it is stated that in repairing battleships every day's delay in the dock represents $3,000 expense to the Government, it can be easily seen that facilities for making these castings at the navy yards, when commercial firms are too crowded with work to permit prompt delivery will repay the investment required in a very short time."

Secretary Daniels said it was the belief of the Navy Department that the same argument held true in the matter of armor plates and projectiles. The Secretary intends to ask Congress for an appropriation for their manufacture.

Captain George E. Burd, manager of the Industrial Department of the navy yard, seemed surprised last night when it was suggested to him that the reopening of the steel foundry was due to the difficulty of obtaining castings. He said that at the Brooklyn yard there had been no trobule in getting all the castings needed.

"The order to reopen the plant was received this morning," said Captain Burd. "I cannot say just how soon the plant will again be in operation; some small repairs have to be made, but the principal factor is the question of how long it will take to get men who can make steel castings. As soon as we can find a man who can supervise the plant we shall start work. I should think it would be more than a week or two, but not so very long."

The plant was closed two years ago because there was no work for it.

ADOPTS JAPANESE BABY.

American Woman to Test Theory of Influence of Environment.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—Mrs. William Baeder Adamson of Villanova, wife of a prominent glue manufacturer of this city, has adopted a Japanese baby to prove her theory that environment is stronger than heredity. The little girl's name is Fuji, which means wistaria blossom in English. She was born on the Adamson estate. The child's father and mother formerly lived at the same place, but now have a farm in New Jersey.

"I have no children of my own," said Mrs. Adamson today, "and it was the love of children and my belief that environment is stronger than heredity that led me to take charge of the child with the consent of its parents. I have taken no steps toward legal adoption, but I plan to keep and educate the child until she reaches the age of 21. She doesn't know that she is Japanese and will not know it until she is old enough to recognize the different racial characteristics.

"When she has been thoroughly Americanized I shall then let her choose between Japan and America, and I think my theory will be borne out."

Fuji is 4 years old. She has never been taught anything but the English language and is very bright for her age. Mrs. Adamson is giving the child a course in gymnastics and has already begun a mental training which is intended to lead to Bryn Mawr College. The curriculum will include French and German, but no Japanese.

RAID IN CATHEDRAL HALL.

Three Arrests In Apartment House and $500 Drugs Seized.

Tenants in Cathedral Hall, an elevator apartment house at 229 West 110th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, were astonished last night when United States Revenue Agent W. H. Fowle, with Detectives Hackett, Judge, and Erb, ascended to the second floor and, when their ring at the bell was unanswered, smashed the door in.

Inside the detectives found William Kelly, his wife, Mrs. Catherine Kelly, and a servant, who said she was Mrs. Kitty Gallagher. Also, they say, they found about $500 worth of opium, cocaine, morphine, and heroin.

According to the detectives, most of the stuff was concealed in a secret compartment built into a heavy hall chair and operated by a secret spring. More of it, they said, they found in a woman's handbag.

The three were locked up in the 123d Street Station and today will be arraigned in the Washington Heights Court.

ARMENIANS' HEROIC STAND IN MOUNTAINS

Men, Women, and Children Fought with Knives, Scythes, and Stones.

ALL FINALLY EXTERMINATED

Women Who Had Plunged Knives Into Turks Afterward Killed Themselves—Bryce Gets Report.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Viscount Bryce tonight made public the details of further Armenian massacres, which, in a letter accompanying them, he says, "surpass in horror, if that were possible, what has been published already."

"I feel," his letter continues, "that such crimes ought to be exposed to the utmost, and that the charity of other nations will more than ever be drawn to the unhappy refugees when it is known what their friends and fellow-countrymen have suffered."

Describing a last stand of Armenians in the hill country of Samsun, a report received by Lord Bryce says:

"The surviving warriors found themselves surrounded at close quarters by 30,000 Turks and Kurds. Then followed one of those desperate, heroic struggles for life which have always been the pride of the mountaineers. Men, women, and children fought with knives, scythes, and stones, and anything else they could handle. They rolled blocks of stone down the steep slopes, killing many of their enemies. In the frightful hand-to-hand combats women were seen thrusting their knives into the throats of Turks.

"When every warrior had fallen, several of the younger women who were in danger of falling into the hands of the Turks threw themselves from the rocks, some of them with infants in their arms."

Lord Bryce's Letter.

Lord Bryce says the details confirm and amplify the ghastly history of deportations by which Armenians in Northern and Eastern Anatolia were driven to a death of fiendish cruelty. The first part of the evidence, he says, was received by the Committee of Inquiry in the United States, and the second part comes from an Armenian gentleman at Tiflis, who received it from refugees who escaped from regions where the events happened.

"The sufferings of the peasants and the mountaineers in the regions of Van, Mush, and Samsun," Lord Bryce says, "seem to have been even more terrible than were those of the peaceful town folk described in Part I. of the report. Every successive piece of evidence increases the horror of the story and confirms the dreadful certainty of its truth.

"These atrocities were not produced by imagination. Many of them are vouched for by several coincident testimonies. They all are in keeping, and the evidence is most complete, and some of it most terrible. At this present phase of events the civilized world is powerless to intervene, but we must bear these unspeakable crimes in constant memory against the day of reckoning."

The New Evidence.

After giving the parts of the evidence received from the United States, Lord Bryce says that the following extracts were taken from his correspondent at Tiflis:

"Toward the end of May Djevdet Bey, the Military Governor, was expelled from Van. Djevdet fled southward and entered Sairt with some 8,000 soldiers, whom he called 'Butcher battalions.' He massacred most of the Christians of Sairt, as to the details of which nothing is known. On the best of authority, however, it is reported that he ordered his soldiers to burn in the public squares the Armenian Bishop, Eglise Varsavod, and the Chaldean Bishop, Addai Sher.

"On June 25 the Turks surrounded the Town of Bitlis and cut its communications with neighboring Armenian villagers. Then most of the able-bodied men were taken away from their work by domiciliary visits. During the following few days all the men under arrest were shot outside the town and buried in deep trenches dug by the victims themselves. The young women and children were distributed among the rabble. The remainder, the 'useless lot,' were driven to the south and are believed to have been drowned in the Tigris.

"Any attempts at resistance, however brave, were quelled by the regular troops. Many Armenians, after firing their last cartridge, either took poison by whole families or killed themselves in their homes in order not to fall into the hands of the Turks.

Armenians Tortured to Death.

"It is in such a fashion that the Turks disposed of about fifteen thousand Armenians at Bitlis. At Mush early in July the authorities demanded arms from the Armenians and a large sum in ransom of notables of the town. The head men of the village were subjected to revolting tortures. Their finger nails and then their toe nails were forcibly extracted; teeth were knocked out, and in some cases noses were whittled down, the victims thus being done to death under shocking, lingering agony.

"The female relatives of victims who came to the rescue were assaulted in public before the very eyes of their mutilated men. The shrieks and death cries of the victims filled the air, yet they did not move the Turkish beast.

"In the town of Mush itself the Armenians, under the leadership of Gotoyan and others, intrenched themselves in churches and stone-built houses and fought for four days in self-defense, but Turkish artillery, manned by German officers, made short work of all the Armenian positions, and all the Armenian leaders, as well as their men, were killed in the fighting.

"When they were dead and silence reigned over the ruins of the churches and houses the rest of the Moslem rabble descended upon the women and children and drove them out of town and into large camps, which already had been prepared for the peasant women and children.

Women and Children Burned.

"The ghastly scenes which followed may seem incredible, yet these reports have been confirmed beyond all doubt. The shortest means employed for disposing of the women and children in the various camps was by burning. Fire was set to the large wooden sheds in Alijan, Mograkom, Khasjogh, and other Armenian villages, and these absolutely helpless women and children were roasted to death.

"Many women went mad and threw away their children. Some women knelt down and prayed amid the flames which were burning their bodies. Others shrieked for help, which came from nowhere, and the executioners, who seemed unmoved by this unparalleled savagery, grasped infants by one leg and hurled them into the fire, calling out to the burning mothers, 'Here are your lions!'

"Turkish prisoners who apparently witnessed some of these scenes were horrified and maddened at remembering the sight. The odor of burning flesh, they say, permeated the air for many days."

REFUGEES FROM ADANA HERE.

Dr. Chambers Says He Had to Bring Away the Women and Children.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday from the Near East on the Greek Line steamship Themistocles were the Rev. Dr. William N. Chambers, who has been doing missionary work in Asia Minor for thirty years; his wife, and a number of women and children from the mission at Adana.

Dr. Chambers said that conditions had become so intolerable in Asia Minor that he was compelled to bring out all the women and children. He was arrested and kept in jail for two days by the Turks because he was a British subject, but the United States Consul procured his release.

Besides Mrs. Chambers, who is a sister of Talcott Williams, Dean of the Columbia School of Journalism, the party included Mrs. Cyril H. Haus and her four children, Mrs. W. L. Nute and her son, Miss Mary G. Webb, and Miss Lyla Khyat.

Speaking of his arrest at Alexandretta on Dec. 22, Dr. Chambers said that eighteen Indians and himself, all British subjects, were locked up for forty-eight hours. He was released and the Indians were deported.

"From the City of Adana," he continued, "the Turks deported 18,000 Armenians, and in the district of Adana the number ran up to many additional thousands. They were sent into the Syrian desert country. Fifty miles of the journey was made by rail and the remainder on foot. I did not see any atrocities, but I did see a great deal of suffering."

TO AID ARMENIAN ORPHANS.

Montclair Man Gives Land for a Home at Dundee Lake.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 26.—Dikran M. Bedikian of this town has given six acres of land and three buildings at Dundee Lake, north of here, as a home for Armenian children orphaned by the war, and prominent men and women of Montclair have started a campaign to raise $100,000 to endow the institution. Arrangements have been made to transports a number of the homeless Armenian children to this country, one of the steamship lines having agreed to bring them over free of cost.

The children will be taught useful trades and be given a Christian education at the home. The institution will be known as the Armenian Pilgrims' Home, and it is planned to provide accommodations for about one hundred. To stimulate interest in the campaign to raise the endowment fund the local committee has arranged for an exhibition flight by Walter Edwards, aviator, on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 18.

HEAR OHIO STATE CHIMES.

San Francisco and New York Alumni Phone and Dine.

Two hundred Ohio State University graduates, gathered at the Park Avenue Hotel last night, heard the new chimes in the library tower of the university at Columbus peal out "Carmen Ohio." Then they heard Charles Vogelsang, representing President Moore of the Panama-Pacific Exposition and speaking at the exposition, make a presentation speech to President Laylin of the Ohio society of Columbus of a bronze tablet in commemoration of Ohio State University Day at the exposition. Finally, they listened to speeches by Governor Frank B. Willis of Ohio and others.

For more than an hour, beginning at 10 o'clock, New York time, 9 o'clock Columbus time, and 7 o'clock San Francisco time, the Ohio State men kept in touch with each other by telephone, and joined in a three-cornered celebration. F. W. Casler of the New York Telephone Company presided in New York.

A large transmitter had been installed in the college library tower at Columbus, where the chimes are. When Mr. Casler gave the word, the chimes began to play distinctly and continued through three verses of the college song. The "wahoo" cheer of the San Francisco alumni could be heard plainly when the song was ended. Mr. Casler gave the word to San Francisco to "put on the ocean," and while the roar of the Pacific came over the telephone, "movies" of the breakers were thrown on a screen. Then the diners heard "A Little Gray Home in the West" and "Then You'll Remember Me," played in San Francisco on a phonograph.

Besides Governor Willis, Columbus introduced as speakers Thomas C. Mendenhall, Professor of Physics, who built the first telephone in Ohio; Francis C. Caldwell, Professor of Electrical Engineering, and George Knight Professor of Political Economy. The speakers from San Francisco were Thomas F. Hunt, former Dean of Ohio State Agricultural College, and Mr. Vogelsang, Charles G. Bond, President of the New York State Alumni; N. C. Kingsbury, Vice President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and Ernest K. Coulter were speakers from New York.

The regular charge for the telephone service, it was figured out, at the dinner would have been about $10,000.

REFUGEE PROBLEM WORRIES RUSSIA

Cost of Caring for Millions Who Fled from Germans Likely to Exceed $50,000,000.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—The effort to find a solution of the problems connected with the great migration of peoples incident to the Russian withdrawal from Poland and other parts of Russian territory is seriously engaging Russian thought.

The monetary cost of the vast movement already has mounted high. The Imperial Government and the Governments of various provinces and cities of the empire have expended money freely to shelter, feed, and clothe the refugees, whose numbers are estimated as high as 18,000,000 by some. The expenditures of the central Government in this connection are already in excess of 13,000,000 rubles, ($6,500,000) and the total cost is probably more than 100,000,000 rubles. Besides this, there must be reckoned the huge sums involved in abandoned property, and the cost to the railways, over which free passage was given, and whose operations were for a time largely confined to removal of unfortunate victims of the war.

Besides distributing the refugees, mainly peasants, throughout the rural districts of European Russia, the Government is sending larger and larger parties as time goes on to Central Asia and to Siberia, where it is allotting lands to the refugees, it becoming evident that the majority of them will never return to their former homes, regardless of the issue of the war. Most of them have lost all their possessions, except the parcels of clothing they were able to carry with them.

Once installed on virgin soil, which process will necessitate large advances of funds for farm implements, seed, and work animals, it will be virtually impossible, it is held, to upset this arrangement and return the peasants to their former holdings.

A prospect of this sort is displeasing to many Poles, who fear that the Polish question may be receiving a solution far from what they desire. Still there is a natural wish on their part to reestablish the domestic hearth somewhere, without waiting for the end of the war. It is thought by many that only families owning land are likely to seek their old homes again, and it is questioned if even some of these may not choose to remain on their new allotments, liquidating their old titles when the war is over.

To one section of the refugees, that of the Jewish race, it is thought by many that the argument against a return will particularly apply, as it is held that their unwillingness to go back to the cramped conditions of life in the former pale of settlement will naturally be stronger than that among refugees of other races.

One of the most vital questions respecting the refugees is the procurement for them of employment to prevent their pauperization. Many are disposed to lean on Government charity, it appears, and some disbetterment among voluntary workers for the refugees over their frequent refusal to accept employment when offered is reported. To offset this, there is the certainty of ample labor for the cultivation of crops, and of a great growth of colonization on the virgin lands of Asia.

Many prisoners of war are said to be gladly accepting work in the mines and fields. An interesting development in this connection is an order that hereafter the Slavic elements be separated from the Magyar and German speaking. It is considered probable that many Slavic prisoners will settle permanently in Russia.

SAY AUSTRIANS SLEW RUSSIAN PRISONERS

Two Thousand Shot, According to Statement of Well Known Writers and Public Men.

The Russian Chamber of Commerce of America, 60 Broadway, yesterday gave out a statement, through its managing director, Ivan Narodny, in which it is charged that 2,000 Russian war prisoners were recently put to death in Hungary. The story of the massacre, it is declared, has been authenticated. The statement reads:

"A group of prominent Russian writers, journalists, and public men, among whom are Korolenko, Gorki, Doroshewitch, Milukoff, Prince Lwoff, and others, make the appeal to this country that they have authentic proofs of the brutal and barbaric butchery of 2,000 Russian war prisoners in Austria, which took place in October in Debresheny, Hungary. The story reads like one of the time of the Inquisition. It has been corroborated by eyewitnesses and of two prisoners who escaped alive, Mihail Feodoroff of Poltava, and Jan Laitis of Wolmar, Livonia.

"The Russian war prisoners that were kept in Debresheny complained about inhuman treatment and hunger to the higher authorities, but in vain. Spendiarow, one of the prisoners, who had been the leader of the petitioners, was put in a dark cell, where he was kept so long without food and clothing that he went insane. When he was released from the cell he attacked the guard and bit off his finger. The guard knocked him down and shot him to death on the spot before his comrades, Mihailoff and Slim. These men, infuriated at the brutality, aroused an alarm. The same lot happened to them: both men were shot to death on the spot.

"This reckless shooting of defenseless comrades aroused the whole colony of the prisoners to vigorous protests, and, in response, the commanding officer ordered that they all be given fifty blows of the lash, which the soldiers began to execute. This caused indignation and resistance among the prisoners. The same night all the prisoners were commanded out in companies of one hundred to the outskirts of the place and executed. The corpses were covered with straw, kerosene and tar poured over them, and burnt to ashes. Many of the prisoners were not yet dead and groaned in agony when the flames leaped up.

"Only the above-named two prisoners, who had been employed by a local pastor, were permitted to escape the same night through the sympathy of the pastor's wife.

"The Austrian Government has issued a statement that 2,000 Russian war prisoners kept in Debresheny died of an epidemic."

BIG MUNITIONS PLAN UNDER WAY IN CANADA

Financial Houses to Help Factories —Orders Already Reach $500,000,000.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—Announcement is made today that an ambitious munitions plan is under way in Canada by which financial houses are to be called upon to join Canadian factories on active service. It is proposed tremendously to extend the Canadian capacity for producing projectiles; to have a very substantial proportion of the Russian, French, and British shell orders filled in Canada, and to have the business financed by the banking houses and other financial institutions of the Dominion.

The plan constitutes a radical departure from that which has heretofore prevailed. It will mean that instead of borrowing from Great Britain, Canada will make advances of credit and funds to England.

Shell orders which have been filled or which are being filled in Canada have reached the total of $500,000,000. More than 250 manufacturing firms are engaged upon the work, and it is estimated that Canadian firms have installed over $80,000,000 worth of special machinery.

HOSPITALS FOR FRANCE.

Flotilla Committee to Send Portable Plants for Use at Front.

European war relief work has been increased by the advent of a new committee in the field, the Flotilla Committee, working in connection with the Vacation War Relief Committee, under Miss Anne Morgan, which is asking for $12,000 to supply the French Government with portable hospitals to be carried on automobiles. The Vacation War Relief Committee is to supply one flotilla of five machines, and the Flotilla Committee hopes to send another to France by December 15.

Each battery of five machines will be equipped with apparatus that, with three hours' setting up, will create a field hospital capable of rendering efficient service to a whole army division. One car carries the parts of a portable operating room, another a powerful electric lighting and heating plant, a third the laundry outfit, which can handle 600 pounds of soiled linen at a time; the fourth is a dry van, and the fifth the installation for douches, disinfection, destruction of vermin, sterilizing water, shelter tents, &c.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Chairman of the Flotilla Committee, said last night that more than $2,500 had already been collected, although the committee was only organized last Tuesday. Miss Edith Wharton has cabled to the relief workers in this country that the French troops in Alsace are desperately in need of such aid. The flotilla will be presented directly to the French Government.

The following are members of the committee: Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Chairman; Mrs. Charles H. Baldwin, Charles A. Coffin, Frederic R. Coudert, Miss Gladys Hollingsworth, Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, Miss Lucy K. Powell, Mrs. Charles H. Sherrill, T. Tileston Wells, Miss Edith Wetmore, George W. Wickersham, and Eric Fisher Wood.

TO TRY COL. HIRST AFTER SALOON ROW

Court-Martial Is Ordered for Commander of Third United States Infantry.

ENLISTED MAN STRUCK HIM

Soldier Was Sent to Prison for Five Years—Colonel Was In Barroom, Is Charge.

An order has been issued from the headquarters of the Eastern Department of the Army, on Governors Island, for the court-martial of Colonel Robert L. Hirst, U. S. A., the commanding officer of the Third United States Infantry. The court-martial is the result of an altercation, in which Colonel Hirst was struck in the face by an enlisted man of his regiment.

The soldier has since been court-martialed for assaulting his superior officer, and sentenced to serve a term of five years in the military prison at Fort Leavenworth. It was alleged that the soldier was drunk when he struck Colonel Hirst, and the charges on which Colonel Hirst will be brought to trial involve the allegation of private soldiers that the Colonel was not entirely without blame in the affair.

Colonel Hirst is one of the youngest regimental commanders in the army, and a West Pointer of the class of 1886. He is short of stature and wiry, and is often referred to as "Colonel Bobby." At Plattsburg this Summer he was one of the senior commanders in the manoeuvres in which the now famous Business Men's Regiment participated. His headquarters are at Madison Barracks, on Lake Ontario.

The incident which has brought Colonel Hirst up on charges occurred several weeks ago. A number of enlisted men had gathered in a saloon and at least one of them drank too much with the result that he became obstreperous. In some way or other the fact that a disorderly soldier was in the saloon was brought to the attention of Colonel Hirst and he went there to order the soldiers to their quarters.

Colonel Hirst, in telling the story to friends of what happened, said he found several soldiers in the saloon, one of them in an ugly humor and unruly. The appearance of the Colonel was entirely unexpected, and all of the soldiers except the most boisterous one became quiet when he appeared in the barroom. Colonel Hirst walked up to the soldier who was misbehaving and ordered him to leave the saloon and report to his quarters under arrest, whereupon the soldier turned and, according to Colonel Hirst, uttered an unprintable oath and followed it by striking his commander in the mouth, cutting his lips and making an ugly wound.

Colonel Hirst says he did not strike the soldiers, but went into the street and called a policeman. When the policeman entered the room Colonel Hirst asked him to arrest the soldier and lock him up. This request seemed to bring the soldier to his senses, and he begged Colonel Hirst not to have him put in the lockup, pleading that he had several service stripes on his sleeves, and that he had never been in a civilian jail. Colonel Hirst relented and ordered him to be taken to the post guardhouse. The next day charges were preferred, and the court-martial found the soldier guilty and gave him five years.

The affair caused a great deal of talk in the regiment, particularly among the enlisted men, and finally it was rumored that some of the soldiers who had been in the saloon were charging that the Colonel himself was intoxicated the night of the assault, and that his appearance in the saloon was entirely uncalled for. The soldiers who talked against their commander argued that instead of going to the saloon himself he should have sent the officer of the day.

The matter finally reached Governors Island, and General Wood ordered Colonel John L. Chamberlain, the Inspector General of the department, to go to Madison Barracks and make an investigation. As a result of that investigation the court-martial has been ordered.

Colonel Wilbur E. Wiley of the Fifth Cavalry is the President of the court, the other members being Colonel Samuel G. Allen, Colonel Henry C. Davis, Colonel Henry P. Birmingham, Colonel Thomas Ridgway, Colonel Charles R. Noyes, Colonel George W. Gatchell, Colonel William G. Haan, and Lieut. Col. Delamere Skerrett. Captain Charles A. Romeyn of the Second Cavalry is the Judge Advocate.

G. E. Davis Says Convicted Union Leaders Got Dynamite for Him.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—Testifying for the prosecution today at the trial of Matthew A. Schmidt, accused of complicity in the MacNamara dynamite plot, George E. Davis, confessed participant in the McNamara outrages, said Frank C. Webb of New York took him to Michael J. Cunnane of Philadelphia, and the latter obtained dynamite which Davis was to use.

Webb and Cunnane are former officials of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers and were convicted, together with thirty-six other labor leaders, at the dynamite conspiracy trial at Indianapolis in 1912. Webb was sentenced to six years imprisonment, and Cunnane to three by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson on Dec. 31, 1912.

Schmidt is charged with murder in connection with the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times Building five years ago.

Davis, who had never testified in any of the previous trials growing out of the conspiracy for which the McNamara brothers now are serving terms in San Quentin penitentiary, was put on the stand by the prosecution in its effort to connect Schmidt with the crime.

SHOW WOOD HELD TRACTION SHARES

sanitary company stock wasn't worth anything, and I wanted to get rid of it in order to comply with the law."

"Did the company have any contracts with any railroads around New York?"

"It had no contracts with any railroads, but my recollection is that they were negotiating with some company for the use of the machines."

Senator Thompson thought it strange that the witness could not remember the name of the company, and suddenly asked:

"You are pretty rich, aren't you, Mr. Wood?"

Senator James Foley, a member of the committee, made one of his few objections. He thought the witness should not be questioned along this line, but Mr. Wood interrupted to say that he was not rich.

"Yet," continued Mr. Thompson, "you lost $4,999 and don't even remember the name of the concern your company was trying to do business with. It's no use for you to assume the pose that you don't know, for frankly tell you that I don't believe you. Don't you remember any other writing relating to the transfer of stock or the bill of sale?"

"Only the dollar bill," laughed Mr. Wood.

"Through what source did you get the stock?"

"I got it from the company," replied Mr. Wood.

"And you paid $5,000 for it, held it practically for a year, and sold it for $1?"

"That is right."

"What was the par value of the stock?"

"I think it was worth $10 a share. I bought the preferred stock at par and the common stock was given to me as a bonus."

"Wasn't the par value of all the stock $10,000?"

"It had no par value or real value."

Chairman Loses Temper.

"As a Public Service Commissioner, don't you frequently have to take into account the difference between the real and par value of stock?" Chairman Thompson wanted to know, and when the witness hesitated, Chairman Thompson lost his temper and demanded that the witness stop evading the question.

"I'm going to answer in the way that I think is right," replied Commissioner Wood, raising his voice.

"You're going to answer the way I want you to answer," Mr. Thompson replied. "If you don't treat this committee with proper respect, I'll prefer charges against you before tomorrow morning."

"I have no intention of answering in any other way but respectfully," replied the witness.

"Didn't you have certificates showing that the stock represented $10,000 in value?" was the next question.

"I presume I did," said Mr. Wood.

"Did the concern have any other method of producing revenue than the slot machines?"

"No."

"You know that at the time of the sale the Railroad, Steamboat Sanitary Supply Company had negotiations pending with the Sanitary Supply Company?"

"Yes," replied the witness. "That's the name of the concern I couldn't think of a while ago."

"Do you know of any agreement that was finally made with this company?"

"No, I never heard of any."

In reply to a question the witness said he knew of Nelson J. Waterbury, former President of the Railroad, Steamboat Sanitary Supply Company, and of C. W. Streeter, its Vice President. He said he had never heard that the negotiations between the two companies had ceased.

Stock May Be Valuable.

"Do you realize that your stock might be valuable now?"

"No."

"Did you ever try to sell your stock to anybody else?"

The witness said he had spoken to Warren Leslie, brother-in-law of Senator O'Gorman, about it, and Mr. Leslie told him he didn't want it. Mr. Leslie, he said, was a Director of the company. A short adjournment was taken at this point to enable Mr. Wood to try to find Mr. Maher. He went to the office of Mr. Leslie, and after telephoning returned to the committee and said he couldn't locate Mr. Maher.

Mr. Wood said he could not remember how the letter from Mr. Maher acknowledging the sale of stock had reached him, but thought Mr. Maher brought it to his office. Neither could he remember if a transfer stamp had been put on the bill of sale, as required by law.

"What other stocks did you divest yourself of between May 1 and June 1, 1914?" asked Mr. Smith.

"None," said Mr. Wood at first; then he remembered that he held some stock in the North Western Construction Company.

"I was President of the Company for fifteen years," said Mr. Wood, "and held a small interest in it, but sold it out at the end of May, 1914. The stock I held was worth about $1,000."

"What was the total capitalization of the company?

"One thousand dollars. I owned it all. There were a couple of Directors, former employes of my company. In its early days the company did a little contract work, and for five or six years it didn't do anything. It wasn't active in any corporate way. Later on it acquired an interest in some battery patents, and these were later declared an infringement by the United States Circuit Court. The contract work consisted of grading and private house building."

Patented Devices for Railroads.

Mr. Wood said the stock of the company was all sold to individuals. He said he turned over his stock to his brother in part payment of a debt, and that his brother later sold it to William C. Banks for $3,000. The patents referred to, he said, had to do with electrical connections and fuses.

"You sold them to street railways?"

"Yes, and railroads."

The concern is now out of business, the witness said, and the patents were turned over to Mr. Banks, who does business at 30 Church Street under the name of the N. W. Equipment Company.

"What other stock did you divest yourself of?"

"That's all," replied Mr. Wood.

Earlier in the day Mr. Wood said he was paid for his stock in the Interborough City Company by check. He said he exchanged his stock in the company for bonds, and sold the bonds to the Third Avenue Railway Company through Mr. Whitridge and Mr. Maher. He said they came from the Third Avenue Company and were sold back to them. He said he bought the stock in 1904 or 1905 and sold the bonds about four years later.

Former President Waterbury of the Railroad Steamboat Sanitary Supply Company was on the stand a short time and told of a contract he had made at one time with the American Sanitary Supply Company for the use of its patents. He said he was operating the contract now as an individual and did not have any connection with the company.

"I don't see how my private affairs have any connection with this investigation," said Mr. Waterbury.

"Frankly," said Senator Thompson, "I want to show the relations between you and the American Sanitary Supply Company."

The witness promised to produce the contract today.

SAYS ANSONIA IS FIREPROOF.

W. E. D. Stokes Testifies in Prevention Bureau Case.

In the hearing of the adjourned case against the Onward Construction Company, builders and owners of the Hotel Ansonia, yesterday before Magistrate Cobb in the West Side Court, W. E. D. Stokes, Secretary of the corporation, testified that the Ansonia is the most perfectly constructed hotel building in the city, as regards fireproofing.

A summons was issued to the company a week ago on complaint of the Fire Prevention Bureau, charging that certain orders for the installation of fire retarding devices had been disregarded.

Mr. Stokes qualified as a building expert and explained in detail the technical layout of the building. He pointed out that some years ago a fire occurred in the sub-cellar of the hotel, and that 32,000 feet of lumber and twenty barrels of shellac were partly destroyed. This fire, he said, was confined to the subcellar. He also said that when the building was planned, he, as its supervising constructor, consulted former Fire Chief Hugh Bonner, who advised him how to fireproof the building.

The case was adjourned until Dec. 13, when it will be resumed in the Chief Magistrate's Court.

CHINA MAY JOIN ENTENTE.

Press Is Favorably Disposed, but Watches Japan's Course.

PEKING, Nov. 26.—The question of re-establishment of a monarchical form of government in China has been overshadowed for the time being by the discussion of the proposal that China shall enter the Entente Alliance, which is attracting wide attention. The Chinese press in general seems to be inclined favorably toward the proposal, and regards the attitude of Japan as the chief barrier which might be interposed.

The newspapers take the view that if Japan seconds the invitation of her allies, China could not refuse to enter the Entente. The Japanese minister, Eki Hicki, declines to discuss the position of his Government.

The Chinese public is studying editorials in the Japanese newspapers in an effort to discern from them the probable attitude of Tokio. An editorial reprinted from the Mainichi Shimbun of Osaka, Japan, by the Peking Gazette today says: "China is a life and death problem to Japan. Japan should be absolutely free and independent so far as concerns her relations with China. Japan should not for a moment lose her standing as the guardian of peace in the Far East."

WILLIAMS REPEATS HIS USURY CHARGES

Replies to Bankers' Committee That Excessive Rates Are Widespread Evil.

CITES OFFICIAL REPORTS

Says 1,022 National Banks in 25 States Averaged Not Less Than 10 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, tonight made public a letter which he had written to the Executive Committee of the National Bank Section of the American Bankers' Association, replying to a letter complaining that his recent assertions that a great many national banks had charged usurious interest rates, were too sweeping. Mr. Williams repeats his charges. In part his letter follows:

You inform me that your committee unanimously adopted a resolution declaring it to be the opinion of the committee that the usurious practices complained of "are confined only to some sections of the country, and are not general," and you ask this office "to make such modifications and corrections of the statements embraced in that letter as will do justice to the great number of banks which have not violated the statutes relating to rates of interest."

My statement that "a great many national banks have grossly violated Section 5,197, U. S. R. S., against usury," is literally true, and stands in no need of correction. It is a pleasure, however, to me to be able to state that the records show that a large majority of the national banks of the United States, according to the latest reports, are keeping their interest rates within the maximum figures permitted by law.

Twelve hundred and forty-seven national banks in 36 States, covering 75 per cent. of the total area of the continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, in their statements of Sept. 2, 1915, admitted under oath that they were charging on some of their loans rates in excess of the maximum rates permissible, even by special contract, by the laws of their own States or of the United States. The penalty for the charging of usury in several States is a fine or imprisonment, or both.

The records also show that as of Sept. 2, 1915, 1,022 national banks in 25 States were, by their sworn reports, charging an average of not less than 10 per cent., and in some cases 18 per cent. on all of their loans. The sworn statements of the banks in one particular State include a list of 131 banks whose maximum rates of interest ranged from 15 to 24 per cent., 67 banks whose maximum rate was between 25 and 60 per cent., 22 banks which charged between 60 and 100 per cent., and 26 banks whose max mum rates were 100 per cent. or more.

The sworn reports of the banks also show that, on Sept. 2, 1915, 2,743 national banks out of a total of 7,613, being more than 36 per cent. of all the national banks of the country, were charging on some of their loans 10 per cent. per annum or more—in hundreds of banks very much more.

When 2,743 national banks in 42 States, covering 98 per cent. of the total area of the continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, admit under oath that they are charging 10 per cent. or more on some of their loans, and when 1,022 national banks in 25 States, which include 74 per cent. of the total area of the continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, also confess that they have been charging on an average anywhere from 10 per cent. to 18 per cent. or more on all of their loans, is it not flying in the face of facts to suggest that the practice is confined either to a small area or to a few banks?

It is also worthy of note that a majority of all the national banks in 21 States, including over 65 per cent. of the total area of the continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, admit that they are charging as high as 10 per cent. on some loans, and a majority of all the national banks in six States, whose area embraces more than one-fourth of the territory of the continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, admit, likewise, under oath, that they have been charging an average of 10 per cent. or more on all of their loans.

Of the 1,022 national banks which certified under oath that they were receiving an average of 10 per cent. or more on all of their loans, 2 were in Illinois, 6 in Minnesota, 2 in Missouri, 23 in Georgia, 6 in Florida, 21 in Alabama, 2 in Louisiana, 317 in Texas, 17 in Arkansas, 3 in Tennessee, 90 in North Dakota, 25 in South Dakota, 18 in Nebraska, 5 in Kansas, 38 in Montana, 14 in Wyoming, 37 in Colorado, 26 in New Mexico, 300 in Oklahoma, 12 in Washington, 10 in Oregon, 13 in California, 2 in Utah, 1 in Nevada, and 33 banks in Idaho.

During this same period, while so many national banks were charging excessive rates to customers, the Federal Reserve Banks were offering money freely to the national banks in every part of the country at rates varying from 3½ to 5 per cent., according to the class of paper and the time to maturity. There was no reason why sound, well-managed banks in any section could not have got at these low rates all the money required to supply the needs of customers, whether farmers, merchants, or manufacturers, or why the national banks should not have loaned the funds to their customers in every case well within the rates prescribed by law.

The facts developed in the investigation recently conducted by this office with reference to usury have suggested the desirability of requesting national banks to print hereafter in their published statements of condition the maximum rates of interest charged, and the amount of money which they may be lending at rates in violation of Section 5,197, U. S. R. S., relative to usury. If this is done, will not the public learn, fairly and rightly, which banks, in the matter of interest charges, are conforming to the law and which are not? Such publication could do no injustice to any bank that honestly tries to keep within the laws which all bank Directors have solemnly pledged themselves to observe.

To illustrate the unfairness of some of the complaints made by usurers, and which reach this office, let me take this occasion to call attention to an attack made upon the Federal Reserve system just a year ago by a certain national bank which denounced the 6½ per cent. rate for long-time paper, established at the outset by Federal Reserve banks (though soon reduced to 5 per cent.) as "unreasonable," "exacting," and "prohibitive," "prejudicial to the new system," and calculated to shake "confidence" in the "members of the Federal Reserve Board."

An examination of the complainant bank which this office promptly caused to be made, showed that this bank, with assets of more than a million dollars, had been a gross violator of the usury laws; had been charging its customers for money more than ten times the 6½ per cent. rate, which it characterized as "unreasonable, exacting, and prohibitive," and had in the three or four months preceding its complaint made more than 400 loans in amounts from $50 to over $10,000 each, on which it had exacted rates ranging from 10 per cent. to 100 per cent., including one loan of $2,067 at 64 per cent., and another for $553 at 85 per cent.

EDITH RUBEL TRIO PLAYS.

New Organization Makes a Fine Impression in Aeolian Hall.

The Edith Rubel Trio, a new organization in the concert field, made its first appearance last night at Aeolian Hall. Its members are Edith Rubel, violin; Vera Poppe, 'cello, and Brenda Putnam, piano. The program contained only one trio performed in full, Brahms's in B, Op. 8, and was made up with that exception of smaller compositions and movements from trios. In the former class were old music by Mattheson, Handel, and Rameau, with pieces by Debussy and Joseph Suk, while there were excerpts from trios by the contemporary composers Charles W. Cadman and Arthur Foote. The program itself was interesting.

As an organization the players made a decided impression. Their work was excellent individually, and they possessed the feeling for ensemble playing to a marked extent. As the methods of the pianist often determine more than any other one thing the success of an ensemble in which it figures, the playing of Brenda Putnam deserves special mention for its taste, animation, fine tonal quality, and, withal, its continence. But the work of all three was notable for many of the qualities that make for best results in the medium. The only thing lacking was a shade of breadth and bravura which was sometimes lacking, for instance, in the climax of the last movement of Brahms's composition.

IRVING PLACE GALA NIGHT.

A gala performance of Leo Ascher's operetta, "Hoheit tast Walzer," was given in the Irving Place Theatre last night for the benefit of the American Red Cross Hospital in Munich. This is the only hospital in Germany supported wholly by American subscriptions.

At the end of the second act the Rev. Dr. Lubeck told of the institution and its work, and made a plea for subscriptions. Rudolf Christians, director of the theatre, also spoke briefly, and presented a subscription to the fund to which all the members of the company and employes of the theatre contributed.

Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, was represented by Baron von Halmhausen. The audience, which filled the theatre, included representatives of the German, Arion, and Liederkranz Clubs and many men and women prominent in German-American circles in the city. The parapet of the balcony and the boxes were decorated with many American, German, Austrian, and Red Cross flags, and the blue and white of Bavaria was in evidence. Before the overture the orchestra played the American and German national anthems.

SMOOT ATTACKS M'ADOO'S FIGURES

Secretary Accused by Republican Senator of Juggling the Treasury Balance.

NEW KIND OF BOOKKEEPING

Items Arbitrarily Shifted from Liabilities to Assets, He Charges —Criticises the Estimates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Senator Smoot of Utah, the most active Republican member of the Finance Committee, today bitterly assailed the statement issued yesterday by Secretary McAdoo as to the finances of the country and the steps that should be taken to provide funds for the defense program. Mr. Smoot referred only briefly to the proposed new revenue measures mentioned by Mr. McAdoo, saying he did not think they would accomplish what Mr. McAdoo hoped. He devoted himself mainly to criticism of Mr. McAdoo's figures, which he said resulted from a desperate effort at juggling to show that the Treasury was not now practically bankrupt.

Mr. Smoot issued the following statement:

Points Out Discrepancies.

"Having read with care Secretary McAdoo's statement, which was probably prepared with even more care, I am at a loss to determine whether it presages another change in the form of the daily Treasury statement, which has already undergone so many metamorphoses. Certainly Mr. McAdoo's statement does not correspond with the daily statement of the United States Treasury issued on the date with which he begins his tabulations. That is to say, the Secretary declares that on July 1, 1915, there was a credit balance in the general fund of $104,170,198.78, and yet the official daily statement of the United States Treasury, bearing date of July 1, 1915, shows the net balance in the general fund to be $76,157,831.33, and this latter item is printed in the daily statement in bold type and shows a shrinkage from the previous day's statement of nearly $6,000,000. This difference alone amounts to $28,012,274.45.

"Again, on Sept. 30, 1915, the daily Treasury statement shows the net balance in the general fund was $40,898,804.97. The next day's statement, without the addition of proceeds of a bond sale, and with an actual decrease in the revenues of the Government over expenditures, shows the balance as $128,083,545.23. This apparent increase of $87,184,660.26 in the Treasury balance was in bookkeeping alone, and was procured by the transfer from the liabilities to the assets side of the ledger of the disbursing officers' balances, the Government banknotes redemption fund, both of which have always been recognized as liabilities of the Government, and by the inclusion of subsidiary silver coin, minor coins, and silver bullion, none of which had ever been reckoned as available for the payment of the Government expenses. The only way that I can account for this change in bookkeeping is the imperative necessity to make it appear that the Federal Treasury is not practically bankrupt.

"At the close of business March 3, 1913, the Republican Party turned over to its Democratic successors a Treasury containing a net general balance of $140,865,711.78. On Sept. 30, 1915, the eve of the first appearance of Secretary McAdoo's new and misconceived form of daily statement, that balance had been diminished by $106,436,816.81, which represented the cost to the American people of Democratic Administration to that date.

Shrinkage of $114,000,000.

"Nor is this all. The mythical balance of $128,083,345.23, which he so proudly boasted on the first of last October, had decreased by the end of that month nearly $6,000,000. So that the total deficit under this Democratic Administration in the Treasury up to the first of November of this year amounts to more than $114,000,000. And this splendid result has been achieved without the expenditure of a single additional dollar for the national defense, and in spite of the fact that the Treasury had in the meantime received the benefit of the burdensome war taxes and the cumbersome and inefficient income tax.

"Basing my judgment upon facts already demonstrated, I am of the opinion that the estimates of revenue contained in Mr. McAdoo's latest statement are excessive, and that his estimate of disbursements is too small. This certainly is the case with the revenue of $18,000,000 expected from sugar for the months of May and June, 1916, and the disbursements for supplemental estimates and deficiencies for the fiscal year 1916 will be nearer $20,000,000 than $12,000,000.

"Again, the estimate of Mr. McAdoo for disbursements for additional expenditures for a greater national defense, or preparedness, of $93,800,000 is $42,473,143.59 less than the estimates given out by the War and Navy Departments and approved by the President, for they amounted to $136,273,143. Is the program for national defense to be slaughtered in order to show a favorable Treasury balance?

"Nothing is provided in the statement of disbursements for the building of the railroad in Alaska, nor is one cent provided for the Administration's ship purchase scheme, and, with these few items and many more that could be mentioned, the total new revenue to be raised for the fiscal year of 1917, instead of being $112,806,394.22, as the statement shows, will be nearer $300,000,000. The suggestions which Mr. McAdoo puts forward for providing these additional millions to the Treasury, will, I am confident, fall much short of the desired result. Whether he will then turn to an abhorrent bond issue, or to an upward revision of the tariff, equally repugnant to him, time alone can tell."

Woman Agitator Championed.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Two hundred persons gathered in Institute Hall, in Market Street, at the call of the Elizabeth G. Flynn Defense Committee of New York last night. Speeches were made attacking the Paterson authorities for reviving the indictment charging the woman agitator with advocating personal injury. A collection of $12.03 was taken up. Speakers were Leonard D. Abbott, Miss Frances Ward Björkman, Mrs. Marion P. Cothren, and men who talked in Italian and Russian.

ROBERTS BABY IS WORSE.

Infection Has Developed in the Spine of the Little Sufferer.

Infection has developed in the spine of the Roberts baby, which is at the Babies' Hospital at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, while nature takes its course after the decision of four physicians and surgeons that its life would be shortened by an operation.

The condition of the child is worse apparently than was indicated in the official bulletin, for there has set in an inflammation of the exposed cord. The surgeons believe that they can keep the irritated surfaces clean and prevent blood poisoning, which would soon bring death.

If it is possible to perform an operation and the child lives, it is the opinion of surgeons that at least two months must pass. The chances are very poor, however, for the child surviving. She is considered as in a dying condition. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Roberts, are leaving the fate of the child entirely in the hands of the surgeons.

None of the surgeons connected with the Babies' Hospital knew anything about the proposed visit of the Chicago surgeon, and it was made plain that he had not been invited by them. It is not considered likely that he will have the opportunity of seeing the child.

The Coroners met yesterday afternoon and discussed the question of physicians refusing to prolong the lives of defective babies. After the meeting Coroner Israel Feinberg, who presided, gave out a statement saying the Coroners agreed that no individual had the right to stand as arbiter of life and death. The Board of Coroners announced that it had full power to investigate such cases.

CRASHES DUE TO FOG ON RAIL AND WATER

Three Successive Collisions on Long Island Road Injure Passengers and Tie Up Traffic.

FERRYBOATS HIT HEAD ON

Incoming Liners Forced to Anchor in Harbor—Sound Steamers Delayed.

The heaviest fog that boatmen in the waters around this city have encountered in many months blanketed the harbor and Long Island for several hours yesterday morning, causing several boat and train collisions, in which many persons were badly shaken up and some severely injured. Traffic was tied up on land and water.

Three persons are in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica, as a result of three successive collisions on the Long Island Railroad, near Jamaica, which the railroad officials said were due to the fog. Thirty persons were injured in the collisions, many of whom would not give their names, and hundreds of commuters were delayed in getting to their offices in this city. There was a head-on collision between two trolley cars at Jamaica. In the North River a ferryboat with 2,000 passengers crashed into a bulkhead, knocking several persons down; two other ferryboats grazed just outside the Barclay Street slip, and other collisions were narrowly averted. Sound steamers and ocean liners were forced to anchor.

The first Long Island Railroad collision occurred at 7:25 o'clock in the morning. A local train bound for Brooklyn, and standing in the Jamaica station, was struck from behind by another Brooklyn-bound train and pushed into the rear of a third train, bound from Patchogue to Long Island City. The front and rear vestibules of the Brooklyn trains were telescoped. John T. Way, 49, of 462 Fulton Street, Jamaica, was taken to the hospital with a concussion of the brain.

Charles McLean, motorman of the middle train, said that the fog prevented him from seeing the train ahead until he was within twenty feet of it, making it impossible for him to stop quickly. The glass in several cars of the trains was shattered, and the cars were derailed, blocking the Brooklyn-bound track for two hours in the midst of the commuters' morning rush.

A local train bound from Hempstead to Brooooklyn was standing at the Brenton Avenue crossing, about half a mile east of the Jamaica station, when another local crashed into it, with practically the same results as in the first collision. The vestibules were telescoped and passengers were hurled from their seats and showered with broken glass. Jacob Nann, a trainman, and Pasquale Guisto, a lampman, both railway employes and both of Jamaica, were taken to the hospital with concussion of the brain.

A head-on collision between two trolleys of the Long Island Traction Company occurred at Rockaway Boulevard and Goshen Street, south of Jamaica. Neither motorman saw the other car until it was too late to stop. Several of the passengers were cut and bruised, but they had left the place before the police and an ambulance arrived.

Two men required the attention of a physician as the result of the Central Railroad of New Jersey ferryboat Lakewood's collision with its pier at the foot of Liberty Street. They were George W. Curtis, 70, a merchant, of Elizabeth, N. J., and Frederick C. Fowler, a broker, of Jersey City. They were knocked down and severely bruised.

The ferryboat Mayor Gaynor of the Municipal Line and the Manhattan of the same line narrowly escaped a collision when the Manhattan's pilot, after a fifty-five minutes' trip, steered his boat for the slip already occupied by the Mayor Gaynor at South Ferry. The Lackawanna ferryboat Hamburg and a West Shore ferryboat were driven together by the tide just outside of the Barclay Street slip and several men on the Hamburg were thrown under the horses' hoofs.

The White Star liner Baltic, bound from Liverpool with 174 passengers aboard, and eight other steamers, including the Greek steamer Themistocles, two fruit steamers, the Barranca and Olinda, from the West Indies, the Southern Pacific steamer El Norte, and four big freighters which had come over to load grain, were compelled to anchor off Robbins' Reef for about three hours and a half. Captain Beadnew of the Baltic said he left Quarantine at 7:30 o'clock and should have landed before 9 o'clock. As it was he did not reach the pier until 12:45 o'clock. Several of the passengers missed their Western train connections. The mails were not delayed, as two mail tenders brought them up from Quarantine through the fog.

"The Baltic was the first to anchor," Captain Beadnew said. "We could not see the bow of the ship from the bridge. After a short time we heard the other ships blowing their foghorns as they came up and heard the anchors dropped, but we could not distinguish them. The fog lifted very suddenly and to my amazement we were in the midst of a small-sized fleet."

Many of the Sound steamers were held off Norton's Point for an hour. Some of them, however, had reached their piers before the fog settled.

FINED FOR LOCKED FACTORY

Inspector Finds Employes Working on Sunday with Exits Fastened.

Frank Speaker, a manufacturer of overcoats on the fifth floor of 401-405 East 124th Street, was fined $20 on each of two charges by Magistrate House in Harlem Court yesterday.

Alexander Golman, an inspector in the Labor Department, testified that he entered the factory on Sunday, Nov. 14, and found eleven persons at work, eight of them women, and all doors locked. He said a foreman in charge had the keys to the doors in his pocket.

Speaker declared he had not given the employes permission to work, and did not know that they were there.

Pleads Guilty of Insurance Fraud.

Wesley L. Beckhorn, a lightning-rod salesman of 449 East Water Street, pleaded guilty before Judge Wadhams in General Sessions yesterday to putting in a false claim for insurance against the Automobile Insurance Company of 100 William Street. Last December Beckhorn bought for $500 an automobile, which he insured for $3,480 s machine. The machine was destroyed by fire, after which Beckhorn put in his claim on the policy. An investigation followed, and he was indicted for making false representations. After his plea of guilty he was remanded to the Tombs until Dec. 2, when he will be sentenced.

TO REVIEW CRITIC'S CASE.

Appellate Division Grants Woollcott Petition for Appeal.

Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of THE NEW YORK TIMES, in his litigation to compel the Shubert theatrical producers to afford him admittance to their theatres, was successful yesterday in the Appellate Division in obtaining an order from that court to take his case on review before the Court of Appeals.

The point certified yesterday to the court of final resort is:

"Does the complaint state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action?"

In July the Appellate Division dismissed an injunction issued by Supreme Court Justice Hendrick restraining the Shuberts from refusing Mr. Woollcott admittance to their theatres. Later, the theatrical producers asked the lower court for judgment on the pleadings, setting up that even though Mr. Woollcott's complaint were true, there was not sufficient cause for litigation. The lower court found in favor of the Shuberts in this detail.

Mr. Woollcott, through his attorney, Alfred A. Cook of Leventritt, Cook & Nathan, then appealed from this latter ruling. Passing on this appeal, the Appellate Division yesterday in a per curiam decision says:

"The order appealed from is affirmed, with $10 costs and disbursements, on the opinion of Scott, J., rendered July 9, 1915, on the decision of an appeal in this case reversing an order granting an injunction. The order to be entered hereon may contain a provision allowing an appeal to the Court of Appeals; the question to be certified to be: Does the complaint state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action?"

SHORTHAND TEACHERS MEET

Eastern Gregg Association in Annual Session at Hotel McAlpin.

The Eastern Gregg Shorthand Association began its second annual convention at the Hotel McAlpin yesterday. Between 250 and 300 teachers from all cities of the East were gathered to discuss new methods in their profession.

Horace G. Healey, editor of The Business Journal, in an address to the teachers declared that, instead of a library of five feet of books, as specified by President Eliot of Harvard, his library for aspiring young business men could be contained in almost as many inches.

He said: "Dr. O. S. S. Martin's 'Pushing to the Front'; Ralph Waldo Trine's 'In Tune with the Infinite'; Samuel Smile's 'Self-Help and Thrift'; Senator Ingalls's thirteen-line verse on opportunity; Elbert Hubbard's 'Message to Garcia'; 'Beautiful Penmanship,' by an unnamed author; several of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's books, and Russell H. Conwell's 'Acres of Diamonds' comprise a library of inestimable value to the man who wants to succeed."

Last night's session was interesting to all the teachers, being a contest among them for ten-minute periods of instruction with a number of new students before them.

To Talk on Unemployment.

Barnes, State Director of Public Employment Bureaus, will speak on "Facts About Unemployment" tomorrow (Sunday) morning at 11 o'clock in the Masonic Temple, Clermont and Lafayette Avenues, Brooklyn. The talk will be given under the auspices of the Fellowship of the Life Moro Abundant. Mr. Barnes is a national authority on the problem of employment.

"THE GREATEST STORY THE WAR HAS PRODUCED."
—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE THREE THINGS

By Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews

Author of "The Perfect Tribute," etc.

The Forge in which the soul of a man was tested.

Passionate pity for the oppressed, the eager chivalry that cannot contemplate a wrong unmoved, led a young American to throw himself into the horrid welter of European warfare. They led him into the trenches, where he lost his class prejudice; left him desperately wounded upon the battlefield, where he found his God, and into the hospital ward where he learned that humanity is greater than races. Here is one of those rare messages that goes straight from the heart of the creator to the heart of the reader.

MITCHEL SAYS POLK WANTED BURR OUT

He Agreed With Corporation Counsel That Assistant Was Ineffective.

TRACK REMOVAL CASE CITED

Thompson Invites Mayor to Tell Committee Why Burr Is Out and Tracks Are in 11th Avenue.

Mayor Mitchel issued a statement last night in which he said that William P. Burr, the Assistant Corporation Counsel who had charge of the fight to force the removal of the New York Central's tracks from Eleventh Avenue, had been dismissed at the expressed desire of the then Corporation Counsel Frank L. Polk.

Mr. Polk, who is Counselor to the State Department, went back to Washington after repeating that it was the Mayor who insisted on a new man in Mr. Burr's place. William B. Ellison, Burr's former chief as Corporation Counsel, sided with the Mayor, and gave it as his opinion that Mr. Polk was responsible for Mr. Burr's removal. Mr. Burr said he didn't know who dismissed him and he didn't care, only Mr. Polk had told him "privately" that it was the Mayor. He said that, no matter who ousted him, it was the Mayor's fault that the trains still run in Eleventh Avenue.

As a climax to the dispute, Senator George L. Thompson last night invited Mayor Mitchel to appear before the Thompson Legislative Committee and explain why Mr. Burr was out of the Corporation Counsel's office and why the tracks were not out of Eleventh Avenue.

"The Mayor doesn't have to appear," said the Senator. "We won't subpoena him, but at the same time he is welcome to tell us his side of the case. Indeed, I would be glad to hear what Mayor Mitchel has to say about the Eleventh Avenue tracks."

Mayor Calls Burr Disgruntled.

Despite the orders of his physicians that he should pay no attention to public affairs, Mayor Mitchel, who is far from a well man, yesterday read further criticisms of him by Mr. Burr, and last night dictated this statement:

"I do not think the people of this city wish their Executive to indulge in controversy with a discharged and disgruntled city employe, but the statements made by Mr. Burr have been given a pseudo importance by the attention paid them by the legislative committee.

"As the records show, I have consistently, and in season and out, advocated, urged and worked for the elimination of the Eleventh Avenue tracks, and I may, indeed, refer to myself as the city official who has taken the laboring oar toward that end. It was in this connection that I had occasion to observe the futile efforts of Mr. Burr to obtain practical results after some years of endeavor, so that when Mr. Polk stated to me that he regarded Mr. Burr as ineffective, I concurred in his expressed desire to dispense with Mr. Burr's services.

"In point of fact, my dissatisfaction with Mr. Burr was not because he had attacked the New York Central Railroad Company, as he now has the effrontery to claim, but because his work in the matter of procuring the removal of these tracks was unsatisfactory and wholly barren of results.

"The history of my efforts to procure the removal of the Eleventh Avenue tracks is so consistent and so completely evidenced by public records that Mr. Burr could not have failed to know my attitude upon the question, and to realize that his dismissal was not for the reason he states to have been the cause."

Mr. Polk, who testified before the Thompson committee that Burr was removed because he had not effected the removal of the tracks, said:

"In our office Mr. Burr was considered ineffective. The Mayor knew this and insisted upon a new man."

Burr Replies to Mayor.

The Mayor's statement was read to Mr. Burr last night, and when he was asked to reply to it, he said:

"It is exceedingly disagreeable to me to enter into a controversy with the Mayor, who is ill. I sincerely hope that his health may soon be restored that he may be able to give details as to how I failed to secure the removal of the tracks from Eleventh Avenue.

"I do not ask any one to take my word, but I refer them to the city records. It makes no difference who was responsible for my removal, the removal of those tracks has been up to the Mayor and the Board of Estimate since 1911, when Chapter 77 of the Laws of 1911 put the power upon them. The power has been with the Board of Estimate ever since. The matter has been out of the hands of the Corporation Counsel since 1911, three years before Mr. Polk took office. He doesn't know now and didn't know in 1914 anything about what I had done; I don't think he knows anything about the whole case. He never mentioned Eleventh Avenue tracks to me in his life, and as for his finding my work in his connection ineffient, he decided to remove me about the middle of February, 1914, after he had been in office fifteen days.

"How could he have known whether I was efficient or not? I do know that he told me privately that he had nothing to do with my going, but that it was the Mayor's doing. Then as a reflection upon my 'inefficiency' he employed me soon after my removal in the Amsterdam case, one of the most important before his department. I repeat, he doesn't know what he is talking about when he says he observed that my work with regard to the Eleventh Avenue tracks was ineffective.

Holds Mitchel Responsible.

"However that may be, the Mayor cannot avoid responsibility. On March 27, 1913, two years after the Mayor received the power, a committee reported a plan for the removal of the tracks to the Board of Estimate. That report was signed by Mr. Mitchel, Controller Prendergast, Mr. McAneny, and Chief Engineer Lewis. It can be found printed in the minutes of the Board of Estimate. From that time Mr. Mitchel was in charge of the matter as President of the Board of Aldermen. He has been in charge of it since Jan. 1, 1914, as Mayor of the City of New York. The failure to remove those tracks is up to Mayor Mitchel, and if I was inefficient before February, 1914, who has been inefficient since? There has been no change in the situation."

Ex-Corporation Counsel Ellison, who was largely responsible for Mr. Burr's retention in office when he himself went out, said he had always regarded Mr. Polk as responsible for Mr. Burr's removal, and had never regarded Mr. Burr an inefficient.

"I have never felt," he said, "that Mr. Burr's removal was at the instance of Mayor Mitchel. I have always felt that it was at the direct instance of Corporation Counsel Polk.

"Burr served under me, and a more efficient man I don't believe ever served in the office of the Corporation Counsel of the City of New York. He had charge of the Consolidated Gas case, and the reduction of rates was a sequence to his work. Most of that was when I was Corporation Counsel. Day and night Burr gave his time to the city. Of course there was a long interval between the time when I was in office and when Mayor Mitchel took office, but I interested myself in the retention of Burr, because I knew Burr was a valuable public official.

Ellison Indorses Burr.

"There was a great deal said when his removal was threatened, but I never understood that the Mayor sought his removal or had any desire other than that the work Mr. Burr was engaged in be carried out, and I believe if the Mayor consented to his removal in the belief that Burr was derelict in the cases affecting the New York Central, that he was misinformed, and that the responsibility for Burr's removal is not upon the Mayor, but entirely upon Mr. Polk."

Friends of Mr. Burr yesterday made much of the allegation that Mr. Polk and Cornelius Vanderbilt were roommates at Yale, and that Mr. Polk had often been associated professionally with the Vanderbilt interests.

MAYOR RECOVERS RAPIDLY.

Expects to be at His Desk in City Hall Within Ten Days.

Physicians in attendance on Mayor Mitchel said last night that he was on the road to a rapid recovery. While his condition was not quite so good as on Wednesday, that was said to be a natural consequence of the slight strain and excitement of being moved on Thursday from Roosevelt Hospital to his home at the Peter Stuyvesant Apartments on Riverside Drive in accordance with his wish to eat Thanksgiving dinner at home.

The Mayor's nurse refused him to all callers yesterday, with the exception of his secretary, Theodore Rousseau, who saw him for an hour late in the afternoon.

Mayor Mitchel, who was removed from the hospital two days sooner than is customary for appendicitis patients, is confident that he will be back at his desk in the City Hall within ten days.

BARONESS VON HUTTEN

THE STORY OF THE CHRISTMAS SHIP
By LILIAN BELL.

This new book, just off the press is an authentic account of the Greatest Philanthropy of recent years; it is the story of how one woman originated an idea, and with the co-operation of forty million Americans, sent SEVEN MILLION CHRISTMAS GIFTS to the War Orphans of Europe.

It is an unusual work on an unusual subject, and the personal element in it should appeal to you, as the story abounds in pathetic incidents which will touch the hearts of any who read it.

Every one who reads Bell is familiar with Miss Bell's gripping literary style, and knows how even the most commonplace subject is invested with a lively interest by her flashing wit. Her well-equipped mind is supplemented by a wonderful ability as a descriptive writer, and under her prodigal pen the story of the Christmas Ship fairly flames.

If you were one of the people who took part in this great work you should have a copy.

CHURCHMEN START REVOLT.

Demand Modification of the Ritual of the Stonemen's Fellowship.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 26.—More than 600 ministers and laymen, representing all the Protestant churches in Philadelphia, met in the Arch Street Methodist Episcopal Church this afternoon and voted practically unanimously to have a committee wait upon the Rev. H. C. Stone and George Wharton Pepper, as leaders of the Stonemen's Fellowship, with 104,000 members, and demand that they modify the organization's ritual. The ministers and laymen are determined that the rules as to the sacrament and the laying on of hands, or confirmation, by a Protestant Episcopal Bishop shall be modified.

Just what the ministers and laymen would do in case Mr. Stone and Mr. Pepper refused to meet their demands was not decided. One of the ministers urged that some action in view of this exigency be taken, but his motion was voted down. It was apparent that the majority sought to avoid an open clash, but it was also evident that the consensus among the ministers was that in case the leaders of the Stonemen refused their request, they would call upon their church members to withdraw from the organization. Recently Mr. Stone and Mr. Pepper in a public statement said that under no circumstances would the founders of the Stonemen modify the ritual.

The meeting voted today to accept a report that was submitted by a group of interdenominational clergymen, which was headed by the Rev. Dr. A. E. Barnett. The report was drafted by the Rev. Dr. Robert Hunter, the Rev. M. J. Hyndman, and Elder Richard M. Wallace, representing the Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Dr. George B. Reese, the Rev. Dr. Peter Clarke Wright, the Rev. E. D. Pollard, the Rev. George D. Adams, and the Rev. A. J. Rowland, representing the Baptist Church; by the Rev. S. M. Vernon, the Rev. E. F. Randolph, and the Rev. W. G. Jones, representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Dr. A. E. Barnett, representing the Reformed Episcopal Church.

PAINTINGS BRING $3,780.

Jourdan's "Innocence" for $305 at Estates' Sale—Chinese Porcelains.

There were two sales at the Silo Galleries yesterday, that of Chinese porcelains and teak wood furniture in the afternoon and of paintings in the evening. The latter belonging to the estates of Ermina J. Proal and E. A. Raymond, brought $3,780 for the first 104 pictures. The Holland Galleries paid $305 for "Innocence," by A. Jourdan; "The Hunt," by Carlo Datti, went to W. L. Coughlin for $240, and the same buyer paid $80 for a pair of water colors by Simanetti.

A large and attractive picture, broad fields with a young girl the central figure, "The Shepherdess," by Carpentier, went to the Holland Galleries for $205. "In the Garden," by Hermandes, went to Stachelberg for $175.

The sale will be concluded this evening when the painters' palette of Sir Frederick Leighton will be sold. The palette after his death was placed upon the coffin of the artist as the body lay in state in the Royal Academy in London. It was removed and later purchased by Mrs. Julia Linthieum, who brought it to this country.

The returns for the afternoon's sale were $2,000. A pair of powder blue vases, club shape, went to He Chong Yum for $60, an interesting teakwood cabinet to G. S. McDonald for $40, and a pair of elaborate teakwood chairs to a prominent New York merchant for $34. The sale will be concluded this afternoon, when the Chan-Weng-Pak collection of Chinese coins will be sold.

$10,000,000 GOLD ON BALTIC.

Biggest Importation by Any One Ship Since the War Began.

The White Star liner Baltic arrived yesterday from Liverpool with $10,000,000 in gold stowed in her specie room, the largest shipment that has arrived in New York on any one vessel since the war started. Five million dollars was taken off the liner in the afternoon and the remainder was kept on board all night under guard consisting of two detectives and two of the ship's officers besides the regular quartermasters on duty at the gangways.

No one was allowed to go on board the Baltic without a special pass from the head office at 9 Broadway, or the General Superintendent on the pier. The gold will be taken ashore this morning, the agents said.

The $10,000,000 is consigned to seven different banking firms, that of J. P. Morgan & Co., taking the largest share.

GERMAN DESERTER BARRED.

Will Be Kept Here with 500 Other Aliens Until War Ends.

Karl Schulz, the German deserter, who arrived here from Rotterdam on Thursday on the Holland-America steamship Noorderdyk, was taken to Ellis Island yesterday morning and ordered excluded by a special board of inquiry.

If he were deported on the Noorderdyk Schulz would be taken off by a British warship and sent to one of the concentration camps in England; so orders were issued by the Commissioner of Immigration to detain him here until the war is over. This means that the steamship company, which had nothing to do with his stowing away on one of its liners, will have to pay about 50 cents a day for Schulz's food and lodging.

There are nearly 500 aliens at Ellis Island who are under sentence of deportation to Russia and are being kept there at the expense of the steamship lines, because the charity societies assert that it is not safe to send passengers by sea to Archangel.

BATTLEFLAGS AT DINNER.

Sons of the Revolution Celebrate Evacuation Day.

The Sons of the Revolution celebrated the one hundred and thirty-second anniversary of the evacuation of New York by the British troops with a dinner last evening at Delmonico's. Professor H. C. Washburn, instructor in English at the United States Naval Academy, addressed the gathering on "The Navy's Trophy Flags," and illustrated his remarks with stereopticon slides. He recited the work of the Sons of the Revolution in getting together the old battle flags of the navy and especially the flags captured by American sailors in action.

After showing slides of flags now in the halls of the Naval Academy, such as the four-starred flag of Admiral Farragut, the flag raised by Commodore Matthew C. Perry on July 14, 1853, in Japan; the jacks of the British frigates Guerriere and Cyane, and others, he exhibited a screen picture of Commodore Perry's flag bearing the immortal inscription, "Don't Give Up the Ship," flown from the Commodore's flagship the Lawrence going into battle on Lake Erie on the morning of Sept. 10, 1813.

The professor was loudly cheered when he said that the spirit of Perry and the long line of naval heroes ought to keep our naval appropriations up.

SEEKS GIRL, FINDS DEATH.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Nov. 26.—Holding the flowers he had set out to deliver to Miss Violet Beely of Chicago upon her arrival in Denver, Carl F. J. Ludwig, said by his friends to have been a member of the Bavarian House of Wittelsbach, was found dead this afternoon by four boy scouts in a plowed field in the fashionable country club district. He disappeared Nov. 18.

Ludwig was searching for the house at which Miss Beely was visiting, and it is supposed he became confused, lost his way, and died from exposure.

FIND TRACE OF MAN GIVEN UP FOR DEAD

Dwight Mallory, Supposed to Have Been Drowned, Phones from Newark.

SAID HE WAS IN HOSPITAL

Friend Speeds from Short Hills, but Missing Baltimorean Could Not Be Found.

Charles J. Symington, formerly of Baltimore, answered the telephone in his home at Short Hills, N. J., last night about 10 o'clock, when a voice said:

"Hello, Charlie this is Mallory—Dwight Mallory."

"Heavens, man, we thought you'd been dead a week; we thought you were drowned in the Chesapeake Bay. Where are you?" Mr. Symington shouted.

"Yes," was the reply, "I understand all Baltimore is looking for me. But I'm in pretty bad shape. I don't want to see you."

"But where are you?"

"In the Holland House in Newark."

"Well, wait there for me. Don't go away," said Mr. Symington.

After an argument about whether he should wait, the person on the other end of the line hung up, and a few minutes later, with two friends, Mr. Symington, in an automobile, was speeding on his way to Newark to find Dwight Mallory, a wealthy man of Baltimore and crack shot, who was supposed to have been drowned in the Chesapeake Bay last Friday, after he had started on a hunting trip in a high-powered motor boat. Saturday morning the water-logged motor boat had been found after a storm. His friends had given him up for lost.

A few moments after Mr. Symington had talked the telephone in the office of the Marshal of the Baltimore police rang and a voice said:

"This is Dr. Smith of Newark. Dwight Mallory is in a Newark hospital. He was picked up by a tugboat last Saturday in Chesapeake Bay and brought to Newark. He is in bad shape."

The voice refused to tell who Dr. Smith was, further than to say that his telephone number was Market 3559. This is the telephone number of the Holland House in Newark.

Before Mr. Symington started on his dash to find his friend, he telephoned to the manager of the Holland House and the Chief of Police of Newark to find Mallory and hold him until his friends arrived. The manager and Lieutenant of Detectives Frank Brex searched the hotel in vain. Upon Mr. Symington's arrival the Chief of Police of Newark detailed 100 men to look for the missing man. Under the leadership of Mr. Symington and Charles H. Smith and R. E. Lee Taylor of Baltimore, the searchers made a round of all the resorts of the city, but without success up to an early hour this morning.

To a TIMES reporter Mr. Symington told the details of his telephone conversation with the missing man.

"I am ashamed of myself. I can't meet you, I tell you," he said Mallory told him.

"What is the matter, old man?"

"I'm just ashamed, that's all. I don't want to face Mr. Hoffman," was the reply.

Mr. Symington is Vice President of the T. H. Symington Company of Baltimore and Rochester, which has offices at 30 Church Street, in this city. Mr. William Hoffman is Treasurer of the company, with offices in Baltimore, where Mallory was assistant manager. Mr. Symington said that he was convinced Mallory was temporarily demented because nothing had been found wrong with the books of the company and that it was the first time that Mallory had ever refused to meet him, a lifelong friend.

Mr. Symington, when told of the telephone message to Baltimore, called up every Newark hospital and every physician in the city named Smith without getting a clue. He said then that he was convinced that it was Mallory who had sent the message to Baltimore. He said that the story about Mallory's getting to Newark on a tugboat puzzled him, and that he believed it a further evidence that his friend's mind had been affected by the strain of his experiences.

When his family in Baltimore was told of the message about Mallory, Mrs. Mallory, Arthur Foster, Mr. Mallory's lawyer, and W. Stewart Symington, Jr., a brother of Charles J. Symington, took the next train for Newark. They reached Jersey City at 12:30 o'clock this morning, and joined in the search for the missing man. They brought ten private detectives with them to aid in the hunt.

A message from Baltimore last night said that for a week the whole of the Chesapeake Bay had been scoured for some trace of Mallory. Mallory and M. G. Gill of Baltimore owned a ducking shore in the Susquehanna flats section. They were to have spent the last weekend on a hunt. Mr. Gill went by train to the shore on Friday last to await the coming of Mallory, who left Baltimore about noon Friday in a ninety horse power motor boat. That was the last heard of him until last night.

On Tuesday his water-logged boat was found, with one of the three life preservers it carried when it left Baltimore. One of his shoes, his gun and an oar were also in the boat. Attached to a stick in the boat were two pieces of white cloth he had used as a distress signal. That night a reward of $500 was offered for information of his fate. The Maryland Oyster Navy and a Government patrol boat joined in the search, which has been indefatigable.

Mr. Mallory is the crack shot of Maryland. He is one of the Directors of the Baltimore Federal Leage Baseball Club and is a close friend of Wilbert Robinson, Captain of the famous Baltimore Orioles. He is a son of the late J. D. Mallory, a wealthy automobile manufacturer, and a nephew of D. D. Mallory, the Baltimore capitalist. His wife was Miss Lelie Bartlett of a wealthy Baltimore family. He is a member of the Maryland Club, the Baltimore Country Club, the Elkridge Hunt Club, and a number of other Baltimore organizations.

SEEK BISHOPS' VETO IN PANAMA DISPUTE

Episcopal Ritualists Ask Special Session to Hear Their Side of Mission Controversy.

SURPRISE LOW CHURCHMEN

Act So Quickly No Inkling of Movement Gets Out Until Appeal Petition Is Filed.

Determined to prevent the sending of delegates to the Panama Congress, notwithstanding the decision of the Board of Missions to do so, ritualists of the Protestant Episcopal Church now demand that a special meeting of the House of Bishops be called to hear an appeal.

Their action has been so quietly carried on that comparatively few of the high officials of the church knew what was going on. Surprise was manifested in this city yesterday when the news reached a few of the Low Church clergymen. The proposal of a special session of the Bishops will be bitterly opposed.

The demand has been signed by the Right Rev. Reginald H. Weller, Bishop of Fond du Lac, Wis., a leader of the High Church in the Middle West. He made an earnest speech before the Board of Missions on Oct. 26, when he and his colleagues, including the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning of this city, resigned from the Mission Board. One result of those resignations was the defeat of Dr. Manning in the Diocesan Convention, where he was a candidate for Deputy to the General Convention.

The ostensible reason for a special meeting of the House of Bishops is the election of a successor to the Right Rev. George Biller, Bishop of the Missionary District of South Dakota.

Those who are opposed to the procedure say that the work in South Dakota is under thoroughly competent temporary direction, and that an election is unnecessary before the regular meeting of the House of Bishops, which is to be held at the General Convention in St. Louis next Fall.

The High Church Party regards the proposed special meeting as a last resort, as the much-discussed Panama Congress is to be held in March. The Ritualists object to the Episcopal Church being represented at the congress, because it is to be a conference of Protestant bodies whose aims, they think, tend to prevent a drawing together of Catholic and the Protestant Episcopal churches. The Roman Catholic Bishop of Panama has already denounced the objects of the congress on the ground that they appeared to have been conceived on the assumption that Panama is a heathen country.

If the House of Bishops should be convened, its power to act in this matter would be questioned by the Low Churchmen. The House of Bishops cannot overrule the decision of the Board of Missions to send delegates to this Protestant conclave, Low Church leaders contend. The Ritualists hope to induce the Bishops, at least, to express disapproval of the congress and to request Bishops who have been chosen as delegates not only not to attend the Panama gathering, but also to use their influence to prevent other delegates from attending.

The petition of the twelve Ritualists who are seeking to have the meeting is in the hands of Bishop Tuttle, the head of the House of Bishops. No call for a special session can issue, however, until a majority of the Bishops signify in writing their willingness to attend. The Ritualists are working quietly, it was learned yesterday, to bring about the meeting and pending the result of the appeal movement High Church publications have not mentioned the movement.

The organ of the Broad Church party, edited by the Rev. Dr. Alexander G. Cummins, who in the last Diocesan Convention led the onslaught on the High Church forces, contains in its current issue an attack on the Rev. Dr. Manning, saying that he does not wish to be received with honor and brotherly kindness at Panama, but hopes to get into the Vatican by some back-door method to confer with the Pope

The editor maintains that the Catholic party has become entirely too Latin in its tendencies and that the time has come when the Protestant Episcopal Church should not be placed in a false position by sectarianism and a narrow-gauge minority.

WARDEN STOPS A HANGING.

Convinced That Man Is Insane, He Appeals to County Court.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 26.—Basing his action on a certificate signed by two physicians stating that William Faltin, sentenced to be hanged today, was insane, Warden R. Sims of the Arizona State Penitentiary this afternoon refused to go forward with the execution and brought the question of Faltin's mental condition before the County Court here.

The Court ordered a hearing on the prisoner's condition before a jury for a date not later than Dec. 13. The action of the Court acts automatically as a stay of execution.

LAUD OGDEN'S WORK.

Richmond Meeting a Tribute to Efforts for the South.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 26.—The work which Robert Curtis Ogden, the New York philanthropist, did for the cause of education in the Southern States received high tribute at a public meeting here tonight under the auspices of the Co-operation Education Association of Virginia.

Mr. Ogden died on Aug. 6, 1913, after devoting nearly forty years of his life to constructive educational work in the South as President of the Trustees of the Hamilton Institute. His inspirational leadership led to the formation of the Southern Educational Board in 1901 His work has been so widely appreciated that a committee headed by William H. Taft and composed of a large number of prominent educational authorities have proposed the construction of a memorial to Mr. Ogden in the form of an auditorium building at Hampton Institute.

At tonight's meeting President E. A. Alderman of the University of Virginia, who was one of Mr. Ogden's early associates, said of him:

"The chiefest weapon of Robert Curtis Ogden in all his record of achievement was absolute self-forgetfulness. I have never known a man intimately who won such fine pleasure and happiness through complete self-surrender. He was modest, but conscious of leadership; patient, but vigilant; hopeful, but very busy and dauntless. He confronted all difficulties with a cheerful face and a stout heart, and out of his whole life issued a serene and contagious faith in the ultimate good intentions of his fellow-men that sets him apart as a genius-helper of his kind, a friend of men—a great democrat, whose constituency was the world."

Albert Spalding In Recital.

Albert Spalding gave his third violin recital of the season in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon. He played Beethoven's Romances in G and F, Bach's Concerto in E, Paganini's Concerto in D and four smaller pieces, which included two of his own, "Nostalgie" and "La Coquette." Mr. Spalding has already this season demonstrated his possession of qualities as an artist that make his work interesting and profitable to listen to, and in his recital yesterday he again played in the style he has accustomed his audiences to. There was technical brilliance about his work and there was elevation of style. André Benoist assisted as capably as usual at the piano.

An Official Notice

The new 11th edition of The Encyclopaedia Britannica after this date will be sold in two forms:

1.—The "Cambridge University" issue—the work as at present published by the Cambridge University Press, England, and sold in America by The Encyclopaedia Britannica Corporation; a large-page book, printed from large type and with wide margins; in general, the form that it has appeared in since 1768, when the first edition was published.

2.—The "Handy Volume" issue, designed for a wider public, at a popular price; an entirely new form, more economically manufactured, printed from new plates, with smaller page, smaller margins and smaller type. It will be sold exclusively by Sears, Roebuck and Co., Chicago.

The text, illustrations, maps—in short, the entire contents—are exactly the same in both issues. Both will be printed on Britannica India Paper.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica, 11th edition, in both forms consists of 29 volumes,
41,000 articles by
1,500 contributors
30,000 pages

THE Encyclopaedia Britannica is at once the oldest and the newest of works of reference. First published in 1768, twenty-one years before the inauguration of Washington as President, it has again and again been rewritten and reissued in enlarged and improved form. Each edition has been more successful than its predecessor. The new Eleventh Edition of the Britannica is the culmination of a century and a half of constant progress. How useful The Encyclopaedia Britannica is now and has been for six generations is proved by the fact that more copies of it have been sold than of all other encyclopaedias combined.

The following are the lowest prices for sets of the "Cambridge University" issue printed on India Paper:

Cloth	$166.75	CASH	or, if the order is accompanied by a first payment of $5.00 and the purchase completed on monthly payments of $5.00 each, at a little more than these prices.
Full Sheep.	203.25
Suede	225.25
Morocco ...	267.50

We guarantee, as holders of the American copyright, that we will not reduce these prices in the future.

Full Levant.	92.00

These prices are subject to advance. To order the "Handy Volume" issue, or to get more information about it, write to Sears, Roebuck and Co., Chicago, the sole distributors.

We guarantee that in both issues the text, illustrations, maps and plates throughout, the India Paper on which the text is printed, and the leather and cloth in which the volumes are bound, are the same.

STEPDAUGHTER GETS STEVENSON LETTERS

Justice Donnelly Holds That Lloyd Osbourne's Former Wife Has No Claim.

122 EPISTLES IN COURT

First a Scrawl Written When Novelist Was Three—Plaintiff Weeps on Stand.

The suit of Mrs. Katharine D. Osbourne for the possession of 122 letters written by Robert Louis Stevenson was dismissed yesterday by Justice Donnelly of the Supreme Court, because the plaintiff had not produced sufficient evidence to establish a valid claim.

The defendant was Mrs. Isobel Strong Field, daughter of the late Mrs. Fannie Van de Grift Osbourne, whom Mr. Stevenson married. The plaintiff is the divorced wife of Lloyd Osbourne, the defendant's brother.

When the suit was begun the letters were deposited with the National Surety Company. From the vaults of this company they were brought to court, each letter in a manilla folder, and the whole of them wrapped in heavy brown paper. They were turned out upon the counsel table. Mrs. Osbourne was called to the witness chair and sworn. The date and the name of the person to whom each letter was addressed were read. Then it was handed to her and she was asked whether it was one of the epistles she was suing for. To each question she replied in the affirmative.

First Letter Written at Three.

One of the letters was dated Dec. 13, 1852, when Mr. Stevenson was less than three years old. It was only a childish scrawl, but the signature, "R. Stevenson," was legible enough. This letter was addressed to "Dear Mamma and Papa." On Oct. 15, 1853, he wrote a letter to "My Dear Papa" that showed some improvement, and was comparatively free of finger prints and blots. His rapid progress at school was displayed in a letter written to "My Dear Pater" on Nov. 12, 1863. It was a strange mixture of English and French.

One of the most interesting exhibits was a tiny magazine written entirely by hand. This was not the magazine which Mr. Stevenson described in his "Portraits and Recollections," and which appeared between yellow covers and died after four issues. A letter addressed to his mother was written in Latin, another addressed to "My Dear People," came to his parents from Paris. Others were written on a yacht off the Scottish coast, and others in various parts of the world.

Mr. Stevenson's mother died in 1897, having outlived her son by about three years.

A brief, setting forth all the facts in the suit, and telling of the personal relations existing between the plaintiff and the defendant and their families, had been prepared for Justice Donnelly. It explained that the letters had been lent to Graham Balfour to use in the history he was writing of Mrs. Stevenson's life, and which he returned when Mrs. Stevenson was living in San Francisco while her son and his wife, the plaintiff, occupied an adjoining house. The letters had been packed in a box which was stored in the garret of Mrs. Stevenson's home. There they remained until after her death in 1914.

Plaintiff Mentioned in Will.

Mrs. Stevenson's will, dated Nov. 2, 1912, appointed her son, Lloyd, the executor of her estate and bequeathed practically all of her property to her daughter, Mrs. Field. One passage of the will read:

"To Katharine Durham Osbourne, the plaintiff, a woman of incredible ferocity, who has lived on my bounty for many years, at the same time pursuing me with malicious and false slanders, I bequeath the sum of $5."

This passage was made part of the pleadings to show that Mrs. Stevenson had no affection for her daughter-in-law. The pleadings also said that Mrs. Osbourne had never seen Mr. Stevenson and had never had any communication with him. Mrs. Field had acted as his ... agents for several years and had been his companion in many of his travels.

The letters were originally in the possession of Mr. Stevenson's mother, and upon her death were purchased by her sister, Jane Whyte Balfour of Edinburgh, Scotland. Prior to 1901 they had been delivered to Graham Balfour of Oxford, England. Mrs. Osbourne alleged that Mr. Balfour intended to send the letters to her because he knew they really belonged to her, but that Mrs. Stevenson received them, and so they fell into the hands of Mrs. Field with the rest of the property bequeathed her by her mother.

Denies Quarrel.

In reply to questions Mrs. Osbourne said that she lived next door to Mrs. Stevenson for five years and never had a quarrel with her. She was asked if she had not accused Mrs. Stevenson of having kidnapped one of her sons. She replied that she had not. During the examination Mrs. Osbourne broke down and wept. A recess was taken to enable her to regain control of herself.

Justice Donnelly gave Mrs. Osbourne sixty days in which to appeal from his decision.

17 FLEE REFORM SCHOOL.

Boys Escape Through Window While Monitor's Back Is Turned.

An alarm was sent out last night to the Flushing, L. I., police station, announcing the escape of sixteen boys from the New York Parental School earlier in the evening. The boys, who were in charge of a monitor, slipped out through a window when the monitor's back was turned. In the few moments which elapsed before their escape was discovered they had disappeared in the dark woods, west of the school. Up to a late hour in the night none had been caught.

The New York Parental School is a reform school for small boys on Jamaica Avenue, between Flushing and Jamaica, L. I. About 250 boys, whose ages range from 12 to 16 years, are in the school. The Superintendent, Herbert Todd, was away last night, having gone to attend the funeral of his father. Assistant Superintendent John Garth was in charge.

Police are now patrolling all the roads and car lines in the neighborhood, and parents of the youths in Manhattan and Brooklyn have been notified. An investigation will be held as soon as some of the youthful witnesses have been apprehended to learn whether the escape was prearranged or the result of a sudden inspiration.

WELCOME PETITION OF 500,000 WOMEN

Suffragists Greet Envoys Carrying Plea of Feminine Voters of West to Congress.

McANENY SPEAKS FOR CITY

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, with $2,000, Heads Campaign Fund to Urge a Constitutional Amendment.

A dusty little automobile trundled down Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon, and no one would have noticed it in the traffic of the avenue if there had not trailed along after it ninety-nine other cars of many kinds, big limousines, smart little cars, and some plain, ordinary cars, but every one of them bearing purple and orange and white banners, and many of them bunches of orange and white chrysanthemums tied with bows of purple ribbons, and with perhaps a bunch of toy balloons in the same color tones.

The Women Voters' Envoys of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage were in New York on their way to Washington to ask Congress to pass the Susan B. Anthony Federal suffrage amendment, and to present to Congress and the President a petition to that effect signed by 500,000 women voters of the West.

Members of the Congressional Union turned out to meet their car. The envoys were Mrs. Sara Bard Field and Miss Frances Jolliffe, and they were accompanied by Miss Maria Kindberg and Miss Ingeborg Kindstedt, owners and respectively driver and caretakers of the car. They were met at Ninetieth Street and Fifth Avenue by a delegation from the union, including most of the wives of the city officials of New York. The envoys were escorted to Eighty-third Street, where the long line of cars that made the procession was waiting to take the cross-country travelers to Sherry's.

Acting Mayor George McAneny welcomed the envoys at Sherry's, and there was a personal message from Mayor Mitchel. Mrs. Whitman, wife of the Governor, sat on the platform. The twenty-three Congressmen of New York City, who had been invited to attend, were represented by Congressman William H. Bennet.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, as Chairman of the day, welcomed the envoys, who said the women of the West were going to stand behind those of the East until every woman in the United States had a vote.

All suffragists look alike to Mr. McAneny, and when he warmly praised the recent suffrage parade in New York, the inspiration given by the women who marched in it, and the good sense they had shown in their New York State campaign, he did not realize that the Congressional Union considered all State work as a lost effort. He did not know that the union had stood aside during the New York campaign with only slightly concealed indifference. The kind spirit of Mr. McAneny's words was appreciated, however, even if, in his one slight reference to the Federal amendment, the only thing in which the union women are interested, he did not encourage them to think they could win.

Mr. Bennet was not as well informed, either, in his suffrage politics as he would have been in ordinary, every-day politics, if he had been speaking to an audience of men.

"I don't exactly know whom I am welcoming," he said cheerfully, "but it is some one from out of the State, and I will welcome you all."

That seemed to be too general to be complimentary to the envoys, the speedometer of whose car registered 5,000 miles, and Mrs. Mary Beard, who was presiding, rose to indicate the envoys on either side of the platform. Miss Jolliffe in black velvet and fur—she had stopped over at a hotel for repairs—essayed a smile, and Mrs. Field, who is a dot of a woman, tried to bob a little curtsey.

The women wished money out of different persons in the interest of the Federal amendment. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont gave $1,000 when Mrs. Jewett Minture, who was mistress of collections, called for a gift in the interest of the conversion of President Wilson to a belief in the Federal amendment. Mrs. Belmont, as a Southern woman, gave another thousand dollars in the interest of changing the hearts of the Southern suffragists to a belief in getting the vote through the Federal Government. Mrs. A. C. Bartlett gave $1,000 for the same purpose.

Miss Doris Stevens, organizer of the union in New York, and Mrs. William L. Colt were in charge of the arrangements for the day. Mrs. Emanuel Einstein, Mrs. Lewis Delafield, Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Mrs. Tiffany Dyer, and Mrs. Herbert Carpenter were on the committee of the automobile parade of which Mrs. Evan Evans was Marshal.

DANCING CLASS ON HOLIDAY.

Wilmington Visitors Deny Making Millions in War Stocks.

Forty-two members of the Friday Night Dancing Class of Wilmington, Del., arrived yesterday in two special cars over the Pennsylvania Railroad to spend Saturday and Sunday in this city. The members of the party were embarrassed by stories in two morning newspapers, saying that they were to be the guests of J. J. Raskob, Treasurer of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, and Frank J. Lackey, a stock broker, who had made millions in rises in du Pont common and General Motors stocks.

Mr. Raskob said that it was the intention of the visitors to have a quiet sightseeing tour, and that no couple planned to spend more than $70. "It may be true that some of the party hold a few shares of du Pont stock," he said, "but there is not a millionaire among us. Only three are employes of the du Pont company. We are members of a quiet dancing class in Wilmington, and thought we would spend this week-end in New York. The notoriety we have had in these stories has been particularly distasteful to our wives. It is not true that I am building a $200,000 mansion on my war gains. My house is fifty years old, and is seven miles from town. There is none of the 'Millionaire for a Day' 'Butch' McDevitt spirit in our party at all."

IDENTIFY PETERSON'S BODY.

Man Who Died in Club Said to be Heir to $10,000,000.

The body of Lawrence Peterson, who died of heart disease in the lobby of the Home Club, 11 East Forty-fifth Street, on Thursday night, was identified yesterday by G. F. Kean of 1124 Girard Street, Philadelphia, who came to New York when notified of Mr. Peterson's death. The identification was made at the Morgue, and the body was then removed to the undertaking parlors of J. Winterbottom & Son, 75 West Forty-seventh Street, where Mr. Kean made arrangements for its final disposition.

Mr. Kean would say nothing about the dead man. He would neither admit nor deny that Mr. Peterson was the son of the former proprietor of Peterson's Magazine, no longer published, and the heir to an estate amounting to $10,000,000. Nor would Mr. Kean say why it was that a man who at least had sufficient family or other connections to be in touch with a Philadelphia bank through Mr. Kean himself happened to die in New York penniless.

Mr. Peterson was 60 years old, and, according to the Coroner's record, unmarried. He lived for a year or more before his death at the Hotel Latham, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street. His death came shortly after he had received notice that he must give up his room because the hotel was to be closed.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—Lawrence Peterson, who died in New York last night, lived for many years in the big house at the southwest corner of Broad Street and Girard Avenue, later owned by J. Fred Beetz, which is now being razed. Mr. Peterson was long associated with his father and brother in the publishing business at 306 Chestnut Street. About six years ago he retired.

AUTOS KILL 1 AND INJURE 1.

Driver, Hit While Crossing Street, Dies in Hospital.

One man was killed and another dangerously injured by automobiles in the city yesterday. Frederick Schmidt, 30 years old, a driver of 462 East 121st Street, was hit by an automobile while crossing West 115th Street to deliver a package. Schmidt failed to see an approaching car owned by Walter W. Vincent of 400 Riverside Drive and driven by Arthur H. Hindel of 114 West 109th Street. Hindel put the injured man into the machine and took him to the Red Cross Hospital, where he died later. The police say the accident was unavoidable.

An unidentified man about 60 years old while crossing Madison Avenue at Twenty-first Street, was knocked down by an automobile owned and operated by Alvin C. Stallings of 235 West Sixty-fifth Street. Stallings and Patrolman McKenna lifted the man into the car and took him to Bellevue, where his condition was pronounced serious. He was 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighed 130 pounds.

COME, ye who seek unceasing a novel whose outlook is sane, whose sentiment savors neither the sour nor the sticky, whose atmosphere is antiseptic, whose philosophy will bear analysis, and whose faith equally escapes the abstruse and the subterranean, here is the balm in Gilead—Dorothy Canfield's new story, "The Bent Twig." The author, passionately American in spirit yet never narrow, has thought much, read widely and tasted, tested life from many angles both here and in Europe. Thus richly grounded, endowed with effective balance of quite common sense and deep feeling, she has produced a splendid, finely textured narrative, inspiring, many featured, sure to live long.

NO SITE ANNOUNCED FOR FEDERAL LEAGUE PARK—GOLF

NO ANNOUNCEMENT OF FEDERAL PARK

Plans Wait for the Arrival of Man from Abroad Who Holds Property Interest.

Despite the assurance from Chicago that James A. Gilmore, President of the Federal League would announce all of the details of the invasion of Manhattan Island this week, it seems certain now that there will be a postponement, the second since the date was set for naming the location of the park. Another mysterious personage enters into the situation, according to statements yesterday. This man, whose identity remains a secret, has an interest in the plot of ground which the Feds are considering, and he is now returning to this country from Europe and is to arrive Monday. This means that the announcement will probably not be forthcoming before Monday and perhaps not until Tuesday or Wednesday.

This man is said to hold but a small interest in the property which is to be turned into a ball park. All of the other interests have been bought or secured under long lease, but the Feds are not willing to give out the location until this last owner is bound by legal document. There has been some correspondence relative to the deal, and the owner, according to report, has agreed to the transfer, but the Federal League interests fear that if everything was not signed up under ironclad agreement there might be a possibility of a serious hitch in the proceedings. Several of the Federal League men think that those in the ranks of organized baseball might in some way secure a claim that would hold the deal up indefinitely.

In a dispatch from Chicago, Gilmore said he would give out the location and the name of the owner of the club when he returned to this city. He is due to arrive here sometime today, but will probably refuse to comment on the situation. The Feds consider that they have not violated the spirit of the agreement to give out all news relative to the invasion this week. "A delay of a day or two," as one man said yesterday, "matters little."

There is still an impression that the Federal League does not really intend to build on the island. Some consider that there will be the announcement of a location, but that the property will be held only under an option and that in this way the Federals will force the hand of organized baseball without the expenditure of a large amount of money. There is no doubt but that the regulars in baseball fear the effect of the Federal League invasion of this city, particularly when the proposal is to build on Manhattan Island. This is indicated by the fact that pressure from certain quarters has been brought upon the Yankees to build their park in Manhattan instead of Queens if the Fed's proposal is carried to a conclusion.

The report that the Feds will build on the east side of Lenox Avenue, between 142d and 145th Streets, still persists, the latest addition being that they have paid $1,500,000 for the property. This, however, does not conform to the statement from James A. Gilmore not long ago that the league would have a ball park on Manhattan and it would not cost even $1,000,000. The closing of two streets is the obstacle in this case, and it is believed that no consent for such an undertaking will be received. This makes the location little more than a visionary project and the majority of those not completely informed believe that some other site is in view, one not heretofore mentioned.

According to a man close to the Federal League the eight players whom John Ganzel has secured from the ranks of organized baseball are George Whiteman from Montreal, who came originally from the Texas League; Charles Pick from the Richmond Club, whom Clark Griffith let go; Olaf Erickson, whom John McGraw sent to Rochester and did not reclaim; Joe McCarty of Buffalo, Jimmy La Longe of Buffalo, Luque of Toronto, Morris Rath of Toronto, and Hoelke of Rochester.

It is possible that Ray Keating of the Yankees may never be able to pitch again. He has suffered for some time from a back strain which during the past year interfered with his pitching. Bill Donovan, however, hopes that the ailment will yield to treatment and has not given up hope of having Keating with the Yankees next season.

Captain Huston says that while the Yankees hope to complete some trades before another season starts none are under way at present. It is, however, unlikely that Fritz Maisel or Caldwell will figure in any of them. Even Baker wouldn't be an inducement to trade Maisel. Just before the Yankees were purchased by the present owners there was on foot a trade of Ray Caldwell for Walter Johnson, but Ban Johnson opposed it and said he thought Caldwell was the most useful pitcher for New York.

TO DISCUSS RULES.

Yale, Harvard, and Princeton Men to Form New Eligibility Code.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 26.—Professor Robert N. Corwin, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Yale Athletic Association, announced tonight that a joint meeting between representatives of Harvard, Princeton, and Yale will be held at the Yale Club in New York on Dec. 3 and 4, to discuss the question of athletic eligibility rules of the three universities.

"Summer baseball is only one of the questions to be brought forward," Professor Corwin said. "The whole matter of professionalism or semi-professionalism must be more clearly defined. Likewise rules and definitions must be established which shall eliminate from sport practices and performers which have no place in college activities."

The approaching meetings will be in a certain sense the culmination of negotiations between the universities begun last June. It was found at that time that there was a wide divergence, both in the wording of the rules on eligibility and their enforcement. Conferences were held this month by the deans of Harvard and Princeton with the Yale authorities, following the disqualification of Legore, the football and baseball star, and four other members of the Yale baseball team, including Captain Milburn.

Blute and Mack Box a Draw.

Jimmy Blute, the Yorkville boxer, and Red Mack of Harlem boxed ten interesting rounds to a draw last night in the feature bout at the New Polo Athletic Association in Harlem. Danny Burns admitted defeat at the hands of Eddie Seigel of Harlem in the semi-final contest, scheduled for ten rounds, when he refused to come out of his corner for the sixth round. Smiling Willie, a west side flyweight, knocked out Kid Toodle of the east side in the fourth round of the first bout, which was scheduled for ten rounds. A right to the jaw won for the west sider.

Columbia and Cornell Soccer.

The Columbia soccer team will play its third home game this afternoon on South Field. Cornell will be the opponent. Captain H. H. Shanholt of the Blue and White, who has been acting as coach, has been grooming his men for two weeks and will make some shifts in the forward and back lines. Laing, Nevitt, Schwartz, and Riseley have been showing up well in the defensive play and will probably start the game. Captain Shanholt, H. Shanholt, and Fernandez will compose the forward line of attack.

LE COLOSSE FALLS HARD.

Thought He Had Thrown Pospisil and Lost Wrestling Bout.

The Manhattan Opera House rocked from roof to cellar last night when Pierre Le Colosse was thrown in the international wrestling tournament by Karl Pospisil of Bohemia with a wrist and body lock in 37 minutes and 45 seconds. The Frenchman really threw himself as he whirled Pospisil over his head and pinned him to the mat, but the momentum was so great that Le Colosse continued in his course and turned himself flat on his back, whereupon the Bohemian sat on his shoulders, got a wrist and body lock, and pinned the Frenchman down.

Le Colosse thought he had won and bowed gracefully before the plaudits of the crowd until the referee informed him that his opponent was the winner.

Linow, the rough-and-ready Cossack, more than met his match in "Strangler" Lewis, and after 11 minutes and 20 seconds had elapsed, Linow complained that he was injured by Lewis and refused to continue. Two doctors examined the Cossack and pronounced him in good condition, but Linow insisted that he was the best judge of his condition, and said so in a speech to the crowd. After this exhibition of oratory, the manager of "Strangler" Lewis attempted to address the crowd, but after his first sentence the spectators hooted and howled him into silence. Referee Bothner gave the match to "Strangler" Lewis, according to the rules of the tournament.

Hjelmar Ludin of Sweden threw Edward Delivuk of Austria in the first bout of the evening with a head-in-chancery hold in 8:37. Ludin was much the stronger, and Delivuk was always on the defensive.

Daro of Austria broke his own time record for remaining unthrown last night when he stood off Lurich for 5:58, at which point the Russian got an arm and body hold and put the Austrian down. Up to this time Daro has held the wrong end of all the quick fall records of the tournament, and the longest time he had lasted was 2:40.

Aberg, the international champion, played with Harry Litofsky of Palestine and New York for 4:13 before he threw him with a reverse body hold. Tofalos, the Greek, threw Christianson of Sweden with a double wrist hold in 5:51 and Wilhelm Berner lost to Charlie Cutler by an arm lock in 9:18. The bout between Zybysko and Hevonpaa resulted in a draw, and Gardini of Italy threw Losson of England in 7:27, with a chancery and arm hold.

COWLER STOPS McCARTY.

Montana Boxer Technically Knocked Out at Harlem Club.

Tom Cowler, England's latest boxer to make a bid for the heavyweight championship, scored a technical knockout over Tommy McCarty, a heavyweight from Montana, and cousin of the late Luther McCarty, in the second round of their scheduled ten-round bout, which completed the second boxing show of the Harlem Sporting Club in 125th Street last night. Opinions were divided as the crowd filed slowly out of the club, as to whether the blow, which, while not a clean knockout, nevertheless ended the bout, was fair or foul.

The men were mixing it hard on the ropes near a corner of the ring, and McCarty, in a crouching position to avoid the swings of his adversary, left an opening on the left side of his body, and the English heavyweight, quick to take advantage of the opportunity, sent over a crushing right-hand swing which landed on the jaw, near the left ear. Just as the gloved fist of Cowler struck his opponent Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, heavyweight champion, who was timekeeper, sounded the bell signifying the termination of the round. Both things happened exactly at the same moment. Cowler's glove reaching his opponent's face simultaneously with the ring of the gong, and many in the crowd of spectators thought the blow was foul, with the result that there were scattered cries to this effect. Kid McPartland, officiating as referee, refused to recognize the foul, and, even when McCarty's manager stepped into the ring vociferously claiming a foul, the referee shook his head negatively.

Chairman Fred Wenck of the Boxing Commission, who witnessed the bout from the second row from the ringside, said, when asked his opinion of the blow, that it had been fair.

Cowler's victory, however, cannot be regarded as a decisive one, for, although his punch to the face sent his opponent to the floor in the second round, McCarty was ready and anxious to continue the contest in the third, but his manager refused to let him do so.

The main attraction was the bout between Battling Levinsky of Stratford, Conn., and Dan (Porky) Flynn, the Boston heavyweight, and this was an interesting contest throughout. The Boston heavyweight was entitled to the honors at the final bell, but his advantage was by no means one-sided, for Levinsky made him extend himself throughout. Flynn stood flat-footed throughout the bout and waited for his opponent to carry the fight to him. And when Levinsky did come rushing in he was met with a stinging left jab to the face, or a swishing right-hand uppercut, which usually landed on its mark. Flynn had an advantage of eleven pounds in weight and he used this to good effect in the clinches, when he roughed Levinsky so that the latter could not land cleanly or effectively.

In the other bout scheduled for ten rounds, Lary Williams of Bridgeport disposed of Frank Hagney, an Australian heavyweight, in three rounds with a right to the jaw. Williams floored his opponent early in the round, and when he regained his feet Hagney was again sent down, and this time counted out.

Lahn Outpoints Murray.

Battling Lahn, the Brooklyn bantamweight, easily outpointed Jimmy Murray of New York in the main ten-round bout last night at the Vanderbilt Athletic Club in Brooklyn. Lahn outclassed his opponent in cleverness and aggressiveness, and often made the local boxer miss, while he himself found little difficulty in landing at will.

The other bout scheduled for ten rounds, in which the principals were Johnny Devine and Frankie Wilson, was stopped in the sixth round by the referee to save the former from further punishment. At the time the contest was stopped Devine was in a helpless condition.

Basket Ball Rules Interpreted.

More than one hundred basketball coaches, officials and players gathered last night at the Hotel Astor and interpreted the new joint rules recently adopted by the Amateur Athletic Union, the Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and the Young Men's Christian Association. Dr. Joseph H. Raycroft of Princeton University, Chairman of the Joint Editorial Committee, presided over the meeting and answered most of the questions on points which were not clear to either coaches, players or officials.

On the whole, the new code was found satisfactory, and there were not many regulations which needed explanation. It took several months to arrange the code, and the task was well done by Dr. Raycroft, George F. Hepburn, Chairman of the Amateur Athletic Union Basketball Committee, and William H. Ball, Chairman of the Basketball Board of the Young Men's Christian Association. Ralph Morgan of the University of Pennsylvania attended the meeting as a representative of the National Collegiate Association and assisted in the interpretation.

MARSTON WINS TWO MATCHES AT GOLF

Baltusrol Player, Randolph, Jr.; Kendall, and Steiner Are Lakewood Victors.

The semi-final stage in the golf tournament at Lakewood was reached yesterday and as a result P. S. P. Randolph, Jr., of the home club, will play Maxwell R. Marston, New Jersey champion, in one match today, while in the other Percy W. Kendall of Deal, the medal winner, will clash with Harold A. Steiner of Inwood.

Marston won his two matches easily yesterday. In fact, none of the favorites encountered difficulty, for the draw was well distributed so far as the experts were concerned. Marston first took on John E. Kelley of Deal, and won by 6 and 4, the New Jersey title-holder hitting about a 77 clip. Then he swamped P. S. P. Randolph, Sr., of the home club, by 7 and 6. The long drives of Marston were far too much for the short ones of Randolph.

Kendall had no trouble with his men, disposing of Dr. W. G. Fralich of Los Angeles by 5 and 3, then brushing aside Eugene Van Schaick of Sleepy Hollow by an even greater margin. Kendall's golf was excellent, and had he finished the bye holes he would have had close to 78.

Steiner's first victim was John Brademus, erstwhile national amateur champion athlete, and the second turned out to be H. Sherwood Hicks of the Philadelphia Country Club. Steiner, too, played two rounds of less than 80. Extra hole matches did not appear until the late round, but none of them happened in the first division, so there were few hard-fought contests. Late in the day, Dr. Fralich had to go twenty holes to defeat Frank B. Barrett of Hollywood, who recently recovered from a severe illness. This was in the first beaten eight. The summary:

First Sixteen.—First Round—P. S. P. Randolph, Jr., Lakewood, beat F. P. Kimball, Lakewood, 3 and 2; Archibald J. McClure, Lakewood, beat Alexander Morten, Lakewood, 5 and 4; Maxwell R. Marston, Baltusrol, beat John E. Kelley, Deal, 6 and 4; P. S. P. Randolph, Sr., Lakewood, beat A. H. Gibson, Hamilton, Ontario, by default; Percy W. Kendall, Deal, beat Dr. W. G. Mandot Will Not Box Waugh.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—Joe Mandot, the local lightweight, upon his arrival here today said the fifteen-round bout with Bobby Waugh of Fort Worth, set for sat night, in Shreveport, but postponed, would not be fought. Mandot said he had contracted a severe cold and would not return to Shreveport to fight Waugh.

MRS. BUNDY DEFEATED.

Miss Mary K. Brown Vanquishes Former Tennis Champion.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Nov. 26.—Miss Mary K. Brown, three times national woman tennis champion, today defeated Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, another former titleholder, 6—4, 6—3, in an exhibition match of the invitation tennis tournament here. Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the present champion, won from Miss Florence Sutton, 6—4, 6—3. The tournament will close tomorrow with matches between Miss Brown and Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Sutton and Mrs. Bundy.

Squash Tennis at Yale Club.

The squash tennis tournament of the Yale Club reached the round before the semi-final yesterday, and an effort will be made to complete it today. A. J. Cordier, who formerly represented Heights Casino, defeated F. M. Blodgett in two straight games, although the second required extra aces to reach a decision. J. F. Stillman played a strong game against H. L. Bodman, and won at 16—4, 15—3. In the fourth round S. H. Johnson made a runaway victory in his match with E. R. Hudson. The summary:

Third Round.—A. J. Cordier defeated F. M. Blodgett 15—7, 17—16; J. F. Stillman defeated H. L. Bodman, 15—4, 15—8.

Fourth Round.—S. H. Johnson defeated E. R. Hudson 15—6, 15—7.

Gray Beats Inman at Billiards.

George Gray, the Australian, defeated Melbourne Inman, the English Champion, by a score of 18,000 to 16,988 recently at Sheffield, England. When the final session began the scores were: Gray, 16,755; Inman, 15,707. An early run of 817 practically decided the outcome. On Nov. 1, Gray ended the afternoon session with an unfinished 401. In the evening he extended it to 1,001. Of that total, 993 was made off the red ball. Inman's best run was 500. Inman was beaten by Stevenson, in London, last month, which made two defeats at level points in five years.

Brennan Wins Handball Tourney.

Thomas Brennan defeated Harry Davis in the final round of the open handicap singles handball tournament yesterday at the Van Kelten Stadium, Fifty-seventh Street and Eighth Avenue. The match was hard fought, Brennan winning after four sets at 21—16, 16—21, 21—18, and 21—11. Entries for the handicap will close on Dec. 1. The event is open to all amateur players.

WOMEN IN FIELD HOCKEY.

Merion Team Defeats Staten Island in Intercity Match.

Women field hockey players of two cities clashed in a hard-fought match on the grounds of the Staten Island Cricket and Tennis Club at Livingston, S. I., yesterday afternoon. Philadelphia won the match, the verdict going to the team of the Merion Cricket Club by the score of 3 goals to 2. The visitors had the better of it in the first period, during which Miss Runk, the centre forward of the Merion team, was successful in eluding Miss Wemple, who was at goal for Staten Island. Miss Runk scored again from a scrimmage and Miss Sarah Myers made it three straight for Philadelphia before the New York representatives started to score.

Fifteen minutes of the second half had been played when Miss Edith Manley, a daughter of Harry Manley, the well-known cricketer, playing centre forward for Staten Island, picked the ball from a scrimmage in front of the Merion goal and tallied the first point for the home team. Immediately afterward Miss Townsend, the outside right, scored the second goal for Staten Island. This proved to be the last goal of the game, giving Merion the victory by the odd point. The first game played in Philadelphia was also won by Merion by the score of 1 goal to 0. The line-up:

REGAL

DON'T GET COLD FEET EVERY TIME THE CHEERING SECTION ON THE OTHER SIDE STANDS UP.

Remember that a football game isn't "called off" on account of the weather.

Sitting in the Stadium on a frosty November day, with the wind blowing around your feet, watching the "last period" is a different proposition from stretching yourself in the sun on the bleachers in the "seventh inning".

In suggesting this GENUINE RUSSET NORWEGIAN OIL GRAIN Boot with FULL DOUBLE SOLE to the heel at FOUR DOLLARS, we extend an open challenge to the world to produce equal protection and comfort—equal value in material, workmanship and style AT THE PRICE.

It's better to buy LEATHER than PILLS. It's worth $4.00 for weather protection, for comfort insurance to put two full oak soles between your feet and the cold pavement.

The WESTON is a "Touring Boot" for tramping in the country and rough weather in town—built for service and lasts for years.

We are PROUD to offer this shoe as one example of what REGAL collective purchasing power, REGAL volume production and REGAL manufacturing efficiency can produce at $4.00.

LARGE CROWDS FLOCK TO NEW YORK TO ATTEND ARMY AND NAVY FOOTBALL GAME TODAY

FLEET OFFICERS TO CHEER FOR NAVY

2,000 from Warships Will 'Root' for Victory Over Army at Polo Grounds.

WEST POINT IS FAVORITE

Elevens Practice on Today's Field of Battle—Hotels Crowded with Football Visitors.

When the United States Naval Academy team trots on to the gridiron at the Polo Grounds this afternoon at 2 o'clock for the annual game with the United States Military Academy eleven the middies will receive a reception such as no Annapolis eleven has ever experienced. For the first time in seven long years the fleet officers will get an opportunity to see the game. Ten of the navy's greatest battleships are anchored in the North River and three more are at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. All the fleet officers, including more than 2,000 graduates of the Naval Academy, will be seated together, and will give the middies encouragement.

Since the Navy team arrived here and the fleet officers have heard what the coaches have had to say about the eleven there is a growing impression among the navy men that the team is going to spring a surprise. There are five first-year midshipmen on the Navy team, which is an unusual condition, and one of the coaches remarked yesterday that these green players were being used because they were superior to the veterans who have had a season or more of experience in the game.

The Army, although optimistic, realize that they have the hardest battle of their careers on their hands and will be prepared for a bitter fight. The game today, it was predicted by Army and Navy men alike last night, will be the hardest fought of many years. They figure that neither team has been thoroughly aroused to the full strength of its power. The Navy team, coached by Lieutenant Jonas Ingram and "Tack" Hardwick, formerly of Harvard, it is believed, have much under cover which they will bring to the front. Both elevens, regardless of their schedules of preliminary games, are keyed up for this game today, and, as in formed years, they will be much stronger than their season's records would indicate.

No football game in every player with such earnestness or is more exciting than the Army-Navy struggle. Often in the heat of battle the football teaching of the Cadets and the Midshipmen is forgotten, and it develops into a rough-and-tumble game. The officials today are all capable, but will have their hands full. They are: Referee, Bill Langford; umpire, Fred Murphy; field judge, James A. Evans, and head linesman, Carl Marshall.

The game will attract the most distinguished representatives of social, service, and official circles ever assembled at a football game, from the Chief Executive of the United States down through diplomatic, naval, and military corps to the young Lieutenant and midshipman just graduated from the rival academies.

President Wilson and his fiancée, Mrs. Galt, will attend, together with Cabinet officials, a host of Admirals, Generals, Senators, Congressmen, Government department heads, and representatives of foreign Governments. There has been an unusual demand for tickets and at the hotels last night there were few to be had at any price.

The hotels have never been so rushed before at a sporting event as they were last night with the crowd which flocked here from all parts of the country for the game. At the Astor, where the Army is making its headquarters, and at the Vanderbilt, where the Navy holds forth, the National, State and city flags are prominently mingled with the colors of the academies. The shield of the Military Academy adorns the grand ballroom at the Astor, illuminated and bearing the motto, "Duty, Honor, Country." Everywhere about the hotel is seen the gray, black and gold of the Army. The hotel last night was taxed to its capacity, 1,400 persons. The McAlpin, Waldorf-Astoria and other big hotels were filled last night.

The Navy squad went to the Polo Grounds early yesterday afternoon and held a secret practice. They ran through the signals and Von Heimberg practised punts and drop kicks to become accustomed to the lights and shades of the park. An eleventh hour change was announced in the Navy lineup when Goodstein was placed at centre in place of Jones. Captain Miles, on account of an injured knee, will not be able to start the game, and Craig, a green player, will drive the team from quarter back.

After Navy practice yesterday, and before the Army squad arrived, a team of veterans was organized and went out and cavorted on the gridiron for a while. Among these players were "Big Bill" Edwards and Ad Kelly of Princeton, "Tack" Hardwick and Parmenter of Harvard, Bill Hollenback of Pennsylvania, Jonas Ingram, the Navy coach, and Northcroft and Jones, former Navy players.

The Army team was sent through a signal practice, and Coffin and Oliphant had a short drill in kicking. After the Army players had finished, the gridiron was covered with a thick layer of straw to protect the turf.

The game has attracted a large number of well-known football figures, and about the hotels yesterday were "Hurry Up" Yost, the Michigan coach; Captain Eddie Mahan of this year's Harvard eleven, coaches Jimmy Knox and Reggie Brown of the Harvard board, head coach Frank Hinckey of Yale, and coach Tom Shelvin of Yale, Leo Leary and Fred Moore of Harvard, "Mike" Thompson of Georgetown, Ralph Bloomer and Carl Flanders of Yale, Mal Logan and Wiggiesworth, former Crimson stars, and Vaughn Cooper, the former Army coach.

Governor Charles S. Whitman has received three invitations to the game, one from the Navy, another from the Army, and a third from the New York Baseball Club. The Governor accepted the Navy invitation, as it was the first. Among the guests today also will be Mayor Tom Church of Toronto, who, with three coaches from Canadian universities, will attend to compare the American game with the Canadian pastime.

While the visiting graduates of the academies and their friends made merry last night in the hotels, the football players were hustled off to bed early. This morning the players will be taken out for a limbering up walk after a hearty breakfast. The trainers of both elevens reported that the players were in the best of condition.

The Army and Navy teams have met on the gridiron nineteen times since 1890, and each has won nine games and one has resulted in a tie. As today's struggle will be the "rubber" game, the rivalry, which is always bitter, will be more intense than ever.

President T. P. Shonts of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company announced last night that additional train service will be available on the Sixth and Ninth Avenue elevated lines. There will be extra express service, the first express leaving Rector Street at 12:11. In the subway the maximum service will be maintained. Those who use the underground route can readily reach the Polo Grounds from the 157th Street Station. On the surface lines the New York Railways Company has arranged to provide additional service on the Eighth Avenue line, which goes directly to the Polo Grounds.

Inspector Ryan will be in charge of the police on duty in and outside of the stadium, and traffic will be closed on Eighth Avenue above 155th Street, and no person will be allowed to pass that point without showing a ticket for the game.

ARMY'S SILENT "SENDOFF."

Regulations Forbid Cadets Cheering as Team Leaves for New York.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The Army football squad, consisting of fifty players, coaches, trainers, and attendants, left here for New York at 8 o'clock this morning. The rigid discipline of the academy would permit of no demonstration by the rooters at the time of the departure of the squad, the battalion of cadets being at recitation and study.

Tomorrow morning two special trains will convey the followers of the Army eleven from the post and the vicinity. The first train will carry the battalion of cadets and band under command of Colonel Morton F. Smith, Twentieth United States Infantry, Commandant of Cadets. The second special will take the officers of the post and residents of the vicinity. Upon arrival at High Bridge station in New York the passengers on both these specials will be run over to the Polo Grounds on shuttle trains. The cadets will parade into the Brush Stadium, headed by their band. After the game the West Pointers will have leave until 11:45 P. M., when they will leave for home. Many cadets will avail themselves of invitations to dinners and theatre parties. The football squad will stay over in New York until Sunday morning at 11:30.

The academy will be almost deserted tomorrow, only a few regular soldiers remaining here to do the routine duty. First Lieutenant Edmund L. Gruber, Fifth Field Artillery, will be in comand of the post. A feeling of confidence prevails in the Army camp tonight. It is felt that the team of today is much stronger than at any time this season, and that the efforts of the coaches and handlers to bring it up to top form for this contest have been accomplished.

COLUMBIA WILL LOSE THREE FOOTBALL MEN

Captain Simonds, Calder, and Buermeyer Will Graduate Next Spring.

Columbia will lose only three members of its victorious football team by graduation next June. They are Captain Francis M. Simonds, left half back; Ecky Calder and Herb Buermeyer, left and right end, respectively. Each of the three has identified himself with other sports. Simonds is one of Jim Rice's crew men, Calder was the sensational forward on the basket ball five last Winter, and also played baseball, and Buermeyer resigned the captaincy of the soccer team this Fall to join the football squad.

According to an informal agreement entered into by the Columbia team, Healey will be the choice for Captain of next year's eleven, and Miller, who won the N. Y. U. and Wesleyan games by his drop kicking, will lead the Blue and White during the 1917 season. It would be barely possible for Healey to graduate next June by taking an extra amount of college work, but he probably will carry his regular schedule of studies and receive his degree at the end of the first term next year. Miller was originally a member of the 1917 class, but left school for a part of last year and so will not graduate until February or June in 1918.

Another report in circulation on the Columbia campus is that Littauer, full back; Mansbach, right half back, and Wilber, right tackle, have agreed to take another year of work on Morningside Heights. These three had planned to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons next September. This is a professional school and under the new Columbia football regulations they would be ineligible for the team. It is understood that they will take another year of the arts course, provided Healey returns next year to play.

All the other first string players will be eligible for another year. Kennedy, left guard; Cleveland, right guard; Monroe, full back; Donoho, Wadleton, and Cochrane, half backs, are members of the 1917 class, and Brown, the centre, is a sophomore this season.

FOOTBALL TICKETS SCARCE.

The Few on Sale by Speculators Held at $10 Each.

There has been a scarcity of Army-Navy football tickets this year among the speculators, and as a result they commanded a big price last night. The average price asked at the ticket agencies was $10 a ticket, but in the Astor and Vanderbilt lobbies the price was $15, with few obtainable at that price. At one of the leading agencies it was stated that there were fewer tickets offered for sale this year than in past years for the Army-Navy game, and even these were disposed of with as much care as possible owing to the safeguards adopted by the New York Baseball Club. Every ticket sold by the club can be traced from the record at the club headquarters, and these facts are so well known that many persons, who might otherwise have taken a chance to unload surplus tickets, sold their spare pasteboards to individuals for the face value or thereabouts.

It has been customary, with the rush of Army and Navy followers to the city on the eve of the big game, that the price has tumbled to such an extent as to make the agencies run to cover and cut their prices materially. This year, however, the advance guard failed to bring the customary tickets with them, with the result that the high prices are being maintained.

In discussing the scalping evil yesterday John B. Foster, Secretary of the New York Baseball Club, said that agents of the club had been sent out to buy up all the tickets obtainable at the agencies, regardless of the price. He said that all that could be obtained was six, and these were in possession of the club. He declined to give the names of the persons to whom these tickets had been sold.

SHARPE WOULD COACH YALE

But There Is No Indication That Ells Want Cornell Mentor.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—Dr. Albert H. Sharpe, coach of Cornell's undefeated football team, in answer to a question today regarding a rumor that he would coach Yale, said he knew nothing about the report. He said that he was content with his position at Cornell and would like to stay. He added he was under a five-year contract with Cornell and had just finished one year of it.

When asked if he would go to Yale if Cornell released him from his contract, Dr. Sharpe said:

"Inasmuch as I am a Yale man and owe my first allegiance to my alma mater, of course I would go to Yale if that were possible."

Brown to Play Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—Brown's football eleven is to play Washington State College, Northwestern Conference champions, at Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's Day, instead of Washington University, as previously announced, word to that effect having been received at the university athletic office today. Washington State is coached by William H. Dietrown as "Lonestar" and a former Carlisle tackle, and is the team that defeated the Oregon Aggies, who in turn defeated the Michigan Aggies, who won from Michigan. Washington State has not lost a game this season, winning from Oregon, 28 to 3; Oregon Aggies, 20 to 0; Idaho, 41 to 0; Montana, 27 to 7, and Whitman, 17 to 0. Brown came through the Carlisle game yesterday without a scratch. The players will rest until Monday, when they will resume practice for the Washington game.

Montclair Boy Wesleyan Captain.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 26.—Waldemer Deetjen of Montclair, N. J., has been elected Captain of the Wesleyan University football team for next season, it was announced tonight. He played half back this year.

ATHLETICS IN GARDEN.

Irish-American A. C. to Hold Its Annual Indoor Games Tonight.

Four hundred and fifty athletes, among them champions of every description, will compete tonight in the annual games of the Irish-American Athletic Club in Madison Square Garden, which will virtually open the board-floor season in the metropolitan district. Eighteen events, including the McAleenan trophy race which will feature the sports, appear on the programme. In the 1,000-yard contest one of the fastest fields ever brought together will compete. Ted Meredith of the University of Pennsylvania, national quarter-mile champion; Joe Higgins of Holy Cross College, New England champion at a half mile; Homer Baker, New York Athletic Club, former international half-mile title-holder; Sid Leslie, Long Island Athletic Club, Military Athletic League mile champion, and Dave Caldwell, one of the best men in the country at the distance, will face the starter in the McAleenan trophy contest. The result of this race has caused much conjecture, and no entrant is much of a certainty. Meredith, when right, is dangerous at the distance, but either Caldwell or Higgins is likely to upset the indications.

William H. Taylor, the Illinois boy who recently became a member of the Irish-American Athletic Club, will be on scratch in the standing jumps, and is likely to repeat his performances of last Spring in the national championships, when he won two senior titles.

In the weight events will be all the star men at this class of competition, most prominent among them being Pat McDonald, Pat Ryan, and Matt McGrath. Jack Eller, Walter Bursch, junior national champion, and Engels will be featured in the hurdle contests.

There are three relay races on the program in addition to the special scratch relay between the Boston Athletic Association, Irish-American Athletic Club, Salem-Crescent Athletic Club, and Knights of St. Antony, which promise to produce fine competition. These are for Federal, State, and city employes; the high and prep school relay, and the Military Athletic League relay. The first race is at one mile, and teams from the Fire, Police, Tenement House, and Post Office Departments have entered.

Eight of the fastest high and prep school teams in the district will compete in the one-mile scratch relay race open to public and private high schools for the "Burke" Trophy. The teams entered are: Poly Prep, De Witt Clinton, Richmond Hill, Flushing, Dickinson, Englewood, St. John's College prep, and St. Benedict's prep.

Teams from the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Seventy-first, and Twenty-second Regiments will meet in the 1,200-yard relay race, open to military organizations.

GETAWAY DAY AT OLD GLORY SALE

Many Horses Disposed Of as Annual Auction Closes in the Garden.

It was getaway day, and sales were light yesterday, the last day of the Old Glory auction, which has been held in Madison Square Garden throughout the week. While a few of the horses brought over $1,000, the majority were "odds and ends" and represented miscellaneous consignments from numerous small owners.

The top price of the day was paid for the stallion Norman Baron, which has a record of 2:17¾. It is by Baronmore, out of Chimes of Normandy, and has a fine turn of speed. After a few minutes' keen bidding it was knocked down to J. F. Boyer, Norristown, Penn., for $1,575.

Lilkobel, a two-year-old trotting colt, bred by John E. Madden, was bid up to $1,025, when it was obtained by Walter R. Cox of Dover. The yearling Buck Watts, by General Watts, went for an even $1,000 to the Brook Farm representative.

High Born Lady, sister to Richmond, a champion two-year-old gelding, sired by Northern Man, went up to $900, an extra $25, and the four-year-old went to W. Kelly, Brooklyn. Among the best sales were the following:

YALE'S NEW TRACK CAGE.

Winter Athletic Work to Begin Soon —Holdover Candidates.

With a new track cage for the use of track and field men at Yale, the managers of athletics at the university hope to be able to get out a team that will be worth while to carry the Blue in 1916. Of the track team of last year there are left Captain Oler, Hampton, Young, Overton, Preston, Johnstone, and Bunker, the latter the manager, and all winners of a "Y" during the last season. From last year's freshman team there will come to the cage to try for places on the university teams Williams, Jones, and Gurney in the sprints, Orr and Walker in the quarter, Farwell and Leisenring in the hurdles, Nagle and McLish in the pole vault, Clark in the broad jump, and Gifford in the high jumps. This seems to be good material to start with.

Work in the cage during the Winter will be especially directed to training men for the second, third, fourth, and fifth places in the intercollegiates in case they are not looked upon as quite good enough for the first-string men. It is generally conceded that too much effort has been expended in the past on the stars at the expense of men good enough to be point winners, even if they cannot first breast the tape. To that end teams will be sent to the meets of the Boston A. A., New York A. C., Hartford, New Haven, and other local indoor competitions in order to get a thoroughly balanced team instead of a top-heavy one, on which all labor has been expended on the "stars."

The new cage for the use of the track men received its new flooring of a mixtrue of earth and clay during the last week, and will be ready for use this week with the return of the students from their Thanksgiving Day outings. This new cage, which is twenty feet in height and breadth, has a seventy-five-yard straightaway, with ample room for four men to run abreast in the hurdle events. It takes in the old baseball cage, the Carnegie swimming pool, and a part of the gymnasium building. There have been made two broad-jump take-offs, a pit for pole vaulters—something Yale has never before had on an earth floor—and pits for high jumpers and shot-putters. The new track will be available for use both day and night, as the baseball cage has been removed so that the ball players will not interfere with the track men. As the team is particularly weak in the shot-put and hammer-throw, an effort will be made to develop new material for these events among the big men of the freshmen class, and there are a number of physically big boys who give promise of being able to adapt themselves to these sports.

Yale to Get Schoolboy Star.

Sidney Gould of Oak Lane, near Philadelphia, will enter Yale next Fall, and the Ells will get one of the best football boys in the school ranks. Gould is now at Andover. He first gained a reputation in athletics at the Episcopal Academy, Philadelphia, where he played end on the football team two years ago, and was also a star on the track team. He ran the 100 and 220 in good time, and his speed gave him a big advantage on the gridiron. He played end at Episcopal, but since going to Andover he has developed into a half back, doing the punting and drop kicking for his team.

Navy Goat Blocks Traffic.

The big black and white goat of the Navy, which will endeavor to butt the Army mule around the Polo Grounds this afternoon, held up traffic in Nassau Street yesterday at 4 o'clock without ever putting his hoofs to the pavement. Escorted by two naval cadets, he remained in a taxicab outside a store while business in the neighborhood was temporarily suspended in order that the goat be given a sufficient welcome. When the crowd had become so great that the street was blocked, the taxicab was requested to move on, and the goat rode away amid cheers.

Declines to be W. and J. Captain.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Nov. 25.—Maurice N. Witherspoon of Chambersburg, Penn., yesterday elected Captain of the Washington and Jefferson football team of 1916, today declined the honor. He explained that he expected to enter McCormick Theological Seminary at Chicago next Fall, and would not be available for the team. Witherspoon played with the 'Varsity team three years.

TOY DOGS SHOWN ON HOTEL BENCH

Mrs. F. T. Clarke's Pomeranian Fairfax Lady Sable Love Gets "Best" Award.

With more than fifty dogs benched in 100 classes, the bi-monthly show of the Toy Dog Club of New York was held yesterday afternoon in the Winter Garden of the Hotel McAlpin. It was one of the best collections of "toys" benched this season, and Mrs. Frank T. Clarke's Fairfax Lady Sable Love, an orange sable Pomeranian, was the winner of all breeds after a lively competition in which several of the dogs were seriously considered for the honor. This little orange sable was shown in splendid condition, and there was little dissension over the award. The result of the judging was an indorsement of the award in the Pomeranian Club show, when Fairfax Lady Sable Love received the trophy.

Mrs. W. H. Chambers had the best Pekingese dog in the show in Yen Sum, and the winner in the opposite sex was Mrs. Clarke's Moy-Fa-Loy. The pair were very evenly matched, but Yen Sum appeared to be in a trifle better coat, and captured the premier award. Mrs. A. McClure Halley won a leg on the Champion Fan Tan of Esterre Cup for the best American-bred bitch under eight pounds, bred, owned, and shown by exhibitor, with Cum Ci of Llenrud. The best American-bred puppy among the Pekingese was Momosa, owned by Mrs. Harrie A. Baxter of Great Neck. The entries for prizes included several exceptionally fine specimens of the breed.

W. T. Drew brought out a very promising-looking English bulldog puppy, Drewstone's Only McGinty, which won the prize for the best youngster benched. In the Boston terrier dog class C. W. Bell's Backe Boy took the ribbon for winners after a close contest with Miss Seelye's Dr. Bull. Among the Maltese terriers Miss K. Stinzing's Champion Yankee Snow Cloud was in a class by itself and easily earned the judge's verdict. Miss Elsie C. Gray's Fluffy Ruffles received the winners' award for toy poodles, and Mrs. Charles Ludlow's Chimes faced little serious opposition among the griffons.

Although the judging was announced for 2 o'clock, it was two hours later before the first award was made. The spectators, however, were entertained with clever dancing by Miss Wilma Wynn and John Clay, and musical selections by Seitz's Orchestra.

The judges were: Mrs. Hunter, Pekingese; Mrs. M. Johnson, Pomeranians; Mrs. McGlone, Boston terriers; H. A. Rost, English toy spaniels. The next show of the Toy Dog Club will be held on Friday, Dec. 16, when champions will be barred from the regular classes. If, however, there are three or more champions, a special prize will be offered for a competition among them.

Lawrence Enters Six-Day Race.

Percy Lawrence, who, with Willie Hanley, a fellow San Francisean, won the Chicago six-day race, which finished Thursday night, has been signed by the management of the six-day race at Madison Square Garden, and will be seen in the coming grind, Dec. 6 to 11. This will be the fifth time Lawrence has appeared in the Garden grind. With Jake Magin he finished second in 1913 to Goullet and Fogler, and the year previous, paired with Walter De Mara, he ran third. Other names added to the Garden entry list by wire are Martin Ryan of Newark and Lloyd Thomas of San Francisco, who finished second to Lawrence and Hanley in the recent grind in the Windy City, and Jake Magin.

DISCUSSION OF DEFENSE PLANS.

The demand made by some of the influential advocates of defense upon the President and the Secretary of War for the publication, without further delay, of the report of the War College recommending measures for the development of our land defenses is perfectly reasonable. The question of adequate defense is vital and pressing. It would be well for every member of Congress, as well as every private citizen actively interested in this matter, to be able to judge for himself in advance of the opening of Congress of the relative value of the plan prepared by the Secretary of War and that prepared within the last year by the War College. The question could not be confused by this advance publication any more than it is now confused by the conflicting testimony of experts as to the immediate requirements of the situation. It is by no means certain that the plans of the War College, prepared by soldiers, would prove more feasible or better suited for immediate action than the Secretary's plan. On the other hand, a combination of the wisest provisions of both plans in the bills to be presented to Congress might be the best solution of the problem.

Certainly, the country is entitled to receive the best military advice in all matters relating to its protection from possible enemies, and, in so far as the experienced officers of the army are opposed to any details of the plan the Administration favors, it is well to have the reasons for that opposition intelligibly set forth and explained. We fear, however, that some military men, of the States as well as of the nation, by their public utterances at this time, are lending force to the idea, which our contemporary, The Army and Navy Journal, condemns, that military men are not fit to be critics of public affairs. We do not entertain that idea. We believe that these contentious soldiers are speaking under the strain of great excitement and have not carefully weighed their words. That seems to be a good enough reason, apart from all others, for the immediate publication of the War College report. It would relieve the Administration of the charge of belittling military opinion by holding back a document prepared by military authorities.

We have been taken to task by one of our military readers for speaking hastily in saying that Secretary GARRISON's plan has the approval of the most competent military authorities. The idea we intended to convey was that soldiers of ripe experience were not inclined to withhold their approval from a plan devised to meet the exigencies of the situation as quickly as possible, one which the President and the Secretary hope to have accepted by Congress early in the session, one which provides for a material strengthening of the regular army, the further development of the National Guard without attempting to remove it from the authority of the various States, and the formation of a reserve. The prime necessity is prompt action. By accepting this plan we can make a good beginning toward preparedness. The idea of the Continental Army should not be condemned offhand. We learn from various parts of the country that young men are preparing to enroll their names among its members. When an army officer suggests that a better plan would be for the Federal Government to take over bodily the National Guard and remove it altogether from State control, he is suggesting an impossibility. It would be as easy for the Federal Government to take over Governor WHITMAN and the Legislature as to take over General O'RYAN and his State troops. Federal officers instruct these troops and supervise their annual manoeuvres. The amount of this instruction is to be increased under the Garrison plan. That is all that can be expected.

The critical army officers should bear in mind that in condemning the Government plan too strenuously they will be playing into the hands of the political opponents of all present army improvement, the company of unpractical idealists, faddists, and charlatans who assert that peace can be preserved only by keeping the nation defenseless, and the few Republican politicians who are willing to defer all preparation in order to give their party an issue in the elections next year. We doubt if any soldier wants postponement of action on this vital question for a year or more, but that is what will happen if we do not take what we can get immediately. That is much better than anything we had reason to hope for a short time ago.

BAY STATE REFERENDUMS.

The lack of interest shown by a considerable percentage of the electorate in referendums is notorious. In some Western States that have a passion for "direct government" the frequency of referendums, the number of questions upon which the overworked voter is asked to give his opinion, is becoming almost preposterous. The inertia of no small element of the voters being known, apparently the reformers and innovators are doing all in their power to increase it. Even in sober Massachusetts, whose Democrats, however, yearn for the initiative and referendum, the three constitutional amendments submitted to the people this month were tossed aside contemptuously by thousands of voters. The most important and most thoroughly discussed of these, the most conspicuous and interesting, the suffrage amendment, was, naturally, the least neglected. There was a human, domestic, intimate character to that which forced it upon every attention. Yet 43,000 men who voted for Governor didn't take the trouble to vote for or against woman suffrage.

On two other amendments the percentage of indifference was much greater. More than 100,000 men who voted for Governor couldn't stretch their Election Day activities to the monstrous effort of marking two more crosses. There were the questions staring at them from the ballot. They wouldn't look. Curiously enough, the income tax amendment, the second amendment in importance to the woman suffrage one, got 15,000 fewer votes than a homestead amendment of smaller pith and moment.

Legislatures would be wiser if they never offered to popular decision more than one amendment at a time. It is all very well to dilate upon "the duty of a citizen"; but citizens must be taken as they are. Don't ask too much of them at the polls. Don't confuse their attention and diffuse their interest by giving them too much to do. They ought to be industrious, energetic, stern, and Spartan, and all that. As they aren't, make their part in the government of the State, the city, the town, as easy as possible. It has been the tendency in recent years to make it harder, the act of voting more complex, the times of voting more numerous. Too many voters cannot live "on this high plane."

At the next Boston election the voters will decide whether strips fifteen feet wide shall be cut from Boston Common to widen three of the inclosing streets. We hope the Common will not be mutilated, but observe that this question is put upon the ballot at the petition of fourteen citizens. Only ten signatures, it seems, to a petition are needed to make a question go on the ballot. Isn't that carrying the referendum, however salutary its purpose, to absurd lengths, making it a bother and a nuisance?

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

The enforcement of the law compelling the publication of campaign contributions has materially decreased the cost of political contests. The list of contributions and expenses in this State is positively refreshing to one who remembers the reckless waste of huge sums of money to fatten corrupt politicians in the bad old days. The whole cost of the campaign for woman suffrage in the State, which was as well conducted as it could be, was $87,131, $2,000 less than the money contributed. The anti-suffragists spent less than $32,000 for the conduct of their spirited and effective campaign. The well-directed and futile effort to enlighten the electorate as to the merits of the proposed new Constitution cost only $41,000; the expenditure of twice or three times that sum would have produced no better results. The largest contributions for this purpose were two of $5,000 each. The Republican State Committee saved $7,000 of the $56,750 received, and two contributions of $2,500 each headed its list. The Democrats, who received very little money, and the Progressives, spent a little more than they got.

This is a good showing and is typical. More intelligent and more spirited work is done in the campaigns than ever before, and there is very little left in that branch of politics for the grafters. Many a needy worker used to get set on his feet out of the rich surplus of contributions by the faithful. The contributors did not like it; publicity has been a blessing for them. It is worth remembering that in the year 1915 the largest sum of money expended in the elections was to secure the vote for women, that it was honestly spent, and was such a small sum as the skillful workers of the past would have sneered at as a mere drop in the bucket.

SENTIMENTALITIES AND FACTS.

According to Athens dispatches, the reply of Greece to the joint note of the Entente Powers is satisfactory to them. Sir EDWARD GREY's satisfaction, if he feels it, remains concealed. The Government was not in a position, he told the House yesterday, to make a statement in regard to the matter. That Greece will grant the Allies just as much as she is forced to do, and no more, may be confidently assumed. The rosy cloud of Hellenophilism that has prevented the British from seeing Greece as it is ought to be dispersed by this time. They had the same illusions about the Bulgarians, great favorites since the massacres of 1876. The Bulgarians have done some very creditable atrocity work themselves since. They are fighting for their own hand; and to bank on any sentimental feeling on their part, and especially on the part of the astute King FERDINAND, was a piece of that "false psychology" which is so often attributed to the Germans. "If I am going to a country of assassins," FERDINAND is said to have said before his journey to Bulgaria to take the crown, "I prefer to have the assassins on my side."

The long, unprotected littoral of Greece keeps her from the direct action taken by Bulgaria; but she must help herself as much and hurt herself as little as she can. She sees the undoubted military successes, so far, of the Germans. No doubt a great many of her people believe Germany must win. Remember that they get mainly German news; that a strong German propaganda and press exist. Schrecklichkeit has had its effect, as Mr. RALLI admitted the other day. How can Greece keep out of the shindy with a whole skin? How can she grab the most for herself in the distribution of the spoils? It is not a heroic, but it is a natural, position. The British seem to have thought they were dealing with a sentimental, a grateful, not a shrewd and practical, nation.

Is the attitude of Rumania the same, substituting Russian for French, British, and Italian pressure? According to Mr. E. J. DILLON, Greece, Rumania, and Bulgaria had agreements with the Central Powers before the war; and Bulgaria a separate agreement with Turkey.

BOOKS AND THE HOLIDAYS.

As the holidays approach there is a quickening interest in books and a corresponding increase of activity in the publishing and bookselling trades. The adaptability of books as gifts is generally recognized, and one who goes a-shopping at this season of the year for books to give his friends is likely to replenish his own library shelves at the same time. For such shoppers in a busy season foreknowledge of the season's new books is desirable. They want to know what books people who keep closely in touch with current literature are reading, and why they are reading them. This information helps in the selection for gifts.

To meet this want the forthcoming number of THE NEW YORK TIMES REVIEW OF BOOKS, published with THE SUNDAY TIMES, its Holiday Book Number, valued as a safe counselor by bookbuyers for many years, will contain annotated lists of the newest and best books, classified and arranged, and much other carefully prepared matter that will prove equally useful. Besides the succinct descriptions of 200 new books of fiction, history, and biography, economics, psychology, and poetry, there is a separate list of books inspired by or relating to the war. Christmas books for young folks, and the development of a new type of gift book, less showy but of sounder merit than its predecessors of former years, are subjects of articles of uncommon interest.

A good book is a gift of permanent value. It is the object of THE TIMES's long-established REVIEW OF BOOKS to spread a knowledge of the good books as they are published. The Holiday Number treats only of the best there is in the literature of the day. Besides serving so well its purpose as a buyers' guide, it will be found to possess a news value and an educational value all its own.

ORATORS.

In the Tennessee Senatorial primary no candidate received a majority. Representative MCKELLAR led the poll. Former Governor PATTERSON was second. The next Senator will be one or the other of these, who have to "run off" the undecided race in another and final contest. Senator LUKE LEA was last and is dished. Mr. PATTERSON has a high reputation as an orator. Senator LEA is what is called "an easy and graceful speaker." He talked more, and more often, than either of his rivals in the campaign; and he was assisted by a squad of Ciceros of the stump, including Colonel HARVEY HANNAH, who shines in Fame's proud temple as "The Little Black Bull of the Roane." Mr. MCKELLAR is a capable and common-sense citizen who has no desire to be enrolled among the golden mouths of politics.

"If," says The Memphis Commercial Appeal, "the result indicates a "decline in the fetching power of ora-"tory, it is a hopeful sign of the grow-"ing discriminating and analytical in-"telligence of our people."

In fact, the primary contest in Tennessee was decided, so far as it is decided, on other grounds than those of the oratorical power, or want of power, of the competitors. It is commonly said that "oratory" is on the decline in America; that much of the work of Congress is carried on in committee rooms, and that great power in that body is often exercised by mostly silent men with no graces of speech. The truth is that there are two types of oratory. The real oratory has been rare in every age. It is the expression in noble language, stripped of "Asiatic" floridity, of the ripened convictions of a great intellect. It can come only from "a full man," as BACON said, from a mind stored with knowledge and experience, disciplined by long thought and study. A speech by DANIEL WEBSTER in Faneuil Hall or the Senate was often such oratory. ELIHU ROOT has the secret of it in our time. Two memorable speeches of his this year have been compact of the severest logical reasoning, touched here and there with emotion and imagination.

There is another sort of "oratory," the false oratory, which is emotion without logic, a shower of fine words, uninformed by other than a shallow thought, rhetoric without much knowledge. This in its various degrees is, or has been, the most popular form of oratory. Mr. BRYAN owes to it all his political distinction and popular favor—when he had it—and pecuniary success. He has, or had, a voice of singular music and power, a splendid gift, half the battle sometimes, for a real or pseudo orator. The Congressional Record is adorned at every session of Congress with many specimens of the queer highfalutin that passes for "oratory" and "eloquence" in some backward or indulgent regions. "His proud boast to "the Tyrant and the Despot is that "his bright home is in the settin' "sun," quoth the Hon. Elijah Pogram.

Great orators have not always been successful politicians. DEMOSTHENES and CICERO were failures. BURKE seems to have been a failure in Parliament and never reached high office. CHATHAM's burning words were powerless to change the colonial policy of the British Government. WEBSTER, and CLAY, hardly to be named with him as an orator, failed to realize the cankering ambition of their lives. But the power to move States and Senates and men by speech remains great and admirable. GLADSTONE had it. LLOYD GEORGE in his best moments has it. Even Mr. BRYAN on a much lower scale has had it; for the false "oratory" is perhaps more likely to appeal to the crowd for a time than the true. If Americans are losing regard for the tinsel sort, so much the better for the country. In saying this no application to the Tennessee orators is intended. And a campaign speech is not to be judged too nicely.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Why Shouldn't They Go If They Choose?

An unnecessary amount of irritation unnecessarily acute has been finding expression in many parts of the country ever since Mr. HENRY FORD again, as so often before, secured for himself that "position" on the front page of the newspapers which is the most "preferred" of all. Large numbers of people are finding one fault or another with his peace-making expedition, and are criticising him for attempting what they call the impossible, but they utter the word in a tone warranting suspicion of some fear on their part that Mr. FORD, who is not celebrated for inefficiency, may accomplish something alarming or undesirable, even though he does not effect the large purpose announced by him.

These apprehensions have little if any basis. For one thing, Mr. FORD, like all the variously distinguished "guests" whom he is inviting to accompany him over the sea, is thoroughly well-intentioned, and whatever of credit and sympathy is earned by that fact should be accorded to him and them. It is not a little. In the next place, as he does not claim, and nobody abroad with any knowledge of us is likely to ascribe to him and his interesting group of assisted emigrants, the quality of representing or speaking for anything except a small fraction of the American population, it can confidently be assumed that he will do as little harm as good, and, that being the case, we shouldn't—or, to follow the vulgate, we should—worry. Again, while it is not true that "a man may do what he will with his own," it is true that he can do a good many things with it freely enough, and among them that of hiring a big ship for a private cruise on a legal errand is certainly one.

Lastly, who knows that Mr. FORD and his pacifical friends, though they do nothing else, will not acquire the knowledge, evidently so much needed by them all, of what this war is about and for? They may come to see that it has two sides, one right and one wrong—that there is more to it than carnage and destruction—that immediate peace, enormously desirable as it is in some respects, might be attained at costs in comparison to which those of continuing the struggle would be negligible. Nearness to the scene of combat may give that information to these worthy folk, just as it has to many others who approached it under the same misapprehensions as theirs.

Supplied an Antidote for Pacifism.

Many and many and many admirable letters on nearly all the subjects there are have come to THE TIMES from its readers, and by it have been gratefully printed. So various have they been that to call any one of them better than any of the rest would be a comparing of incomparables, and therefore unwise as well as unjust, but in its own and related classes the letter which appeared on this page yesterday, signed "Daughter of a Common Soldier," stands easily and securely at the very highest level of excellence.

That the letter was well written, in a style at once simple, elegant, and vigorous, was a characteristic not unimportant, of course, but the substance of the communication is what counted—its clear demonstration that there are still among us women as well as men sincerely appreciative of life's higher values and brave enough calmly and even gladly to endure personal loss and suffering to attain or to save those values.

Another correspondent of ours, not many days ago, manifested equal courage, but of another kind—the kind that was required for confessing satisfaction that of four brothers, three fought in the civil war till they were killed, but the fourth kept out of it, made money, and dowered the nation with a son capable—well, of sneering at the folly of the three brothers and of lauding the wisdom of the fourth!

The "Daughter of a Common Soldier" is of a different stamp. She knows by hard experience what her own father's participation in the same war cost her mother and herself, but she does not regret the payment. She has the sense of patriotism, of devotion to a noble cause—of accepting for its sake poverty and even death, if necessary. Her judgment of war, naturally, is that of every sane and decent person—she hates it and loves peace. But she does not view war as the condition of ultimate horror, and knows that of peace there are more kinds than one, some of them intolerable because despicable.

This country's safety, and even more its right to exist as a country, depends on its possession of women like the writer of that letter—and men worthy of her, as ready for self-sacrifice.

He Found Hunger Unendurable.

Certainly the most important, and probably the most interesting, question raised by the arrival here as a stowaway on a Dutch steamer of a deserter from the German Army is the question whether he is a nearly or quite solitary "departure from type," or whether he differs from a large or considerable number of Germans only in that opportunity and luck better served his weariness of war and his desire to get out of it.

Seen and talked with, this KARL SHULZ gave the impression of being a good specimen of the Saxon artisans of whom he is one—a sturdy fellow, good-natured and humorous, with no obvious indications of either physical or moral cowardice. He did not show himself very deeply concerned about the rights and wrongs of the war, and though he described charging in the open as a trying experience, his real grievance—the thing that made him a deserter—was the poor quality of the food supplied to the men in the trenches, and the occasional complete absence of it. That finally proved too much for his patriotism, and he ran away.

In a recent article contributed to THE TIMES by GERTRUDE ATHERTON the prophecy was made that hunger is the one thing that German patriotism will not stand. Of course, one demonstration of that inability does not prove her contention, but it does recall the fact that she made it and that she has lived in Germany long enough to know something about the people. Moreover, we all know how often and with what rage the Germans have characterized what they call England's attempt to starve them out.

So, while KARL SHULZ is not a noble figure, he may be of enough significance to make him worth further study.

ART NOTES.

Three Collections on View in the American Galleries.

At the American Art Galleries three collections are on view, somewhat confusing in their variety, but including objects of great interest and value. Among the Wedgwood and other ceramics in Mr. Timothy F. Crowley's collection are a number of pieces formerly sold in these galleries from the Townsend collection, the head of Medusa modeled by Flaxman, for example, which at the earlier sale brought more than seven hundred dollars. Another group of Wedgwood medallions came formerly from the famous Hargreaves collection, also shown in the same rooms, and the Robert Hoe and Brayton Ives collections have contributed to Mr. Crowley's. The regular gallery visitor will thus find himself assailed by the associations and memories which form the indescribable charm of long-established auction rooms, where objects of great beauty are assembled, dispersed, and reassembled.

In one of the upper rooms sixteen oak panels carved from the solid wood with pilasters, half columns and a single doorway, make an imposing impression, and in the lower gallery is an interesting screen of tapestry panels in Louis XIV. style. A section of the exhibition given to mezzotints, engravings, and autograph letters is extremely attractive, although no very remarkable examples are shown. Among the more curious pieces is an autograph inscription by King George III., written in German and dated "Palais zu St. James, February 12, 1765." Another bit of history is a playbill from Ford's Theatre for "Our American Cousin," on the night of Lincoln's assassination.

The moderately efficient craftsmanship of Jack Yeats is not often seen on this side of the water, and a little water color called "The Ram," representing a man chased across fields by the animal playing the title rôle is in his best and funniest vein. There are several signed Rowlandson subjects, and a pen-and-ink drawing for Thackeray's "Roundabout Papers" by Charles Keene.

Egyptian Collections.

At the Anderson Galleries the collection of Robert de Rustafjaell, a Bey of the Imperial Ottoman Empire, and member of a number of important archaeological societies, is on view prior to its sale by auction Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, Nov. 29 and 30, and Dec. 1. The collection contains a myriad objects from mummies to scarabs and bracelets, including vases and bottles of incised pottery, alabaster vases, human votaries in clay, bronze statues of Osiris, Isis, Amen-ra, Horus, Ptah, and other gods, weapons and tools, wall decorations, tapestries, paintings on canvas, and hieroglyphics on linen. In two instances it is claimed that the object is the oldest in existence, a painting on canvas, found in 1905, is one, and the other is a sculpture supposed to date back some 7,000 years. Taken altogether, the collection is a happy hunting ground for experts and for the lay observer an assemblage of handsome color and curious form.

On the lower floor of the Anderson Galleries is a collection formed by Azeez Khayat of iridescent glass, Persian potteries, Egyptian necklaces, and other objects of similar class. These will be sold Dec. 3 and 4. The blues in some of the beads and bottles are exceptionally fine.

A Fifth Avenue Arcade.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Our one splendid shopping street is Fifth Avenue, and we all want to use it at once. Having read several suggestions for the relief of the congested avenue, I venture a suggestion that has not been tried out in this city.

Several years ago I wrote to the Public Service Commission urging that, in a certain location, all new buildings be erected with arcade sidewalks similar to the walks at Madison Square Garden, but with the space taken from the buildings instead of from the street, removing the present sidewalks and making the street at least twenty feet wider with safety zones in the centre at all crossings for pedestrians. With the present lighting facilities for show windows business would benefit by the change, for this covered promenade would be crowded in any weather. Any one who has enjoyed such protection in the famous arcades of Paris can vouch for the comfort and pleasure of walking under cover, yet getting plenty of fresh air and exercise.

AN ENTENTE BLOCKADE.

After the Germans Reach Constantinople—What Then?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Great decisive successes spread a salutary fear. The rapid and decisive victories gained by Prussia in Bohemia in 1866 may be said above all to have caused Napoleon to abandon his intervention in favor of Austria; and, in 1870-71, it was probably the magnitude of the German victories that prevented our numerous enemies from drawing the sword in favor of France." (General von Bernhardi.)

I cannot refrain from saying, remembering the march toward Paris, and the treatment accorded to the Belgian population, how literally this precept was accomplished. The Entente Allies, however, must improve on this. This war has to be looked upon with a broad mind. No narrow-minded, short-sighted, isolated national policy may predominate, as to whose interest, or whose particular movement—or any movement—may lead. United we rule; divided we perish. Russia, France, England, Italy, Belgium, Japan, have but one common enemy—the German coalition, organized brigandage. To crush this coalition at any cost must be the concerted animation of the Entente Allies; and no means should be shunned, no matter how vast the consequences, even should there be required the blockade of all the malignant neutrals. Against a great evil heroic measures!

Wherever Germany may be going to march, to any quarter of the compass, in quest of food or materials, she will arrive at the sea, and on the sea lies the predominance of the Entente Allies.

As to the object of this war, we must begin to define the enemy's position and resources in relation to our means, and act, in consequence, on a coherent plan of campaign.

Generally speaking, there are two ways to follow—crushing the enemy by military supremacy, or hunger and the impossibility of his receiving materials to continue the war. Concerning the first point, and in regard to Germany's position, (encircled as she is,) she must needs be on the offensive, while the Entente, having the stronger status—on the sea—can afford to wait her time, with a powerful defensive ready to strike. Given the effect of the modern arms and tactics, and considering the German coalition's numbers, useless frontal attacks which by lack of reserve forces cannot be followed up by a crushing blow should be dispensed with, remembering that Germany is in dire straits. This may be deduced from her outrageous methods in warfare, and from her drastic home measures—the upshot of desperation.

The Balkan situation, with the exception of Serbia and Montenegro, thanks to family relations and premeditated intriguing with the German coalition, is to be considered as unfavorable in respect to the Entente powers. Teuton accuracy has presumed to engage upon a campaign in hostile countries where the smallest reverses would prove fatal. Therefore, we have to face Rumania, (Hohenzollern,) 600,000 men; Bulgaria, (of the house of Coburg,) 300,00; Greece, (whose Queen is sister of the Mailed Fist,) 400,000; Turkey, 700,000 men—a total of about 2,000,000 reinforcements for the German cause. The German advance on the eastern front, through Winter, and the Russian offensive arrested, these influences will delay operations on the western front. Therefore the Kaiser—failing in all of his plans—as a last resort is bent on a triumphant march to Constantinople, all available men from both fronts co-operating.

The question of the hour presents itself: What will be our strategy? There is one element decidedly in our favor of which we must not lose sight; and that is time. We can wait; the Germans cannot. In modern warfare the defensive is more favorable than the offensive; this is obviously demonstrated in Belgium, where the Germans, in spite of the most energetic artillery fire and heroic infantry attacks, could not be dislodged. One million men properly ammunitioned and provided with machine guns and heavy field pieces, flank supported, can hold a force four times their number indefinitely. In view of this, is a Balkan campaign, a campaign in a hostile, mountainous country, sparsely provided with railroad facilities, far from a base, transport ships exposed to submarine attacks, is such a campaign promising?

Or, on the other hand, the Germans in Constantinople, their march not obstructed, but totally held there, a rigid blockade of all Balkan ports maintained, submarine for submarine, the Mailed Fist will be paralyzed.

Baron de Coppin.

An Impolite Audience.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Miss Wyckoff's letter on "Opera Manners" is strangely in accord with my sentiments. Recently I attended a lecture by Garrett P. Serviss, which I left, at its conclusion, in a state of intense indignation, for the audience had, seemingly with one accord, upon realizing that his last slide was being shown, replaced their hats and made such other disturbances that his closing remarks were entirely unheard. So great a discourtesy to so distinguished a man, while not intentional, is a common failing of concert and lecture audiences.

A THANKSGIVING.

Not for our harvest,
Our fields' increase,
Not for our safety,
Our vaunted peace,
Our word-clad justice,
Our light-flung gift,
But for hearts that waken,
For dreams that lift—
We praise Thee, O God!

For Belgium's sword
That faltered never,
For the splendid woe
Of her lost endeavor;
For the great free peoples
In grim advance,
For the might of England,
The light of France—
We praise Thee, O God!

For Italy's flower
Of fearless youth;
For Russia's waking
From dream to truth;
For the flame of Serbia
That mounts in death,
The fire that fails not
With blood and breath—
We praise Thee, O God!

For dull ease broken
By sharpest dole,
For the dart that is driven
Through flesh to soul;
For wrath made sterner
By right's eclipse,
For brave songs breaking
From pain-wrung lips—
We praise Thee, O God!

For faith that is born
From the burning nest,
For the spirit's flight
On its starward quest,
For peace that dwells
At the heart of strife,
For death that scatters
The seed of life—
We praise Thee, O God!

HOW CANADA REGARDS THIS GOVERNMENT.

Not Representative of the Will of the People, It Has Forfeited the Leadership of Democracy on the American Continent.

By WILLIAM BANKS, JR.

Toronto, Canada, Nov. 22, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A report published here of the speech on "Preparedness" delivered by the Hon. Joseph H. Choate before the Massachusetts Branch of the National Security League at Pittsfield says:

"He maintained that the United States is the most hated nation of the world, and quoted Dr. Heiser, head of the medical affairs of the Rockefeller Institute, as his authority for the statement that in the British dominions beyond the seas Americans were the most hated people on the earth.

"The reason for this," said Mr. Choate, "is because this country has not taken sides in the present European war one way or the other, because they are getting fat on the trade of the warring countries, and because they are building up their merchant marine service. They are spoken of as a people too proud to fight."

So far as Canada is concerned the remarks of Mr. Choate and Dr. Heiser are too literal; they are, in fact, misleading, because Canadians make a clear distinction in their feeling and attitude toward the people of the United States as individuals and toward the Government of that country.

First: The people of Canada do not hate the people of the United States. There are too many ties of actual blood relationship, language, sentiment, and common sympathy for that. Moreover, Canadians believe that the allied cause is heartily favored by the vast majority of Americans. If it could be shown that this was not the case, and that, above everything else, the American people have regard only for trade and profits arising out of the war, there would still be no hate of Americans; there would be surprise, bitter disappointment, and keen regret.

Second: Canadians do think that the present Government of the United States misrepresents the American people in their relation to the war. They believe that "supine" is not too strong a word to apply to the course it has followed since the conflict began.

It would be almost impossible to make any one who has not lived in Canada understand with what eagerness the people of this country looked to the Government of the United States to rise to its opportunity in the situation caused by the German invasion of Belgium. Canadians did not want Washington to send an ultimatum to Germany. They have never wanted and do not now want the United States to become actively involved in the war, and they are very strong in the determination that the United States shall have no voice in the peace terms. These phases of the war need not be discussed here.

But Canadians did hope, nay, they believed, that there would go from Washington such a message of protest as should thrill the free peoples of the world. Mr. Wilson and his Government may have shivered, but they failed to thrill either themselves or any one else, and in the hour of their failure the leadership of democracy on the American Continent passed from the United States to Canada.

Absurd! you say? Think it over.

When the war is ended in the only way it can end—toward which country on the American Continent do you think the tide of European emigration will flow? To the United States, where German and Austrian propagandists, emboldened by the pusillanimity of the Government, carry on their anti-Ally campaign by use of the dynamite bomb and the torch, in contemptuous defiance of "the majesty of the sovereign State," or to the country that dared to take its place at once in "the battle line of freedom," without a thought of the cost?

Remember that Canada's offer of assistance was made to the motherland before war was declared, and without a thought of what it might mean in bringing "war orders" to this country. Canadians think that the tide of emigration will flow to their shores; that in the years to come it will even bear on its bosom the peoples against whom Canadians now fight, because they, too, will finally see that Canada, though it owes allegiance to a Crown, is a democracy in spirit and in truth.

It is perhaps true that before the war most Canadians found more or less comfort in the reflection that in time of trouble our big neighbor to the south would be more than a reed to lean upon. Not that they ever doubted the ability of the British Empire to give them all the aid they might need. But the knowledge that the United States was so near helped somewhat when the alarmists talked of a world combination against Britain and sudden dashes on the outlying sections of the British Empire. Today Canadians know that their confidence in the United States is unfounded; they believe that the Government of that country at any rate would maintain a strict neutrality, no matter what might betide Canada. The knowledge has come by degrees, but it has sunk deep, and Canada is the better for it and is unafraid.

Canada's faith in herself and the empire was never greater than it is today; her respect and love for the mother country was never stronger. Canadians are making many comparisons just now, and many of them are not complimentary to the United States. Suppose, they say, that the United States and not Britain had been at war with Germany, and that a great American liner had been destroyed under the conditions that attended the sinking of the Lusitania, with the loss of many British subjects. Would Britain have waited seven months in passive patience for an answer to a demand for disavowal and reparation? Americans know she would not have done so, and so do Canadians. Is it necessary to recall all the turnings of the other cheek of the United States Government with ineffable politeness to the mailed fist of German autocracy? Are the people of the United States proud of that record, down to the "closed incident" of the Cavell murder and the haste of their Government to save the face of the German Government, in that the crowning infamy of the series of shameful acts that has marked the contravention of the rights of Belgium, the little kingdom that was not too proud to fight for honor?

Americans have sometimes seen Canadian militiamen at their annual training in peace time. I wish that many Americans could have been in this city a few days ago to see the great parade of overseas battalions, a number of which had just completed months of strenuous camp training and had hiked from Niagara on the Lake to Toronto, some eighty-odd miles, under conditions as nearly as possible approaching those of actual campaigning. American onlookers would have then understood why Canadians, who know that these troops represent a small part only of the empire's resources in men, believe that the defeat of the central powers is certain.

While waiting for the parade one little group discussed the latest American note to Britain, and particularly those sections in which the rights of neutrals are so sonorously referred to, and the blockade is spoken of as illegal and ineffective. They smiled over the latter, while admitting that there was much from the United States point of view to justify the note. The "rights of neutrals" part drew stinging comparisons with the attitude that the United States Government had taken—or had not taken in the case of Belgium. Then, to the blare of bugles, the soldiers began to pass. A woman in the group wept as one regiment went by—her husband was in the ranks; one of her boys is in an English hospital recovering from wounds received in Flanders; another is now in the firing line in France. She waved bravely as her husband marched by, and then, wiping her eyes, she said: "Thank God I'm a Canadian!"

WILLIAM BANKS, JR.

AN ARMED TRIBUNAL.

One Whose Decrees Shall Be Enforceable by Its Military Power.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your columns recently contained a spirited account of Mr. Kingsley's address before the Chamber of Commerce. The essence of that address seems to be, "Prepare fully for war, but at the same time offer plans of peace."

Last Winter it was fortunately possible to interest some of our legislators in a specific plan dealing solely with the olive branch feature of the proposed national policy. As a result, Senator Shafroth introduced S. R. 233, which, if passed, would commit our Government to the theory of an armed international tribunal. Whether he will adopt the sword feature, as well, of the plan outlined in both the addresses above mentioned, I do not yet know.

To further prosecute the whole work I have just returned from Europe, where I passed six months in Belgium and the invaded provinces of France. Possibly some good was done, but so vital does this other matter seem to me, I could almost regret the interruption it caused in my own efforts toward the objects outlined in Mr. Kingsley's speech. These involve, I think, the most important international questions to which an American citizen may now devote his energy.

It was intended by those with whom the proposition was discussed before I left to urge the simultaneous discussion and enactment by Congress of appropriations for larger military preparations, and of resolutions (such as S. R. 233) committing our Government to the armed tribunal idea.

These two planks in the platform might be separately covered in the legislation. If conjoined, by making the appropriations lapse, if and when the tribunal be established, the full meaning of the "sword and olive branch policy" becomes more obvious. It so appears in the draft presented to the Technology Club. By the adoption of such a program we, the most powerful among nations, say to the world—all in the same breath:

"We shall amply prepare to defend our conception of our rights by force of arms, or we will join others in setting up a tribunal whose decrees as to grave international disputes shall be final, and enforceable, when necessary, by the tribunal's military power. We prefer this latter alternative, but we shall not go unarmed in an ungoverned world. It depends upon you—the other great nations—either to co-operate with us in a peace-keeping plan, or to compete with us in war-preparing and perhaps war-making programs."

It is my earnest belief that if similar alternative enactments be discussed in identical terms, (except as to details of appropriations,) by responsible Parliaments throughout the world, we shall soon know whether the nations are, or are not, ready to change the frontier, hip-pocket pistol regime for the life of ordered, civilized communities. As to what the outcome will be in the next fifty years or so, I do not know. Until it is determined affirmatively it seems unwise to assume that the world (of sovereign nations) is a Sunday school instead of a jungle.

It is also intended to urge discussion of these policies, in recommendatory form, even in such legislative bodies as cannot finally determine national action. In our own country, State legislators may thus be of great influence in shaping Congressional action.

A NICARAGUA CANAL.

Should It Be Built by Canada or the United States?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some pertinent truths are pertinently told in your editorial under the caption, "The Nicaragua Treaty." There is, indeed, urgent necessity of early action by our Government on the treaty with Nicaragua, which shall reserve for us the right to build a canal over the Nicaragua route. On a recent trip through Latin American countries I was greatly surprised at the industrial and financial activities of Canadians in those countries. Canadian enterprise has gone a far way in the West Indies and in Central American States. Branches of Canadian banking and merchandising houses are to be found in almost every place of any size. Canada has nothing so large or so important in Latin America as our own United Fruit Company, but American capital should extend our influence and our trade there where Canadian capital now, and in other times European capital as well, has accomplished so much. These Latin Americans still feel that we in the States patronize them, and have only a selfish interest in them.

Financially, the Central American republics are in a hard way, due mainly to the European war. This is particularly true, I have learned, of Nicaragua, and I have just heard that President Gonzales of Costa Rica has recently transmitted to the Congressional body of that country a message emphasizing the need of rehabilitating the finances of the republic.

In Central America one hears a great deal of the proposed Nicaragua Canal, and I was little short of amazed when I learned from people who had journeyed along the route of the suggested Nicaragua Canal line that there are only minor obstacles in the way of opening this new channel between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It appears that at the mouth of the San Juan River is a sandbed, approximately two miles wide, which must be opened; then the river must be dredged and perhaps slightly widened up to Lake Nicaragua; some dredging also may be necessary in this large body of water. From the lake to the Pacific Ocean is a strip of land which, I was repeatedly told, is forty miles wide or thereabouts, and flat. Already a sort of canal connects the lake with the ocean.

There are some in Central America who are not optimistic over the future prospects of the Panama Canal, and who believe that the proposed Nicaragua Canal would be highly successful. I am not informed as to the locks necessary along this route; no one told me that any locks would be required, although the tide levels of the two oceans vary very considerably in the Panama Canal region. I am not adequately informed on this phase of the Nicaragua engineering project.

I believe that General Goethals will conquer the obstructions in the Panama Canal that now appear so discouraging, and that the Panama Canal will fulfill its great usefulness; but why not also open the Nicaragua Canal? If we don't, another nation will!

NEW SINGER'S VOICE FAILS AT HER DEBUT

Erma Zarska, Bohemian Soprano, Finishes Singing in 'Lohengrin' Almost in Whisper.

SUFFERED A SEVERE COLD

Bodanzky Conducts Wagner's Work for the First Time Here—Honors to Mme. Matzenauer.

LOHENGRIN, opera in three acts, by Richard Wagner. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

King Henry.......Carl Braun
Lohengrin.......Jacques Urlus
Elsa von Brabant.......Erma Zarska
Friedrich von Telramund.......Hermann Weil
Ortrud.......Margarete Matzenauer
The King's Herald.......Carl Schlegel
Conductor.......Artur Bodanzky

Erma Zarska, the new Bohemian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, made her American début last night under unfortunate circumstances, for just before the beginning of the third act of "Lohengrin," in which she was singing Elsa, it was necessary for William J. Guard of the Opera House staff to go before the curtain and request the indulgence of the audience for the singer who, he said, was ill, but would endeavor to go through the performance. At the end she was singing almost in a whisper.

It was said she had been suffering from a severe cold for several days and, although a throat specialist had said Thursday she would be able to sing when they were considering changing the opera, her condition took a sudden turn for the worse yesterday. She decided, however, to try to get through, but the attempt proved a failure. She was noticeably weak and uncertain vocally when the opera started, and toward the end her voice had dwindled to slight proportions.

The cast for "Lohengrin" last night was made up of those already familiar in their rôles. Mr. Bodanzky conducted it for the first time here, and again there was noticeable a refinement of nuance, vigor that, in the orchestra at least, never went beyond the bounds of the poetic, and a disposition to allow lyric elements as appropriate expression as the more dramatic ones. It was a performance not free from trifling raggedness in orchestra and chorus, however, fine as it was in general outline. The vocal honors went to Mme. Matzenauer, who was in good voice and highly impressive.

Messrs. Urlus, Weil, and Braun are familiar in the characters they portray, and if occasional vocal shortcomings were sometimes more in evidence than formerly, owing to the subduing of the orchestral volume, their good points were made the more striking by a sensitive orchestral support. Mr. Schlegel did well with the rôle of the Herald, which was not in his hands last season.

The cast will include Florence Reed, John Miltern, Forrest Winant, and Jessie Ralph. The photographing of the exterior scenes has been begun under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

Osa Waldrop will make her vaudeville debut about holiday time in a one-act playlet by John R. Hymer, entitled "Petticoats." Later in the season Miss Waldrop will assume the title role in a new play, "Friend Martha," by Edward Peple.

Upward of 3,000 children were in the audience at the Hippodrome yesterday afternoon. A feature of the performance was the presentation of her laurels to Loretta Wagner, the little Brooklyn girl who won the zoo essay contest in Brooklyn.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

Percy Grainger, Soloist, Plays Delius's Piano Concerto.

The Philharmonic Society gave the patrons of its afternoon series at the concert yesterday the exciting experience of Mr. Percy Grainger appearing to play a pianoforte concerto hitherto unknown in New York. The concerto is by Frederick Delius, in C minor. A few orchestral pieces by Delius have been played here; Mr. Damrosch brought out his "Brigg Fair" in 1910 and Mr. Stransky his "In a Summer Garden" the next season. His connection with the United States has often been mentioned; and, for those who seek, it is not difficult to find traces of his American sojourn in his music. His sojourn was in Florida, and consequently its influences take something of the cast of negro music in rhythms and intervals. There may be something of the sort felt in this concerto, though it is not a very potent reminder of the negro influence.

The concerto is a singularly uneven piece of work. It stands in one movement, but there is little difficulty in discerning the outlines of an opening allegro, an intermediate slow movement, and a quick finale. The themes are vigorous and expressive; one that appears in the slow section has real beauty and individuality of character. The composer has gone about his development of them in a manner that is sometimes flamboyant, sometimes in the most aggressive virtuoso style; he has done better things, however, in the treatment of his slow section, which has a truly poetic atmosphere.

Delius works in a rich and original field of harmony, "modern" in a way that has little of the abhorrent offense to the ear lately brought into prominence, and that gives peculiarly the right, the inevitable substratum of his musical thought of which it is an essential part. The orchestration is one of the features of the work in which unevenness is conspicuously shown. To effects of quite remarkable beauty and originality of color he has joined others that seem of an almost crass unskillfulness and ugliness; and to both of these kinds his writing for the solo instruments contributes at one time or another. There are passages in which the pianoforte is made laboriously and uselessly to fight the orchestra; there are others that show an unusual deftness in bringing about its harmonious union with the orchestra.

Mr. Grainger let nothing of this composition, in many respects remarkable, escape him. He played it with ardent enthusiasm and conviction, and with a tremendous energy that sometimes made more demands upon the pianoforte than any pianoforte can respond to properly. His performance was brilliant in meeting the very exacting demands of the composer and the executant's technique, and certain of the peculiar effects, as the harmonic glissandos in the last section, were done with a peculiarly sensitive feeling for their value in color.

The program of orchestral pieces comprised Mendelssohn's overture, "Fingal's Cave," Schumann's second symphony in C, Strauss's tone poem, "Don Juan," and Dargomiszky's cosatchoque, a fantasie on a Russian dance.

COL. SISTARE, CUSTODIAN OF GRANT'S TOMB, DEAD

Civil War Veteran Was a Member of Stock Exchange When Ruined by Partner's Defalcation.

Colonel William H. M. Sistare, custodian of Grant's Tomb for the last ten years, died on Thursday at his home, 549 Riverside Drive, in his seventy-fourth year. He was a veteran of the Civil War and went out with the 102d New York Volunteers as Adjutant. Colonel Sistare fought through the entire war and was twice wounded. In 1865 he was mustered out with the brevet of Lieutenant Colonel.

In the same year Colonel Sistare became a member of the New York Stock Exchange and a member of his father's firm, George K. Sistare's Sons of 16 Broad Street. For the next twenty-five years he was one of the most active members on the Exchange, but in the Spring of 1890, when he was the sole member of the firm, it was forced to suspend by the defalcation of the Philadelphia partner. Colonel Sistare had just completed the reorganization of the Lackawanna & Western Railroad, and the vaults of his firm were filled with the bonds of the road, which would have shortly been disposed of, when the Philadelphia partner fell ill and died. It was discovered that he had embezzled more than $300,000, and, in spite of Colonel Sistare's desperate efforts to save his father's firm, it was forced to go out of business.

Colonel Sistare dropped from sight for many years, until one day he was recognized by a former intimate on the Exchange, who found him the custodian of Grant's Tomb.

He was born at 170 Broadway, his father coming to this city from New London, Conn. Colonel Sistare was a member of Alexander Hamilton Post, 182. He is survived by three daughters. His funeral will take place tonight, and will be followed by a private interment.

MEN OF THE OLD STONE AGE
By HENRY FAIRFIELD OSBORN
President of the American Museum of Natural History

THEODORE ROOSEVELT says: "I regard your book as one of the real contributions to productive American scholarship."

This extremely readable volume promises to be the most important and complete work on human evolution which has appeared since Darwin's "Descent of Man," for the reason that it is the first full and authoritative presentation of what has actually been discovered up to the present time in regard to human pre-history.

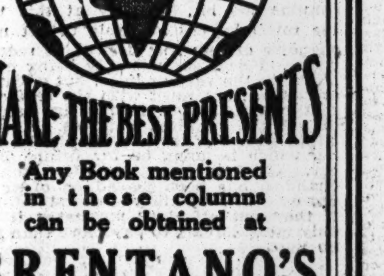

All the known prehuman and human stages of development for the last five hundred thousand years are described as fully and fairly as the material allows. As soon as enduring remains of warlike and industrial life begin to appear, namely about one hundred and twenty-five thousand years ago, the author traces every step in man's economic and social evolution, and, finally, all the known stages of artistic endeavor.

It is written in the lucid and easy style which has made the author's earlier philosophic work, "From the Greeks to Darwin," a standard reference for the early history of the theory of evolution.

LORD & TAYLOR QUIT WHOLESALE FIELD

Directors Authorize Sale of That Branch of Their Business, and J. H. Emery May Buy It.

TO EXTEND RETAIL TRADE

Final Assent Must Come from Stockholders, Who Are to Meet on Next Tuesday.

There is to be a sale of the wholesale department of Lord & Taylor, which includes the hosiery importing business of that house, if such action is authorized at a meeting of the stockholders of the company to be held next Tuesday afternoon in the company's offices at 424 Fifth Avenue. The Directors have already approved of the proposed sale, and the authorization of the stockholders is assumed by them to be a foregone conclusion. The action of the Directors was made known in the following notice, sent to the stockholders:

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of Lord & Taylor will be held on the 30th day of November, 1915, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, at the office of the corporation, 424 Fifth Avenue, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, for the purpose of authorizing the Directors and officers to sell the wholesale department of the corporation, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.
Dated, New York, Nov. 13, 1915.
By order of the Board of Directors.
BRENT M. TANNER, Secretary.

The purpose of the sale, it was said yesterday at the company's office, is to turn all of the company's capital into the retail business. It was denied that circumstances caused by the war or by local business conditions were responsible for the desire to make the sale. The Directors simply believe, it was explained, that the interests of the stockholders will be promoted by concentrating the business on the retail trade and expanding that.

The probable purchaser of the wholesale and hosiery importing departments is J. H. Emery, President of the Lord & Taylor Company. If his bid is accepted, Mr. Emery will continue the wholesale and importing business without interruption or extensive change in its management. The present wholesale office of the company is at 153 East Twenty-fourth Street, and it is probable that the business, when sold, will remain there, no matter who takes it over. Liquidation of the business is not contemplated.

The house of Lord & Taylor is among the oldest and largest hosiery importing firms in the country and one of the very first to gain prestige in that field. However, since the opening of the company's new department store at Thirty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue the company's attention has been devoted chiefly to the retail business.

IMPORTS ARE LESS.

Details of Those Which Came to This Port Last Week.

Imports which have been fluctuating at this port for a long time took a drop in the week ended Nov. 20, their value being only $14,535,726, according to the Custom House report issued yesterday, against $18,114,399 in the week before, and $17,996,490 in the week before that. Dry goods also shared in the decline.

Aniline color imports amounted to $14,299, a big gain from the preceding week when they were returned at $3,799. Less synthetic indigo was brought in last week than for a long time, its value being only $5,699, whereas weekly averages have been around $40,000. There was a rise in dyewood extract entries, their value being set down at $18,874, while logwood totaled 651,000 pounds, worth $3,595. Argol imports reached $44,816.

Precious stones, jewelry, and watches had a value of $1,168,320. Of these goods, gems aggregated $1,126,824. India rubber, manufactures, waste and substitutes reached $1,292,236, while hides and findings were returned at $808,059. Coffee entries continued heavy with 186,227 bags appraised at $2,111,133. Raw cocoa entries totaled 24,161 bags valued at $596,849, while sugar imports were 153,852 bags returned at $1,554,685. There was a spurt in fur importations, their value being $523,915. Some of these furs were ordered months ago but detained by the Russian embargo recently lifted. Importations of wool were 7,394 bales appraised at $481,275.

Dry goods entered for consumption were valued at $1,690,186, silk entries being reported as of a value of $500,128. In the week before dry goods entered for consumption had a value of $2,030,668, silk entries amounting to $630,010. Withdrawals from bonded warehouses last week aggregated $682,390, while warehoused goods were returned at $614,126. In the corresponding week last year the entries were respectively, $593,100 and $862,196.

CONDITION OF TRADE.

Commenting on the condition of trade and the business of the banks, Dun's Review says:

Notable activity in business in every section of the country continues to be reflected in a remarkable expansion in the clearings through the banks, the total this week at the principal cities in the United States, according to Dun's Review, amounting to $3,192,278,075, an increase of 71.9 per cent. as compared with the $1,858,295,618 of the same week last year and of 34.5 per cent. as contrasted with the corresponding week in 1913, when $2,373,681,371 was reported.

Widely divergent lines in all sections reflect a sustained growth in business movements and volumes. Manufacturing operations still broaden, with overtime in force in many instances, while retail distribution steadily enlarges under the stimulus of increased payrolls and continued low temperatures. As the season advances, holiday goods become a more conspicuous feature and there is every indication that results in this particular branch will prove exceptionally gratifying. With money circulating more freely, collections show further improvement and the commercial mortality diminishes, fewer failures occurring this month than in October.

Bradstreet's says:

This week's reports, reflecting as they do cumulative growth in trade and industry, display a marked degree of snap, the situation in general being the best noted for a long time past. Misgivings as to the immediate future are negligible; in the leading industries operations are being pushed to the utmost, labor is scarcer, payrolls are heavier, and a spell of cold weather, plus the increased spending power of the masses, has wrought marked improvement in retail trade, progress in which also is helped along by holiday buying.

JITNEYS CRIPPLE CAR LINE.

Atlantic City Company Goes Into Receiver's Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 25.—The jitney bus competition has forced the Atlantic City & Shore Railroad Company, operating cars on the principal thoroughfares of the city, into the hands of a receiver. On complaint of H. F. Backman & Co. of Philadelphia the United States Court at Trenton today appointed Judge Clarence L. Cole.

The company reports an actual deficit of $300 a day. It owes the West Jersey & Seashore Railroad Company $35,000, has out $950,000 bonds, on which $23,000 interest will be due on Dec. 1, and has no money in hand. The loss during the last year was reported as $100,000. In the five previous years, however, $1,000,000 in profits was said to have been paid to stockholders.

Judge Cole announced tonight that it rested with the City Commission whether the cars should stay. There seems to be sentiment in favor of the city operating the line.

FIGHT MILLIONAIRE'S WILL.

Court Vetoes Widow's Testimony as to Townsend Claimants.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 26.—Testimony in the suit in equity brought to determine the rightful heirs of George Townsend, millionaire engineer and railroad builder, who committed suicide here in 1913, was completed in the Circuit Court here today. The estate is claimed by the brothers and sisters of George Townsend, on one hand, and by two sons of Mrs. Margaret Hackman Townsend, widow of the engineer. Mrs. Townsend married the millionaire three months before his death. The boys were born while she was the wife of August Hackman, a druggist of East St. Louis, Ill.

Mrs. Townsend was not permitted to take the stand to testify regarding the boys' parentage. The court held that a parent had no right to discredit children born in wedlock.

Townsend's brothers and sisters, to whom the estate was bequeathed, are: Edward W. Townsend, former Representative in Congress from New Jersey; Miss Cornelia Townsend, Mrs. Anne L. Davis, and W. R. Townsend of Milwaukee, Wis.

MRS. FOWLER'S WILL FILED.

Surrogate and Brother Share in Their Mother's Estate.

The will of Mary Ludlow Fowler was filed for probate in the Surrogates' Court yesterday. Mrs. Fowler was the mother of Robert Ludlow Fowler, the Surrogate. She died at her home, 12 East Seventy-third Street, on Sept. 14. The petition accompanying the will recites that there is no realty and that the personal property exceeds $10,000.

Two-thirds of the residuary estate is left in equal shares to the sons, Robert L. and Thomas P. The remaining third is left in trust for the life benefit of Lewis Benedict of Flagstaff, Ariz., a grandson.

A codicil bequeaths a diamond ring and a bureau, given the testatrix by her grandfather, to Mary Ludlow Fowler, a granddaughter, while the sons share equally in their mother's clothing and books. The New York Life Insurance and Trust Company is made trustee of the fund for the benefit of the grandson.

Aged Bridegroom's Will Held Invalid

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn has held invalid a deathbed will made by Thomas S. Sutherland, a contractor of Troy, N. Y., in November, 1913, the day after he was married to Mrs. Sarah E. Murray of Centre Moriches, L. I. In the will he left all of his $50,000 estate to his bride and her children by a former marriage. Charles H. Sutherland of Troy, an only son of the contractor, contested the will and a jury decided for him, but Justice Jaycox set aside the verdict, ordering a new trial. The Appellate Division reinstates the verdict of the jury. Sutherland was 78 years old and his bride was 65 years of age when they were married.

FUR AUCTIONS HERE.

The First of Them Scheduled to Take Place in January.

New York is to have its long-promised fur auctions. The movement to establish these sales here has been spurred on by the success achieved in St. Louis by Funston & Co. The New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation will hold its first sale on Jan. 25 at a place still to be determined upon. The company's operations are to be modeled closely on the methods employed in the London sales. Advances will be made to shippers, and dealers and manufacturers alike will be given an opportunity to make purchases. Commissions will be exacted on the sales, and interest on the money advanced to the shippers.

The location of the sale is a matter still being considered, but some big hall will be used for the purpose. The success of the sales in St. Louis has rather worried the New York concerns, who understood very well that if something were not done toward establishing an auction here it might be an easy matter for St. Louis to become the buying centre and hold the advantage.

The following are the officers of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation: Charles S. Porter of G. Gaudig & Blum, President; O. Godfrey Becker of Becker Brothers & Co., First Vice President; David Steiner of Joseph Steiner & Brothers, Second Vice President; Edward M. Speer of Theodor Thorer Company, Treasurer, and Stephen Brooks Rosenthal of the law firm of Rosenthal & Heermance, Secretary. Those mentioned with the addition of Herman Ganss of the Ganss Fur Company and Almond E. Prouty of J. L. Prouty's Sons, constitute the Board of Directors. Besides these, the subscribers to the company are Eisenbach Brothers & Co., Milton Schreiber, M. S. Elias, Jr., Heinrich Eulenstein, and Hugo Hanschke.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Trading in the wheat market was comparatively quiet, but after an early decline of ½c, as a result of weakness in Liverpool and Winnipeg over our holiday, values rallied, and throughout the greater part of the day were firm, closing with a partial reaction, but at a net advance of ¼c. In the local cash market No. 1 durum was quoted at $1.11⅝, free on board, New York; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.07¾, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.09, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The market for corn was again firm owing to buying by commission houses, prompted by continued strength abroad and evidences of a bullish sentiment in the market owing to disappointing husking returns which were said to confirm the claims of a large percentage of low-grade corn in this year's crop. Buyers were a little cautious toward the close of the day, however, owing to fears of an overbought market, and prices experienced a partial setback, closing with net gains of ⅛@⅜c. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 79¼c. There was some export inquiry, and sales were reported of about 5 loads.

OATS.

The oats market was fairly active, and prices were firmer owing to a show of strength in the cash position and reports of export sales of 100,000 bushels. The local cash market was firm; No. 3 white quoted at 48¾ to 48¼c; No. 4 white, 41½ to 41⅝c; ordinary to fancy clipped, 41½ to 45⅝c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

A partial decline in the price of live hogs caused an easier opening in the provision market, but subsequently prices developed firmness on active buying by commission houses and covering. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 45,000; estimated for Saturday, 22,000; Kansas City received 5,000, and Omaha, 6,000.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts, two days, 6,700 packages. The market was lightly supplied with fine fresh butter at the opening, but considerable of the delayed stock came in later, and it looks as if there will be enough of all classes of stock to go around, except possibly gilt-edge quality, which comprises a small part of current arrivals. Values are unchanged throughout. Ladles and packing stock a little steadier, but quiet. Creamery, extras, 92 score, 33c; higher scoring, 34c; firsts, 28@32c; seconds, 25@27½c; thirds, 23@24½c; creamery, held, extras, 92 score, 28@29c; higher scoring, 29½@31c; firsts, 26@27½c, State dairy, finest, 30@31c; good to prime, 27@29c; common to fair, 22@26c; renovated, extras, 24½@25c; firsts, 23½@24c; lower grades, 21@23c; imitation creamery, firsts, 23@24c; ladles, current make, firsts, 22c; seconds, 20½@21c; lower grades, 19@20c; packing stock, June make, fine, 20½@21c; current make, fine, 20½c; No. 2, 19½@20c; lower grades, 18@19c.

EGGS.—Receipts, two days, 8,401 cases. Fresh gathered eggs are rather quiet and the tone a little unsettled. Very fine qualities are still scarce, and there seems to be demand enough for such to absorb the supply. Trade for average good and lower grades is dull, and there is an increasing pressure to sell, under the impression that arrivals may increase somewhat in the near future. Storage eggs irregular; some holders talk firm and are offering reservedly, but others are offering freely and report only a moderate movement at the prices last quoted. Nearby eggs are showing a slight increase in supply and trade is very quiet; the full range of values is without material change, but the average of sales is perhaps a shade lower, and there are very few for which top quotations can be realized. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 44@45c; extra firsts, 41@43c; firsts, 35@40c; seconds, 28@34c; thirds and poorer, 23@27c; dirties, No. 1, 22@23c; No. 2 and poorer, 17@21½c; checks, good to choice, dry, 20½@21c; culls and inferior, 16@20c; Fall held, 22@39c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, 24@24½c; firsts, 23@23½c; seconds, 22@22½c; thirds or poorer, 19@21½c; dirties, 18@21c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 60@63c; ordinary to good, 40@58c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@60c; Western, gathered whites, 38@45c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 40@48c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 36@45c; nearby, refrigerator whites, 25@28c.

Raw Cocoa Prices Off a Little.

Prices asked for raw cocoa in the local market have eased off a little in the last week as a result of some drop in the demand, principally for export. This was due, it was said, not so much to a declining demand on the other side as to the dificulty in obtaining freight space on outgoing steamers. Some increase in supplies also helped to ease the market. These were the prices quoted on leading grades yesterday: Sanchez, 17@17¼ cents; Grenada, 18@19 cents; Arriba, 20@20½ cents; Caracas, 18@19 cents, and Bahia, 18@19½ cents. The lowest price was quoted on Haiti stock, it being 16¾@17 cents, while Maracaibo cocoa was highest, being held at 21@22 cents.

Sheetings Sold Well.

A good business on sheetings in the gray was done in this market yesterday, some of the sales being made at figures which showed increases of a quarter of a cent a yard over the corresponding prices of two or three weeks ago. The bag trade were good buyers. Among the sales recorded during the day were large lots of 4-yard, 48 squares, at 5¼ cents, for delivery during the remainder of this year. Big sales of 4.70s were also made for this year's delivery at 4¾ cents, while some good business was put through on 3.75s at 6 cents, for shipment during the first quarter of next year. A pretty good twill business was reported, and fancies and special goods moved freely from all accounts.

Raw Silk Prices Rocketing.

The Yokohama raw silk market scored an unusually sharp advance during the week, prices rising over $50 a picul, or an increase of 10 per cent. or more. Business has been temporarily checked by the rise, but this has apparently not put a stop to the upward movement. Sales for the week amounted to 4,600 bales. The Canton market continues to advance on light business. Holders refuse to make firm offers, even for the shortest time, and it is out of the question to operate without open orders. Shanghai is strong, with few sellers. Further advances were recorded on steam filatures and tasatlees. The Milan market is very firm, with reelers sold up for three or four months to come and prices rising. Business in this city continues good, though prices are getting to the point where buyers are reluctant to follow.

Too Much Feed for Fowl.

William A. Bird of Buffalo shipped here a lot of live poultry from Brigden, Ontario, the journey taking one day. The fowl were invoiced as 15,500 pounds in weight and were so entered. The weigher's return, certified by the Deputy Collector, gave the net weight as 19,300 pounds, on which duty at one cent a pound was taken. A protest was made and this came before the Board of General Appraisers, who rendered a decision yesterday. This upheld the Collector because the testimony and facts "were presented in such a slovenly, unsatisfactory and inconclusive manner" and also, among other things, because the Appraisers did not believe that 800 pounds of feed were needed by the fowl during twenty-four hours, this weight being claimed as tare.

Another Pile Fabric in Favor.

There are plenty of signs to indicate that the vogue for pile fabrics has not reached its limit of popularity. Corduroys are being sold ahead in large quantities for the coming Spring. Some of the big operators in the cutting-up trade are understood to have purchased supplies of golfine, a narrow welt corduroy, in quantities of $50,000 at a clip. This material will be warm enough for wear in the early Spring and not so heavy as to prove uncomfortable when the season grows colder. White is a favorite, not so much because the manufacturers are pushing it on account of the dye scarcity, but because of the skating fad for which it will be used extensively. High colors will rule, light greens, old rose, and the coral which many regard as the coming shade.

No Job Lots to be Found.

No better indication of the profitable business that is being done in all of the ready-to-wear lines is given than the absence of anything in the nature of a genuine job lot. Usually at this time the retail buyers are able to get merchandise of any sort desired at reduced prices. Prices are not only being maintained in the various lines, but advances are asked that meet with the ready acceptance of the buyers who are anxious to get the required supplies. A most happy aspect of the situation is the buying which is going on for future delivery. Quite a large quantity of merchandise has been placed on order for Spring. The retailers understand that if they put off their purchases it will only mean having to pay more than they do now.

Says Lace Outlook Is Good.

One of the prominent buyers, who has just returned from abroad, is very optimistic regarding the outlook for laces for Spring. He says that Paris predicts full skirts to Spring dresses and much trimming, which will probably result in the cutting up of considerable yardage for this purpose. Indications are, he said, that lace trimmings for undergarments will also be much in vogue. Vals., high-grade Venise effects, Bretonne nets and Orientals, in his opinion, should do well when the retailers start laying in their Spring supplies in earnest. Prices are high abroad and goods are scarce, which should presage early buying, the advances ranging from 5 per cent. on certain Nottingham laces to 25 per cent. on some of the best St. Gall products. Production troubles are predicted in all the manufacturing centres, possibly excepting Nottingham, because of the shortage of raw materials and labor. The production of Vals, in particular, it is said, will be slow.

French Penalize Sale of Ships.

Following similar legislation in the other principal belligerent nations, a law in France now prohibits the voluntary sale to a foreigner of a French seagoing vessel either at home or abroad during the present war, and for a period of six months after peace is declared. Exception to this prohibition, however, may be authorized, subject to conditions to be specified by the Minister of Marine. The sale or attempted sale of a French vessel is punishable by a term of imprisonment varying from one to six months and a fine of from 16 to 500 francs, or one of these penalties alone. The ship, moreover, shall be confiscated, and in event that it is not captured the court shall order in substitution of confiscation the payment of a supplementary fine equal to half the value of the vessel. The British Government adopted a law of the same sort last February, and the German and Austrian Governments early in the Fall.

Printcloths Were Active.

There was a better demand for printcloths in the local gray goods market yesterday than for some time, and prices were firmer in several instances. Sales were reported on 39-inch, 80 squares, for this year's delivery, at 6¼ cents, while 72-76s in that width moved at 5⅝ cents for shipment in January and February, and 68-72s sold at 5⅛ cents. Some spot 39-inch 56-44s sold at 3⅞ cents. On 38½-inch goods there were sales made of 64 squares at 4⅝ cents for December-January delivery, while 64-60s sold heavily for shipment during the balance of the year at 4 7-16 cents. They are now held generally at 4½ cents for any delivery. Sales of 38½-inch 64-56s were made, for delivery in the next three months, at 4⅝ cents, and for December-January shipment 60-52s in the same width sold at 4¼ cents. Lots of 27-inch 64-60s that were available at 3⅛ cents have been cleaned up, and 3¼ cents is now asked for any shipment. Asking prices at the close were:

39-inch, 80-80s	6¼c	38-inch, 64-60s	4½c
39-inch, 72-76s	5⅝c	38½-inch, 64-56s	4⅝c
39-inch, 68-72s	5⅛c	38½-inch, 60-52s	4¼c
39-inch, 56-44s	4c	38½-inch, 60-48s	4⅛c
38½-inch, 64-64s	4⅝c	27-inch, 64-60s	3¼c

How the Milliner Got Even.

A local business man, who has a friend in an up-State town who is a milliner, told a story yesterday of how the latter got "even" with one of the leading social lights of the place after she had tried to be unfair with him. The husband of the woman in question had had a bit of hard financial sledding, and during the "reconstruction" period she had to go light on clothes. So one day she had the milliner send up some of his best hats on approval, which he did. She sent them all back, but in a few days appeared on the street with a duplicate of the most expensive one of all, which she had evidently made herself. In that town there is a middle-aged woman of uncertain mental qualities and unquestionable poverty who is more or less of a town character. To her the milliner gave the original of the duplicated hat, much to the discomfort of the social queen, who apparently saw the point.

TO STANDARDIZE WORK.

Chemists in the Customs Service to Meet for This Purpose.

Is was announced yesterday that the Government is about to centralize and standardize the work of the chemists in the customs service. While the Treasury Department, by means of the Comparative Value Committee, composed of tariff experts, is carrying on an organized movement for uniformity in the classification and valuation of imported merchandise, the various laboratories at the leading ports have been run in a more or less independent fashion. The Treasury administration, it was stated, is now desirous of putting this branch of the service on a more efficient basis.

Accordingly, a call has been issued for a gathering of the chief chemists at the different ports to be held at the Appraiser's office in this city early in January, probably on Jan. 10. Besides New York, which will be represented by Dr. E. R. Pickrell, chemist in charge, chief chemists will be present from the customs laboratories at San Francisco, New Orleans, Kansas City, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Boston. Frederick Bates, who has general supervision of sugar polarization tests at all ports, with headquarters at Washington, will represent the Treasury Department.

"The object of the conference, which is the first of its kind to be held," said Dr. Pickrell yesterday, "is to standardize methods and equipment and to create a co-operation between the various Government laboratories. The primary plan is to solidify this branch of the customs service and put the laboratories on a thoroughly efficient basis. Thousands of samples representing imported merchandise are submitted to the Government chemists every year for analysis in order to determine the components of chief value. The results of these analyses determine the classification and the rate of duty assessed, and it is therefor, a matter of importance to the Government and importers alike that uniform returns be made."

QUITS LAND COMMISSION.

American Member of Panama Board Cables His Resignation.

PANAMA, Nov. 26.—Levi M. Kagy, American member of the Panama Joint Land Commission, announced at a meeting of the commission today that he had presented his resignation, to take effect as soon as it was accpted by Secretary of State Lansing. Mr. Kagy gave ill health as the reason for his withdrawal.

It is known, however, that he has informed friends on the Isthmus that he has not been entirely satisfied with conditions, owing to friction which he says has existed of late in the commission. Mr. Kagy has requested Secretary Lansing to send acceptance of the resignation by cable.

SPRINGFIELD CHECKS UP.

Illinois City Shows High Percentage of Charity Recipients.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 26.—One in ten of all Springfield families received some form of social service in 1913, according to the Springfield Survey report on charities, the seventh of a series on Springfield life, based on investigations made under the direction of the Russell Sage Foundation. In all 5,000 Springfield citizens, young and old, received some form of social service.

The report goes on to say, however, that "offhand Springfield would seem to be a city of such economic good fortune as to keep family or individual distress and dependency at the very minimum." In support of that idea attention is called to coal mines, fertile fields, railroads, and industries. There are few foreign-born inhabitants, single family houses are in the majority, and there is comparatively high per capita wealth. Nevertheless, the survey report says: "Many of the unwholesome living conditions of the congested and poorer neighborhoods of the large cities find duplicates here, together with their unfavorable results."

FLIERS REACH SAN ANTONIO.

Army Aviators Complete Trip from Fort Sill, Okla.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 26.—Two aeroplanes of the First Aeroplane Squadron, U. S. A., flying from Fort Sill, Okla., to Fort Sam Houston, this city, reached here at 9:35 A. M. today. The other four followed within a few minutes.

Captain B. D. Foulois, who was in command, expressed complete satisfaction with the trip. In reporting to Major Walter L. Clarke, Chief Signal Officer, he informed him that the only expense to which the Government had been put by the flight, except the outlay for fuel, was the cost of repairing a bent axle and a broken tail skid. He said little engine trouble had been experienced on the long journey.

To guide the officers in making accurate landings a strip of white canvas had been laid on the field at a point northeast of the hangars. As the aviators came down they endeavored to bring the machines to this line. None of them missed the mark more than 100 feet, and most of them brought their aeroplanes to rest directly on it.

SHIPPERS' DECLARATIONS.

The New Rules Affecting Them to Go Into Effect Jan. 1.

With a view to facilitating shippers' declarations for export by water under the new regulations to be made effective Jan. 1, next, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has decided that these declarations may be taken before any person authorized to administer oaths, and not, as heretofore, exclusively before the Collector of Customs at the port of exportation. It was said yesterday that this will materially assist their preparation by the original shipper instead of by his agent at the seaboard, who is less well informed.

In order to meet the heavy demand for copies of the new regulations, the bureau has printed a new edition of the rules, together with explanatory notes. These may be had upon application to the local bureau or at the headquarters in Washington. The bureau also will furnish, without cost, copies of the so-called Schedule B containing the official classification of all merchandise entering export trade.

The requirements on the part of common carriers have been somewhat simplified, and hereafter copies of the waybills will be accepted from the railroad companies in lieu of car manifests. In vessel manifests a notation that the values are as stated on the shippers' declarations will be accepted in lieu of a detailed statement of the value of each shipment. Officials here connected with the bureau said yesterday that after New Year's the legal requirement, that goods shall not pass out of the jurisdiction of the United States until shippers' declarations are presented in due form, will be strictly enforced. Exception will be made only when the carrier gives bond to produce within fifteen days export declarations (original or duplicates) for all shipments.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Much New Financing—Stocks More Active and Slightly Higher.

A good deal of important new financing was announced yesterday and plans were laid for syndicates to underwrite reorganization plans recently announced or soon to be formulated. Work on these operations helped to restrict the general trading in bonds, but the stock market on the other hand was more active than on recent days, and prices on the average showed a slight gain.

The announcements of new financing suggested that we have entered upon a period in which larger demands are likely to be made upon the capital market for both home and foreign needs. There have been relatively few new issues of bonds by corporations, but there are numerous railroads and other corporations which will have applications to make for new money or at least for money for refunding purposes. The improvement which has been going on in the bond market has paved the way of such financing which can now be done on considerably better terms than those which could have been had earlier in the year. The fact that this is so leads the financial community to expect that this opportunity will be taken by many corporate borrowers to fill their requirements.

We have progressed far enough in supplying the needs of other markets as well as our own to cause loans to European borrowers to be regarded as a natural phase of our banking activities. Yesterday's news included formal announcement of the $50,000,000 credit for English banks which had been under negotiation for some time. Still larger credits are proposed in other forms, and it seems certain that the applications to the American market from abroad will increase in amount and in variety. So far we have not gotten far away from loans based on the credit of foreign governments, but we shall be called upon to go much further than that if we are to seize the opportunities, and the profits which go with them, offered to us by reason of Europe having to forego her rôle of banker for the rest of the world.

Forced not only to cease lending abroad, but also to borrow abroad, the English market has turned to us for a credit to be used in stabilizing the market for sterling exchange. The new credit which has been made for six months to a group of English banks on the security of British Government bonds will be used directly for that purpose, thus supplementing by direct action the indirect effect of the recent Anglo-French loan. The proceeds of that loan were reserved for the use of the British and French Governments. The proceeds of this credit will be at the disposal of bankers for the benefit of the exchanges between London and New York. It is noteworthy, however, that none of these transactions have so far put an end to the shipment of gold to the United States, which shows as well as anything can the practically irresistible drift of the exchanges in favor of this country.

The announcements from Washington dealing with the proposed increase in Federal taxes and with other Treasury proposals brought into little closer range the fact that we are very near to the convening of Congress, but this fact brings no great concern to the financial community because the belief prevails so widely there that not much in the way of new legislation is to be expected. The view is entertained in some very high banking quarters that the party in power will not care at this time to adopt any program which would be regarded an injurious to business in general or to important departments of the business machinery of the country, such as the railroads.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

An Anniversary.

A year ago today the Stock Exchange reopened for business after a recess of more than four months. The first session was limited to bonds and the Committee of Five, which ruled the affairs of the Exchange, kept a watchful eye on the market. Nervousness was apparent in numerous quarters on the board. Foreign liquidation was feared, and there were few who thought that within a few months would begin a bull market able not only to absorb easily all selling from abroad, but to take up tremendous offerings from domestic sources. Stocks were admitted to trading two weeks later, and by that time Wall Street was far easier in its mind. Even then, however, a correct forecast of what the year was to bring forth would have been greeted with jeers.

Inspiration Moves.

Brokers who watched the ticker closely yesterday thought they saw in the behavior of Inspiration Copper an indication that the large block of stock hanging over the market for some time had been cleared away. They reasoned from the fact that large amounts of stock changed hands on advancing quotations that another move was under way. Sales yesterday totaled about 29,000 shares, and resulted in a net gain of 1¼ points. Rumors have been afloat that Inspiration will be merged with Anaconda, but yesterday these were laid aside in favor of a report that the merger would be effected with the Kennecott group. Inspiration has been a favorite for a long time with those who give advice but remain out of the market themselves.

A New Credit, and Its Uses.

While $50,000,000 is not a very large sum, viewed alongside the sum total of purchases which have been made by English buyers in this market, it lifts that much from the pressure of bills on the sterling market. The new credit is to be used entirely for commercial transactions, and will give British importers an opportunity to buy drafts on New York on easier terms than have been possible for some time.

American Can Awakens.

Considerable zest was imparted to trading in American Can yesterday for the first time in a number of weeks. That is, there was more interest on the buying side than speculators had displayed since the last movement in Can carried it from the 40s well above 60; in the recession of three weeks ago the stock was sold persistently enough to mark more than 4 points from its price at the start of the decline. News that the company had received a new order for shells seemed to be the signal for yesterday's upward swing, and later the rumor spread that the Directors next week would move to pay off all the 8¾ per cent. accumulated dividends on the preferred. It was learned that whatever might be done at the Directors' meeting, the entire board had not yet decided to take favorable action on the payments in arrears. At least one Director is known not to have given the matter any consideration. The war order signed this week is small when compared with the $38,000,000 contract signed last Summer. Wall Street heard that it was $10,000,000 worth of shrapnel. In quarters of authority it was intimated that this estimate was somewhat larger than the actual total.

Mr. Schwab and His Stock.

Until Charles M. Schwab decides to tell the complete story of his activities and experiences in this memorable year for Bethlehem Steel, it is probable that the public will hear many stories. According to his own statement a few days ago, his original holdings of Bethlehem shares have not been disturbed. There was good reason for the belief last Summer that German interests had approached him with a proposal for the sale of his stock, and other offers have been reported since. Mr. Schwab has declined in his usual affable way to comment on these reports. If his friends know what he has had put before him besides contracts for war supplies, they have remained equally silent. Yesterday Dow, Jones & Co. stated in their news slips that Mr. Schwab had been offered $600 a share for his common and $200 for his preferred, and declined the proposal, as he had an earlier offer of $400 a share for all his stock, both common and preferred. The payment was to be made in cash, a total of $53,000,000. Viewed from the market point of view it would seem, if these offers actually were made, that the steel man missed getting top prices for his shares, as Bethlehem common went to $600 a share and no higher on the Stock Exchange, while the best quotation for the preferred was $184.

The Other Man Worries.

The problem of finding something new in the steel situation is becoming difficult. The mills are working at capacity, the salesmen are taking things easy because more orders are being thrust upon them than they dare accept, prices are hardening in practically all lines, and steelmakers state that this condition is likely to last for some time to come. In another way of putting it, the steel business is well nigh stuck on a dead centre, with all elements of the manufacturing structure devoted to the turning out of products as fast as possible. All is peace and content in the industry. There are times when the managers worry about what they may or may not find to do next month. They are not doing so now. The worrying is left to consumers who have next month's supplies to think about and not enough in sight.

New Marine Plan.

Work on a substitute reorganization plan for the International Mercantile Marine Company, drawn in the interests of the preferred stockholders, has advanced so rapidly that an announcement may be expected early next week. The plan is based on the findings of expert accountants who went over the books of the marine company. One of the things which interests Wall Street is the representation which the common stockholders will get under this substitute plan.

Western Maryland.

The earnings of Western Maryland continue to show big increases, and the prospects, it is said, were never so bright in the history of the road. The railway company is under able management now, it has a good road bed, and it has enough equipment to handle all business now in prospect. The improvement in earnings is not limited to the coal shipments, but extends to general business as well.

Union Pacific Prospers.

The Union Pacific Railroad yesterday reported the greatest gains in both gross and net earnings in October for the same month in several years. The increase of gross revenue was $1,074,000 and the gain in net amounted to $836,000. The net gain was scored despite an increase of $223,000 in operating expenses and a slight upturn in taxes.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

War News Inspirits Dealings on the Stock Exchange.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Money and discount rates were steady today. American exchange opened weak, but was steady later at 4.70.

The tone of the stock market was increasingly cheerful on the war news. Some big houses quietly absorbed securities at the low level, but the feature of the trading was a further spurt in consols and the war loan. Both were freely marked and the former advanced 1¼. Oil shares and Kaffirs were in good demand, but copper and rubber stocks were easy.

American securities were steady and the Pacific stocks showed an advancing tendency. High prices brought out more American gold bonds and the markings therein were more frequent.

Bourse Trading Irregular.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Prices were irregular on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 64f. 50c. for cash. Exchange on London, 27f. 83c.

BEARS IN COTTON DRIVEN TO COVER

Market Opens Higher and Soars More Than $2 a Bale Above Wednesday's Close.

NET GAIN 43 TO 46 POINTS

Short Interest Had Become Top-Heavy and Was Stampeded by Sharp Advance in Liverpool.

Cotton broke out of its rut yesterday and made an advance of more than $2 a bale over the closing prices of Wednesday. There were signs of uneasiness among the shorts before the Thanksgiving holiday, and evidently Liverpool bears shared this anxiety, for the English market yesterday morning was the equivalent of twenty American points higher than due, and spot sales amounted to 14,000 bales. The local market opened practically on a parity with Liverpool, and, in spite of heavy liquidation attracted by this sharp upturn, prices yielded very little and later advanced 25 points with final prices around the top and the undertone firm.

The occasion for the display of strength was the refusal by Southern holders to sell, to which attention has been called in this column in the past few weeks. The restricted movement of the crop gave ample evidence of the firmness of Southern holders. As a usual thing, if cotton does not break under the weight of the movement by the middle of November, there is not likely to be any demoralization after that date, as producers have satisfied their pressing obligations and are in a fairly independent position.

In addition to this, the short interest has accumulated, as is customary in a period of dull and sagging markets. Buying by bears to cover was largely responsible for the buoyancy imparted to the trading. It does not look as if the short interest was by any means covered. There is also a big short interest in spot cotton, as spinners have failed to fix the price of their purchases, and many shippers have sold ahead to spinners with the expectation of buying at a still lower level.

The into-sight for the week was estimated at about 395,000 bales against 579,000 last year, and 657,000 two years ago.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were firm, 12 to 40 points advance. The local market for spot cotton was steady, 45 points advance, middling, 12.30; sales, 100 bales. Futures closed firm.

Kennecott Shareholders to Vote on Underwriting and Merger

The Kennecott Copper Corporation has called a special meeting of shareholders to be held in this city Dec. 14 to vote on a proposal to increase the capital stock from 720,000 to 3,000,000 shares and its stated capital from $6,000,000 to $15,000,000. This procedure will be preliminary to the purchase from the Guggenheim Exploration Company of 404,504 shares of Utah Copper stock in the former's treasury, and of the stock and bonds of the Braden Copper Mines Company outstanding.

The shareholders will be asked to approve these purchases, and also the formation of a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. and the Guggenheim interests to underwrite the plan to the amount of $65,000,000. A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Chase National Bank, and William B. Thompson, a Director of the local Federal Reserve Bank, will be managers of the syndicate. The Kennecott Corporation, if the plan goes through, will offer Braden Company security holders one share of Kennecott stock for each three and one-quarter shares of Braden stock, and slightly more than thirty shares for each $500 bond of the Braden Company. Such Braden bonds and stock as are not exchanged for Kennecott stock will be bought by the syndicate at $15 for each share and $1,500 for each bond.

Holders of Kennecott 6 per cent. bonds may accept forty shares of Kennecott stock in exchange, or $2,000 in cash for each bond. For its services the syndicate will receive as compensation 5 per cent. of $65,000,000, paid in the shape of 65,000 Kennecott shares at a set price of $50 a share.

$50,000,000 CREDIT TO BRITISH CLOSED

Ten American Institutions Join in Making an Advance to Eight London Banks.

LOAN IS TO RUN SIX MONTHS

To be Secured by £11,000,000 British Government Bonds Deposited with the Bank of England.

The $50,000,000 supplementary bank credit which had been under negotiation for a number of weeks between a committee representing eight London joint stock banks and a committee of ten American institutions became a fact yesterday, when final approval of the terms was decided upon at a meeting of the New York members of the committee. Under the arrangement $50,000,000 in dollar exchange is provided for the use of English importers.

The credit is to run for six months and to carry interest at 4½ per cent. In this country the amount will be divided among a number of institutions by the committee. It is believed that most of the money will be supplied by New York banks and trust companies, but one or more Chicago banks will participate with them.

The credit is not renewable at the end of the six months, and any new arrangements made then will be based on the prevailing rates for money. It is secured by the deposit with the Bank of England of £11,000,000 in British Government bonds. The exchange created will be used by the London banks according to the judgment of their committee for the purpose of stabilizing the exchange market.

Yesterday's meeting was held at the National City Bank, and was attended by Frank A. Vanderlip, Chairman of the committee; J. E. Gardin, Vice President of the National City Bank, in charge of the foreign exchange department; Seward Prosser, President, and Fred I. Kent, Vice President, of the Bankers' Trust Company; James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce; R. Y. Hebden, agent for the Bank of Montreal; A. H. Wiggin, President of the Chase National Bank, and Max May, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company. Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company; William H. Porter of J. P. Morgan & Co., and James B. Forgan, President of the First National Bank of Chicago, were not at the meeting.

It was said that no enlargement of the credit was contemplated at this time, and developments along that line will depend largely upon the course of the exchange market. The British Government has to its credit still its share of the unexpended proceeds of the Anglo-French loan.

The British committee, which will draw on the various United States banks for the $50,000,000 as needed, is headed by Sir Henry Cunliffe, Governor of the Bank of England, with whom are associated Sir Edward Holden, Chairman of the London City and Midland, and Sir Felix Schuster of Union & Smith's Bank.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

While prices in the late afternoon trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange tended to react from early higher levels, the undertone generally remained good. It was evident in the opening dealings that trading sentiment regarding the market had crystallized favorably over the holiday. Brisk buying developed in a number of sections of the list, with some of the price gains of substantial proportions.

RAILROADS ARE ABLE TO FLOAT BIG LOANS

$60,000,000 Baltimore & Ohio Refunding Bond Issue Taken by Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

ATCHISON GETS $10,000,000

Sells Preferred Stock to Morgan & Co.—Syndicate to Underwrite the Wabash-Pittsburgh Plan.

The improvement in the securities market has given an impetus to railroad financing. Two railroads, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, announced plans yesterday, and others are expected while the bond market maintains a healthy tone. A plan was reported also to get the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway out of receivership by underwriting the unpaid assessments called for in the reorganization plan.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Speyer & Co. purchased from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company $60,000,000 5 per cent. refunding and general mortgage gold bonds, and these bonds, it is expected, will be offered to the public. This issue is the first allotment under the $600,000,000 general refunding and improvement mortgage which was authorized by the stockholders of the Baltimore & Ohio a year ago. The mortgage is more than suficient to refund all obligations falling due between now and 1925. It covers the entire B. & O. system.

It is proposed to use $40,000,000 of the proceeds of the new bonds to refund the same amount of gold notes maturing in 1917 and 1918. The balance, it was said yesterday, will be used for specific purposes which cannot be announced at this time.

In the case of the Atchison the financial district was greeted with a rather unusual announcement. The Atchison sold $10,000,000 of preferred stock to J. P. Morgan & Co., subject to approval of the stock issue by the Kansas Public Service Commission. The firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. has sold the stock to large investment interests at private sale on the same condition. The terms have not been made known, but the stock, in accordance with the Kansas Public Service Commission ruling, cannot be sold below 98½. The old preferred stock sold yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange between 101¼ and 102⅛. The proceeds of the sale are to be used for general improvements.

There was some surprise that the stock was not offered to stockholders. It was explained that the issue was so small that the pro rata subscription rights would have amounted to only 1½ shares for each share outstanding. It was thought better to sell the issue outright.

It is a long time since a railroad has financed its needs by selling stock. In the last two years of railroad depression railroad stocks did not look attractive enough to float, and bankers would take responsibilities only for good bond issues. The Atchison has made such a good record, however, that its stock is now selling above its best bonds. Since the stock crossed par the conversion privileges have been freely utilized, and the next annual statement will no doubt show a great increase in the capital stock outstanding and a corresponding decrease in the amount of fixed-charge capitalization. In the financial district attention was directed to the new Atchison financing because the barrier against stock selling had been crossed.

A third venture reported yesterday was the formation of a syndicate to underwrite the unpaid assessments under the reorganization plan of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway. This plan calls for an assessment of thirty per cent. on the $30,000,000 Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal first mortgage bonds. This assessment was regarded as so heavy that many bondholders refused to assent to payment. The plan gives the $20,000,000 second mortgage bonds a chance to subscribe to any unpaid assessment.

Details of the syndicate's plans were not available yesterday, but an announcement is expected today. Prominent banking houses which have been associated with Wabash-Pittsburgh affairs were mentioned in connection with the syndicate. According to the last official announcement by the reorganization committee only $11,000,000 of the $30,000,000 first mortgage bonds had paid the first installment of the assessment.

WILLIAM WOODWARD TO AID.

Banker Joins American International Corporation as Director.

Organization of the new American International Corporation will not be completed for several weeks, but another Director was elected yesterday, making the twenty-third. He is William Woodward, President of the Hanover National Bank. Only one man remains to be chosen to fill out the board.

The National City Bank was in receipt yesterday of a great many more applications for stock in the new $50,000,000 trade and finance corporation, and it was said that many of them would have to be rejected. Awards of stock are not to be made in the order of the receipt of subscriptions, but in an effort to place as much as possible with men and firms engaged or likely to engage in foreign trade.

Subscription letters have not yet gone out to stockholders of the National City Bank, who are entitled to subscribe share for share in the new company, but it was said that it is not anticipated that much of the $25,000,000 set aside for this purpose will remain uncalled for. It was said by an officer of the corporation that the applications for positions which have poured in indicate that many more Americans have had experience in foreign trade than had been suspected when steps were taken to form the organization.

New President of Moffat Line.

DENVER, Nov. 26.—Charles Boettcher of Denver was elected President of the Denver & Salt Lake City Railroad, (the Moffat Line,) at a meeting of the directors here today. He succeeds Newman Erb of New York City, who became President at the reorganization of the road two years ago. Lawrence C. Phipps, also of Denver, was elected Chairman of the Board of Directors.

PROSPERITY TO STAY, BUSINESS MEN SAY

Bankers Believe the War Marked Our Ability to Save and Build Up Reserves.

FEW MEN OUT OF A JOB

Trade Is on a Firmer Basis as a Result of Steadier Habits of Saving and Industry.

Confidence that the present prosperity is not illusory and not dependent on war orders, but only the beginning of a period of better times, has been expressed for THE TIMES by leading bankers and business men. While they recognize that the export trade with the belligerents has had a very great part in bringing the country out of the depression which obtained a year or so ago, many of them think that the development of steadier habits of saving and industry among the people have put business on a firmer basis than that of the temporary munitions trade.

"The demands made on the manufacturing and other resources of the country by the necessities of Europe," said A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank, "has not only increased prosperity in some lines but has given a general upward tendency to the volume of business. I think there is reason to expect the continuance of good times; even if the war stops within the next year. I think that a good general business will follow the present somewhat lopsided business."

Alexander Julian Hemphill, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Guaranty Trust Company, said that he did not see how any one could regard the situation otherwise than optimistically. "The present period of prosperity was beginning before the war," he said, "and the outbreak of the war gave it only a very temporary check. Our marked ability to save and build up reserves was developed by the crisis and has been of material help in creating a prosperity which in my judgment will last."

Louis Stern, President of Stern Brothers, said that things were undoubtedly very much bettter and that he saw no reason why the condition should not continue. "The enormous volume of exports to foreign countries has undoubtedly been a very great factor in the recovery," he said, "but there is a good foundation for the present conditions. There is hardly anybody unable to get employment, whereas a year ago there were many. The factories are busy, and a hundred million people who are used to spending money are now finding that they have it to spend.

"In New York particularly business is better because many people from the interior who have found times getting better have come here to spend it; and there are many others who used to go to Europe every year who are now spending their money here. I think that at least a part of this business will remain in New York after the war. But everywhere trade is much improved. When you are short of funds you buy no new clothes, but wear your old ones until you can wear them no longer. If you get some more money about the time they are wearing out you at once go out to buy something. That is the situation the American people are in today."

A prominent Fifth Avenue merchant who did not wish his name to be used was more inclined to view the present revival as good by comparison to the period immediately preceding rather than as marking a notable age of prosperity.

"There is a tendency," he said, "to judge New York by the noisiest part of New York, which at present is the stock market. Things are not as good as you would think by watching the stock market, but they are nevertheless pretty good—much better than they were a year ago. Apart from the war orders, however, prevailing conditions mark improvement in many ways. We had been talking efficiency for years before the war, but not till the economic stringency came as a result of the war was that talk put into practice in many quarters. In the South, for instance, the attempt to persuade people to place less dependence on cotton was not very successful till the war made cotton hard to sell. Here in New York some houses failed, and some of those that were left benefited in other ways than the fact that there was no longer so much competition. Employes work harder now, there is more industry and more intelligent industry, for every man who kept his job was glad to have it and studied out ways and means of making sure he would keep it. The result has been a great improvement in the operation of the stores."

Police Give Brooklyn 1,828,835.

The completed figures of the census taken by the police in Brooklyn, which were turned over yesterday to Commissioner Woods by Deputy Commissioner Godley, give that borough an increase of 20,000, as compared with the State census of last June. The police pub Brooklyn's population at 1,828,835. Brownsville is the most populous section of the borough.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Big Leases by Wholesale Firms in Old Retail Shopping Centre—Baseball Park Rumor in Harlem—$175,000 Brooklyn Deal—Suburban Property Buying.

Apart from the rumored purchase by the Federal Baseball League of three entire Harlem blocks for a baseball park the leasing market contained the chief features of interest in the day's activities yesterday. The steady adjustment of the old Twenty-third Street shopping centre to the new wholesale conditions was well shown in the renting of a floor in the old Arnold-Constable building by Sears, Roebuck & Co. and another lease to a wholesale cotton firm of large space in the old Stern department store.

The baseball rumor, which has been a matter of gossip in baseball circles for some time, was to the effect that the three blocks between Fifth and Lenox Avenues, 142d and 145th Streets, were under contract for purchase and leasing by the Federal League for conversion into a popular-priced ball park. The Pinckney estate, the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, and the Greenwich Mortgage Company are the principal owners.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. to Move Uptown

Sears, Roebuck & Co., for years located at 438 Broadway, corner of Howard Street, have decided to join the uptown movement of trade and have leased a floor in the building just vacated by Arnold, Constable & Co. for its new home at Fortieth Street and Fifth Avenue. The lease, which is for a long term of years, and was negotiated by Carstein & Linnekin as brokers, affects the fourth floor of the building, which has a frontage of 371.6 feet on Nineteenth Street, 84 feet on Fifth Avenue, 69.11 feet on Eighteenth Street, and 82.11 feet on Broadway, in all comprising about 32,000 square feet.

$350,000 Fourth Avenue Lease.

The United States Realty and Improvement Company has leased in the Mercantile Building, at the southwest corner Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, the store 20 by 80 at 56 East Twenty-third Street, and a basement space of 10,000 square feet, also a sub-basement space of 2,000 square feet. Horn & Hardart Company, owners of the Automat Restaurants, are the lessees.

The lease is for a term of twenty-one years at an aggregate rental of $350,000 and the negotiations include a lease to M. R. Harris, optician, of the building 45 East Twenty-second Street, for a long term of years; and extending for a long term of years the lease with the Beck Shoe Company on the store 50 East Twenty-third Street; and Irving Hat Company for store 58 East Twenty-third Street. Pease & Elliman negotiated the transaction.

Another $100,000 Lease in Old Stern Store.

Another important addition to the wholesale firms which have recently moved to the old retail shopping centre on West Twenty-third Street was announced yesterday by M. & L. Hess, who leased to M. Lowenstein & Sons, converters of cotton goods, now located at 20 Houston Street, for Stern Brothers, the westerly half of the store and basement, comprising about 40,000 square feet, at 32 to 46 West Twenty-third Street, running through to 21 to 35 West Twenty-second Street, formerly occupied by Stern Brothers Department Store and more recently by the Cosmopolitan Garden.

The lease is for a long term of years, at a rental aggregating $100,000. This completes the rental of all of the ground floor space formerly occupied by Stern Brothers Department Store, leaving but a few upper floors for rent. Extensive alterations are being made in the building, which is expected to be ready for occupancy about the first of the year.

On Monday last the easterly half of the store and basement, comprising about 40,000 square feet, was leased to Lax & Burgheimer, distributers of knit underwear.

FUNDS OF ECUADOR TIED UP BY COURT

Speyer & Co. Restrained from Using Customs Collections to Pay $1,500,000 Loan.

INJUNCTION IS TEMPORARY

Bondholder of Guayaquil & Quito Railroad Asserts Prior Claim to Receipts from Duties.

Erskine Hewitt, a citizen of New Jersey, who is a member of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders of the Guayaquil & Quito Railway Company of Ecuador, obtained yesterday in the Federal District Court a temporary injunction from Judge Hough to restrain James Speyer and the other members of James Speyer & Co. and the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, as trustee under the mortgage of the railway company, from distributing a fund derived from the customs duties of Ecuador until the rights of the bondholders be decided. Speyer & Co. are the fiscal agents for the Government of Ecuador.

The Guayaquil & Quito Railway was built as the result of a contract dated June 14, 1897, between Archer Harman and his associates and the Government of Ecuador. This provided for the formation of a company in the United States, which should build a railroad from Chimbo Bridge to Quito, Ecuador; should rehabilitate a railroad between Duran and Chimbo, and make connections between Duran and Guayaquil and provide equipment and stations for the entire system.

This American company was to take up at par certain bonds and preferred stock, and furnish the money for the construction work. Its capital was to be provided by the sale of $12,282,000 6 per cent. gold bonds, for the redemption of which a 1 per cent. per annum sinking fund was created, $5,250,000 of 7 per cent. preferred stock and $7,032,000 common stock. Of the common stock 49 per cent. was to be delivered to the Government of Ecuador and 51 per cent. to Harman and his associates. The Government was to guarantee the principal and interest on the bonds by a lien on the receipts of the Custom House, subject to prior liens amounting to about $52,000.

The bondholders received a first mortgage on the railway, but it was agreed that after the company had operated the line for seventy-five years it was to hand it over to the Ecuadorian Government free from all incumbrances.

Harman and his associates organized the Guayaquil & Quito Railway Company under the laws of New Jersey, with the United States Mortgage and Trust Company as trustee for the bondholders. By an agreement on Sept. 30, 1908, the interest on the bonds was reduced to 5 per cent., and it was arranged that the holders of the prior lien bonds should have a $211,260 preferential claim on the railway as well as on the customs.

Mr. Hewitt holds $50,000 of the first mortgage bonds, and he complains that since 1907 interest has been paid irregularly. He says that since 1912 nothing has been paid on the bonds or to the sinking fund, and adds that the Government of Ecuador has made no deposits of customs receipts since 1910.

The reason why there have been none of these deposits, Mr. Hewitt states in his complaint, is that in December, 1910, the Government of Ecuador became financially embarrassed and applied to Speyer & Co. and other bankers for help. It obtained from them a loan of $1,500,000 on 6 per cent. treasury certificates redeemable in twelve months, and appointed Speyer & Co. fiscal agents for Ecuador. The customs receipts then went to meet these treasury certificates, and as a result the railroad bondholders protested. Consequently Speyer & Co., it is contended, agreed on April 11, 1911, to deposit in a separate account all they received from the customs duties, and undertook to make no withdrawals therefrom without six months' notice.

Mr. Hewitt complains that Speyer & Co. announced in October that they would distribute this customs fund yesterday among the participants in the loan to the Ecuadorian Government. This distribution, Mr. Hewitt maintains, would be a violation of the rights of the Guayaquil & Quito bondholders, and he asks the court to order that the fund be held in trust for the benefit of the bondholders.

In granting the temporary injunction yesterday, Judge Hough set down the argument for the contested motions for Monday afternoon.

SEEKS WHITMAN; ARRESTED.

Providence Boy Wanted Governor's Aid in Cashing Checks.

A boy in short trousers approached Detective Francis McGee of the Fourth Branch Bureau at 125th Street and Manhattan Avenue yesterday afternoon and asked where he could find Governor Whitman. When questioned he said a man employed as a shipping clerk by S. C. Williams & Co. of Providence, R. I., had sent him to this city to have some checks cashed, giving him the money to pay his fare here and back. He said he had gone to the Merchants' National Bank, on which one of the checks was drawn, and was told that the check was all right, but that he would have to prove his identity. He said he thought Governor Whitman could help him get the checks cashed.

The boy said he was Harold McGuin, 16 years old, of Willard Street, Providence. Four checks, totaling $112, were found in his possession, two drawn to the order of George F. Barkander, Providence, and the other two to S. C. Williams & Co. Magistrate Deuel in Washington Heights Court held him on the charge of being a fugitive from justice until the Providence officials could be heard from.

TUCKERTON RADIO IN COURT.

French Company Seeks to Enforce Contract with German Concern.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—The litigation between French and German interests about the wireless station at Tuckerton was argued in the Court of Errors here today on appeal from the decision of Vice Chancellor Stevens in the Court of Chancery.

The complainants are the United States Service Corporation, Hochfrequenze Mashinen Aktiengesellschaft für Drahtlose Telegraphie, Rudolph Goldschmidt, and Emil E. Mayer. They are appealing from the decree ordering them to live up to a contract to sell the plant and its patents to the Compagnie Universelle de Telegraphie et de Telephonie Sans Fils, a corporation of France.

The agreement was made in Paris on Sept. 30, 1912, and the French concern avers that the contract also included the station at Eilvese, Germany. Now that the two nations are at war, the German company desires to retain control of the two plants.

Samuel Untermyer and Robert H. McCarter represent the German firm in the suit, while the French company's counsel are George Zabriskie and Henry G. Gray of New York and John R. Hardin of Newark.

After hearing the argument the Court of Errors reserved decision. The complainants contended that to give the French company control would not only cut Germany off from communication with this hemisphere, but also would be against the interests of the United States, which depends on the wireless station to communicate with its Ambassador at Berlin.

The defendant concern submitted that because the two countries were at war was no reason why the New Jersey court should not satisfy its rights from the facts of the bill. It asked that the Chancery opinion be affirmed.

WATSON ON TRIAL.

Defends His Attacks on the Roman Catholic Church.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 26.—Thomas E. Watson, once the Populist nominee for President, was placed on trial in the Federal Court here today charged with sending obscene matter through the mails in periodicals published at Thomson, Ga., of which he is editor. Selection of a jury was completed, and the first witness was on the stand when court adjourned until tomorrow.

The matter complained of occurred in a series of articles attacking the Roman Catholic Church. Watson, who as a member of the Georgia bar acted as his own chief counsel, demurred to the indictment when the case was called, but was overruled.

Watson, outlining the defense, took the view that his purpose in publishing the articles should be taken into consideration. He declared his purpose was of the highest, and that he was fighting, as he had been "for seven years, the fight that Luther, John Knox, and others made against the Roman Catholic Church."

J. M. Barnes, former Postmaster at Thomson, was the only witness examined. Barnes testified that the issues of Watson's publications containing the alleged obscene matter were mailed during 1911 and 1912.
